

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

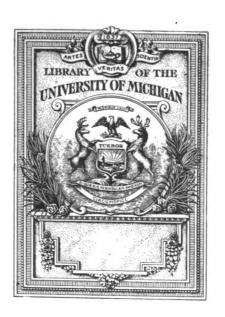

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

TRADE AND LITERARY GOSSIP.

AMSTERDAM. - Mr. Fred. Muller announces the sale by auction on the 17th January, and seven following days, of the library of Mr. J. Van Lennep. The catalogue shows that the library is a large and valuable one, but naturally the books are mostly Dutch, a language which unfortunately is not much studied in this country.

With the old year Mr. John Churchill, the eminent medical publisher of New Burlington Street, retired from the firm, and is succeeded by his two sons, who will trade as J. and A. Churchill. Mr. Churchill has issued the following circular:—"In the year 1816 I was apprenticed to Messrs, Cox and Son, medical booksellers, in Southwark. The house of business was immediately adjoining Guy's and St. Thomas's Hospitals, and became the daily resort of the lecturers and numerous students of the schools; I thus early in life became known to the celebrated men of the day, little anticipating that eventually I should become the publisher of Guy's and St. Thomas's Hospital Reports, and of so large a proportion of the works issued from the medical press." After fifty-five years' active and intimate association with your profession, I see it my duty to retire into private life. Be my future days few or many, I shall ever retain a lively sense of the many friendships I have formed and of the unvarying proofs of confidence and regard shown to me through so long a series of years. My pathway of life has been a happy one, bringing me into daily correspondence with the ditte of the profession, and united with them in promoting the interests of science and literature, while the success of my many publications has both gratified and amply rewarded my exertions. My sons, John and Augustus Churchill, have been eight years associated with me. I may be influenced by a father's feelings, but I believe I can honestly state that, by education, earnest purpose in the fulfilment of duty, a high sense of integrity guiding and regulating their transactions, they will be found worthy of your confidence, and thus maintain the character of the house whose reputation and business transactions have extended to all parts of the world." We are sure that all our readers will unite with us in wishing Mr. Churchill many years' enjoyment of the competence which he has so industriously acquired.

Mr. Holmes informs us that he has recently transferred Mr. Davidson's business, Broad Street, Reading, to Mr. G. Crosby, who for thirty years was in business at Scarborough, and till recently proprietor of the Scarborough Mercury. Mr. Waller's business, 10, Manor Terrace, Kilburn, to Mr. Armstrong, Malvern Terrace, Kilburn Park. Mr. Bone's business, Hammersmith, to Mr. Brown, late of Swansea. Mr. Perkins, stationer, Upper Holloway, to Miss Hill, late of Lisson Grove. Mr. Sheppard, printer, Luton, together with the Luton Advertiser, to Mr. Dixon, late of Barrow in Furness, Lancashire.

THE ST. BRIDE'S PRESS .- Mr. Moody having retired from the firm, it will in future be carried on by Mr. Plackett, under the style of Plackett BIRMINGHAM. Mrs. Sackett having changed her name, has sold her interest in the business to who is fast making the establishtreet the resort of book buyers the midland counties.

The business of Mr. referred to Mr. D. T. the management

EXETER.—We are informed by Mr. Gray that Messrs. Ensor, of Bristol, having combined their business with the South Devon Printing Company, the business will in future be carried on as the Devon and Somerset Steam Printing Company, NOTTINGHAM. - Mr. G. H. Shepherd, Long Row, has taken his brother, Mr. F. H., into partnership, and the firm will in future trade as Shepherd Brothers.

THE BRITISH MUSEUM.—By Act of Parliament the Library of the British Museum is entitled to a copy of every book published in the United Kingdom; it should be sent without asking. If by any oversight it be not sent, the polite custom of the National Institution is to purchase a copy at full retail price, and then summon the publisher for the amount, and the magistrate thereupon delivers a homily upon the unpardonable sin, and fines the delinquent the value of the book, and adds a sum of fifty shillings or so for costs.

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT.—In the Galaxy, a New York magazine, ably edited by Messrs, Church, there appears an interesting article in favour of an international copyright treaty, written by Mr. C. A. Bristed, Secretary of the International Copyright Association, an association such as we should endeavour to form on this side of the world. The Galaxy is deserving of notice on account of its being an entirely American magazine; it steals nothing, borrows nothing, buys nothing from England, yet it is completely English—the same spirit which rules against stealing or taking from English authors, forbids the entrance into its pages of aught that an educated sensible American would object to; therefore, difference of latitude being taken into consideration, there is nothing which would offend the common sense of an Englishman.

The Collected Works of David. Such is the title of a work which the Galaxy for December says is yet to be written: "The Writings of David, some time King of Israel, now first Collected, together with some Account of the Author, and a Notice of the Times in which he Lived." It certainly does appear strange that these writings and sayings of the king-poet have never been collected from Kings and Chronicles, from Psalms, and from the Septuagint, chronologically arranged and annotated, and interwoven with his life. There is an article upon the subject in the Galaxy, in which the chief events of David's life up to the time when he became king of Israel, are noted in such a manner that we read the memoir with as much avidity as though the matter were entirely new.

BOOKSELLERS IGNORED. - A correspondent writes :- "Mr. Elliot Stock has recently issued a circular to ministers, offering to supply them with 'Cramp's Baptist History,' the new 5s. edition, at a reduced price, and at a graduated scale, according to number. 12 copies are offered at 3s. 8d., and with 12 a 13th is given as a presentation copy; so that he really offers 13 copies for Now my London bookseller-one of the oldest and most respectable firms-cannot supply at a less price than 13 as 12 at 3s. 10d., and commission, which equals 13 copies for 50s. 4d. Carriage is not calculated in either case. The injustice done, both to the trade in London and the country bookseller is so great that I feel the matter is deserving of public comment."

The Week's News is the title of a new weekly newspaper, the first number of which is to appear on the 7th inst. It will be published by Messrs. H. S. King and Co. (late Smith, Elder, and Co.), who are already proprietors of the "Overland Mail" and the "Homeward Mail."

The "Adornal Edition" of the Globe Library. Under this designation, Messrs. Macmillan and Co. have issued the volumes of their excellent Globe Library in gilt edges and in ornamental dath bindings. It was, no doubt, frequently objected to these books that, good as they are, they were not so acceptable for presentation as some inferior but more showy volumes, and the polashers wisely taking the hint, have issued the "atomed edition."

MM. Erckmann-Chatrian.—Messrs. Smith, Ebler and Co., have published Shilling Illustrated itimons of "The Conscript," "The Blockade," "Waterloo," and "The Invasion"—to the last they have added portraits of the joint authors. Both M. Erckmann and M. Chatrian, are, we believe, where clerks at the Paris station of the Strasbourg malany, and are both natives of Alsace. If their sany, and illustrate those of their fellow countrymen, it will clearly be some time before they accussion themselves to the Prussian rule.

COPYRIGHT LAW.—Clowes versus Hogg. 1860rt Sr R. Malins.) This was an application for an injunction, on the part of Messrs. Clowes and Sons, to restrain the defendant from pub-lishing a periodical called English Society, with corer similar to or colourably differing from the plaintiffs' periodical, called London Society. The periodical called London Society was originally mojected by the defendant, James Hogg, and continued for several years. On the 23rd June, 1863. Messrs. Hogg, being indebted to Messrs. Wrgley, mortgaged London Society to them in order to secure the sum of £2,000. The deed custained a covenant by the mortgagors that during the subsistence of the debt "they would not in any case advertise or announce any intention to discontinue it, nor do, nor willingly after, anything to injure, or tend to injure, the and publication, or to decrease its value. By n wienture dated the 5th August, 1865, the telesciant mortgaged London Society to secure a The bill stated that the defendant susceptently executed a deed under the Bankmucy Act. The bill stated that recently the rounger defendant issued the following announcement :- "New Shilling Magazine, English Society. A Monthly Illustrated Magazine of Amusement and kecreation. Conducted by James Hogg, ix founder of London Society, and sole Editor of that work until September, 1870." This was himsed by a preface and prospectus, containing tas cassage—"English Society, in short, will be at that I made London Society, and something more, as its wider title purports." The defendant also published a Christmas number. The Vice hancellor said the plaintiffs were well known in Loadon. In 1863 the form of the publication was changed to its present form. The Messrs. Hecc mortgaged the property to Messrs. Wrigley The defendant received notice that at he end of three months he would be dismissed. Mr. Hogg was extremely dissatisfied with his conical, and was very angry. It was to his treds he superintended the publication of the August number. The Vice Chancellor then commented on the evidence, and said he was conniced that Mr. Hogg's intention was to make the public believe that it was the old publication in a ten form. The form was the same, and the cover very similar. The Vice Chancellor said that there might be some difference; but, on the whole case, thought the plaintiffs entitled to relief. The conduct of the defendant had not been fair, and there would be an injunction. - Standard.

THE HOUSE OF J. R. OSGOOD & Co., BOSTON. In 1832 John Allen and William D. Ticknor purchased the business of Carter and Hendee, then one of the principal publishing and book-selling firms of Boston (U. S. A.). They formed a co-partnership under the name of Allen and Ticknor, which lasted only two years, Mr. Allen retiring in 1834. Mr. Ticknor conducted the business in his own name from 1834 to 1843 in the "Old Corner Bookstore," which has since become so well known. In the year 1843 he admitted to partnership John Reed, jun. (son of Lieut.-Governor Reed, of Massachusetts), and James T. Fields, who, at the time when Mr. Ticknor purchased the business, was a boy of thirteen, in the store of Carter and Hendee, and who had since remained in the establishment. The business style of the firm was William D. Ticknor and Co., under which name the firm "traded," to use the English expression, until 1860. For imprints upon the title-pages of their books, however, the style of Ticknor, Reed, and Fields, was adopted after some years, and continued so long as Mr. Reed remained a partner. After his retirement, which occurred in 1854, the style of Ticknor and Fields was used, William D. Ticknor and James T. Fields being the only partners. The firm was thus constituted for ten years, when, by the death of Mr. Ticknor in 1864, it was dissolved. At this time Mr. Fields re-organized the firm by admitting to partnership Howard M. Ticknor, the eldest son of his late partner, and James R. Osgood, who entered the establishment as clerk in 1855. Two years later, establishment as clerk in 1855. Two years later, in January, 1866, John S. Clark, who had been connected with the business for eleven years, became a partner. The style of the firm continued as Ticknor and Fields until October 1868, when Howard M. Ticknor withdrew. This left the business to Mr. Fields, Mr. Osgood, and Mr. Clark, who adopted the style of Fields, Osgood and Co. In May, 1870, Benjamin H. Ticknor, second son of the founder of the house, who had been clerk in the establishment for nearly ten years, was admitted as a partner.

By the retirement of Mr. Fields on January 2nd, 1871, after nearly forty years of active service, the business passes into the hands of Mr. Osgood, Mr. Clark, and Mr. Ticknor, all of whom have received their business education in the house, the two former having served in it as clerks and partners for fifteen years, and the latter for ten years.

The business of Allen and Ticknor, and of William D. Ticknor, prior to 1840, was not large. It consisted mainly of educational and medical publications, with which were united a few works of general literature. The first substantial success of the firm was gained in 1842, by the re-publication of Tennyson's Poems. A direct relation was at once established between the firm and Mr. Tennyson, which has continued to the present day. The publication of Tennyson was gradually Hawthorne, Longfellow, Lowell, and Holmes, and notably the works of De Quincey, which Mr. Fields collected and edited from the various English periodicals where they had appeared. From 1850 to the present time, the catalogue of the firm has been constantly increasing in extent and importance, until it now embraces the works of many of the best and most popular authors on both sides of the Atlantic. The names of Longfellow, Hawthorne, Bryant, Whittier, Emerson, Lowell, Holmes, Agassiz, Mrs. Stowe, Miss Phelps, and many others attest the strength of the list in American literature. The firm h always earnestly advocated the passage of

In 1676, twenty years subsequent to Chantler's death, Richard Randell and Peter Maplisden (who were in business in 1677) were made free of the Stationers' Company (the ordinary of the Upholsterers, Tinplate Workers, and Stationers, according to Brand, being dated 1675). In the year of their admission to the company they had also been admitted to the freedom of the town:—Maplisden as a stationer, but Randell's freedom was personal. They occur as Booksellers "at the Bridge Foot" in 1682 (Richard Randell being still in business in 1710, when he was publishing a sermon by the Vicar of Newcastle, Dr. Nathaniel Ellison). Joseph Hall also occurs as Bookseller on the Bridge in 1683; and our readers may remember that the 65th number of the Newcastle Grazette, or Northern Courant, published in December, 1710, was printed in "Gateside," by J. Saywell, "for J. Button, bookseller on the bridge" (a correspondent of Daniel Defoe).

In 1739 John Linn was vending books "upon the middle of Tyne bridge," at the sign of the "Locke's Head," Robert Akenhead, sen., was also there as a bookseller in 1751, with the "Bible and Crown" over his doorway; and in 1753 James Fleming was carrying on the same business at "The Bible under the Magazine Gate.'

Books and stationery were the staple commodities of the tradesmen on old Tyne Bridge; but Daffy's Elixir, Godfrey's Cordial, Anderson's Scots Pills, the True Spirits of Scurvy Grass, Indian Ink, and Fiddle Strings figure among the miscellanies of the bibliopoles of the period.

There was a considerable amount of literary enterprise on the Tyne in those early days of the Georges. John Gooding, "on the Side," kept his press in active motion. He was printing the first number of his Newcastle General Magazine at the close of 1746, to be issued at the beginning of 1747: for "too long," said the preface, "had the northern climes been deprived of a repository of learning; too long had those geniuses that now began to shine been consealed in darkness for want of a proper channel to convey their productions into light." The first volume was printed in quarto, and its successors in 8vo, down to 1760—when the monthly magazine shared the too common fate of such provincial adventures, and the "geniuses" of the North were again "consealed in darkness." Gooding, in January, 1751, announced the publication of Blenhassett's "History of England," from landing of the Pheenecians to death of George 1.; and in his list of subscribers were no less than eight Newcastle booksellers, one of whom was Martin Bryson.

Bryson had been admitted to the freedom of the town in 1725, and of the Stationers' Company in 1726: and we all know from Allan Ramsay's lines, in what part of the town Martin had his bookshop.

The two booksellers were friends and correspondents; and the author of the Gentle Shepherd, writing one day from Edinburgh to his brother craft, committed his letter to the post with the rhyming address—

"To Martin Bryson on Tyne Brigg, An upright, downright, honest Whig."

Bryson's shop, as the poet tells us, was on the bridge; and we also learn, from the record of a calamity which overtook him, at what point of the old viaduct he was stationed. He was from home on the 24th of July, 750; and about 11 o'clock at night, a fire broke out in a cellar warehouse at the foot of an entry in the Close adjoining the bridge. There was no wharf or quay; the clustered buildings overhung the river, and access to the fire was both difficult and dangerous. Bryson's house and stores were over the cellar; and his household had hardly escaped from their beds, before the floors fell into the flames beneath. Half a score of houses in the locality, and many warehouses, perished in the fire—which was one of the most destructive conflagrations that had ever occurred in Newcastle.

At what date Martin Bryson opened his bookshop in Newcastle, we cannot say; but on the title-page of a collection of "Occasional Hymns," made by Benjamin Bennet, minister of the congregation worshipping in the Close, "without the walls" (then projecting a removal to Hanover Square), the imprint ocurs—"Printed by John White" (founder of the Newarth Corrant), "for J. Button, R. Akenhead, and M. Bryson, booksellers on Tyne Bridge—1722." It is interesting also to note, that the first infirmary senson (that of 1751) was published by the booksellers of the bridge, James Fleming, and M. Bryson, and W. Chamley.

CORRESPONDENCE.

"LONDON SOCIETY," AND "ENGLISH SOCIETY."

Clowes v. Hogg.

To the Editor of "The Bookseller."

SIR, -As this case is exciting some interest in the trade, and the variation in the newspaper reports on the motion leaves several important points in obscurity, allow me to note some things from the evidence and hearing before Vice-Chancellor Malins, on the 17th current. Further proceedings will make matters clearer, but in the meantime the following is essential to understand the exact position:—I. Without entering into the history of the proprietary changes in "London Society" (originally my own independent property, Society: (originally my own independent property, before it became a partnership asset), it is a fact, that until the 26th day of July last, I had power to retake the property wholly into my own hands by paying out Messrs. Clowes and Wrigley. 2. The Court considered that if we had been "independent traders," there would have been "very dependent traders," there would have been "very great difficulty" in doing anything against the new work on the score of similarity. The old covenant with "London Society" was what com-plicated matters with me. 3. His Honour, in arriving at a decision, said that he was desirous to make no order in the case if the matter could stand over until I should suggest to him some suitable alteration in the cover for the February number of My counsel, however, thought it better to take a definite order against February, in order that I might appeal on the covenant, &c., to the Lords Justices. Accordingly, I have taken the preliminary steps, and in due time, I trust, will be able to show, as I have all along been advised that I can, on a full hearing, that the new arrangements under which Messrs. Clowes, Messrs. Wrigley, and myself conducted "London Society" here as a joint enterprise, completely swept away the old deed and all its covenants. Meantime, waiving the privilege accorded me by his Honour waiving the privilege accorded me by his rionour of issuing my January number with the cover as originally proposed, I have made an alteration at once, without waiting till February—hence the publication of my first number of "English Society in Town AND COUNTRY" to-day, instead of before Christmas. of before Christmas I am, &c., 217, Piccadilly, W. JAMES HOGG.

OBITUARY.

Dec. 25.—Aged 28, at the residence of his father, No. 12, Highbury Place, Mr. Samuel Spicer, of the firm of Spicer Brothers, wholesale stationers, New Bridge Street, Blackfriars. The deceased, the fourth son of Mr. William Revel Spicer, was at an early age introduced into the business, where, from his obliging manner and uniform good temper and kindness of disposition, he soon became a general favourite. In 1867 he was, with a brother and two cousins, admitted partner, and a long and honourable career was predicted for him; but these hopes were cut short by an attack of apoplexy, which came on without any premonitory symptoms, and in three hours carried him off.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE EARLY ENGLISH TEXT SOCIETY.

I. The First Boke of the Introduction of Knowledge, made by Andrew Borde; A Compendious Regyment, or a Dyetary of Helth, compiled by Andrew Borde; and Barnes in the Defence of the Berde, Answeryinge the treatyse of Doctor Borde upon Berdes. Edited, with a Life, &c., by F. J. Furnivall, M.A. (Trübner and Co.)

II. The Bruce. Compiled by Master John Barbour, Archdeacon of Aberdeen, A. D. 1375. With a Preface, Notes, and a Glossarial Index by the Rev. W. W. Skeat, M.A. (Trübner and Co.)

THE Early English Text Society has done valuable service in printing works full of interest and deserving recognition, but which are not attrac-tive enough to demand publication in the ordinary way. Such a work is the first on our list. Andrew Borde's "Dyetary," and the same author's "Introduction of Knowledge," are highly quaint productions, valuable at once as literary land. marks, and as trustworthy evidences of the state of knowledge at the time they were composed. The "Dyetary," according to the editor, who, we believe, is justified in his conclusion, was first published in 1542, and dedicated to the "army potent Prynce, valyaunt Lorde Thomas Duke of Northfolche." The "Introduction," meant mainly to be a work on medicine (though the first book, which is the most amusing, is one of travels), was not issued till 1547, or later, and dedicated to "the right honorable and gracious lady Mary, doughter of our souverayne Lord kynge Henry the eyghtt." Both are highly entertaining. The latter, designed to teach a man "to speak parte of al maner of languages; and by it one maye knowe the usage and fashyon of all maner of regions," &c., gives us a clear insight into the views entertained by educated and intelligent men during the reign of Henry the Eighth regarding during the reign of Henry the Lighth regarding the inhabitants of other countries, and the disposition of their own. There are thirty-nine chapters, each of which treats of a separate country or region; and the information given, mostly conveyed in quaint terms which often reach wit, is curious in many particulars. will most strike the reader is the fact that the character popularly assigned in our own day to the various nations is just what was assigned them in the middle of the sixteenth century. To take Wales middle of the sixteenth century. To take Wales for instance. Even then Taffy had the reputation, the origin of which it is impossible to discover, of being a thief:

"I am a Welshman, and do dwel in Wales, I have loved to serche boudgets and look in males; I love not to labour, nor to delve, nor to dyg, My fyngers be lymed lyke a lyme twig" are the words in which the second chapter begins. On Scotland and the Scotch, and of Ireland and the Irish, Mr. Andrew Borde, "of Physyche, doctor," is equally severe. He was a true Englishman and a patriot, and he does not seem to have considered any foreign country to be more excellent than his own, or any men braver, or women more lovely, than the men and women of England. Dr. Borde's treatment of the subject is curious. He begins in verse and concludes his information in prose, and gives his reader the opportunity of studying the costume appropriate to each people by means of a woodcut at the head of his several chapters. It is altogether a work of more than average interest. "The Dyetary" is fully explained by its title. In it the doctor shows where a man should build and order his house for the health of his body; how he should order himself in his sleeping and watching and in his apparel; how he should eat and drink; what flesh, fish, fowl, and fruits are good for him; and how he should be treated in the several diseases to which he is liable. The work is, in fact, a domestic medicine book, and in some respects the precepts of our old author are fully as reasonable as those of any modern physician. "The Defence of the Berde," by Barnes, forms a good supplement to the other two parts of the volume, and by many will be read with more interest than either. The editor supplies a long rambling preface, which he calls "Forewords," and in which he concerns himself with innumerable topics which have no relation to the text. His hope that "the furious waves of French vain-glory, driven by the guilty ambition of a conscienceless adventurer against the barrier of German patriotism," may be, are misplaced in a work of this sort. One third of the volume is occupied by the editor.

Of "The Bruce" there is now no occasion to

Of "The Bruce" there is now no occasion to speak. The poem is well-known, and as the editor's preface, notes, and glossarial index are retained till the second part is issued, we reserve our notice for the present, merely remarking that Mr. Skeat seems to have spent much conscientious labour on the text of what is already before us.

The Earthward Pilgrimage. By Moncure D. Conway. (J. C. Hotten.)—The social, religious, and intellectual questions of the day which are agitating the minds of advanced thinkers form the subject of this volume, and are all treated with wisdom and frankness. Mr. Conway, who is an American, and a lay preacher, occupying, we believe, the Unitarian pulpit formerly filled by Mr. W. J. Fox in Finsbury, is free from sectarian bias, and in the discussion of the texts he has chosen as themes, he speaks without acrimony of the opinions and beliefs of those from whom he disagrees. The essays differ in length and importance. There is variety, and yet the key in which the first is pitched remains the same through the whole of them. In style, as well as in thought, there is an echo of Emerson; and sometimes we can detect a form of expression employed, and a view of morals propounded, which we have already seen Mr. Conway is not free used by other writers. from mannerism. He selects a topic, most generally introduced by an anecdote, and then, after formal introduction, proceeds to give his opinions, as if they were those of some one else. What he says, however, is always interesting. It is likely to startle the orthodox and the conservative, whether in religion or social morals; but the most rigid believer in things as they are must admit that he is never offensive in his manner, and that what he advances has in it a great degree of truth. Sometimes the truth is half truth only, and sometimes it is truth only indicated. But every unprejudiced reader must recognize the sincerity of the preacher, and admire the earnestness of his belief. Of the twenty-two chapters there is not one which does not contain something to stimulate thought, even when it does not excite agreement and admiration. "The Church Auction," a quiet satire on an auction-room scene, where some "Cures of Souls" were to be sold; "St. Albans," a calm remonstrance, by an outsider, on High Church practices; "An Old Shrine," a paper in which the writer records his feelings at Canterbury on the consecration of a new archbishop; "Bunhill Fields," a contrast between the treatment bestowed upon dead heroes and living; "The Old Deborah's Drawer. By Eleanor Grace O'Reilly, (Bell and Daldy.)—Here is a real story, a genuine novelette, charmingly written, and as charmingly illustrated; a story with possible incidents and natural conversations—just the story, indeed, which will be read with delight by little ladies in quiet homes on dull wintry afternoons. It is needless to tell how little Ave found a host of pretty fairy tales in Aunt Deborah's Drawer, or how the tales themselves are connected with the fortunes of Miss Meek and a strange gentleman from foreign parts; or how all the episodes fall into proper order at last, and the hero and heroine "live happily ever after." But if any one wants to make a birthday gift to an intelligent child, why here is the volume,—square, compact, and attractive.

The Great Invasion of 1813-14; or, After Leipzig. By MM. Erckmann-Chatrian. (Ward, Lock, and Tyler.)—After Leipzig is a phrase terribly suggestive to France. Then it was that the nation began to suffer what hitherto other nations had suffered. Alsace and Lorraine were the first to feel the effects of invasion by the enemy; and it was Alsace and Lorraine that maintained the latest resistance. It is idle to inform the reader that MM. Erckmann and Chatrian have made themselves the special historians of the provinces during the latter days of Napoleon I. "Conscript," "The Blockade," "Waterloo, forming a series of tales in which the events of the time are recorded with consummate effect,are known throughout the world as some of the most fascinating narratives ever penned. "The Great Invasion" is worthy to rank with those works we have named. It is a story of the entry of the allied forces into Alsace and Lorraine after Leipzig. Jean Claude Hullin, a shoemaker, an old volunteer of '92, is the chief character; and Charmes, a village in the Vosges and its neighbourhood, is the scene. To the left of the village, on a high mountain, stand the ruins of the ancient castle of Falkenstein; to the right, on the hillside, is seen the farm of Bois-de-Chenes, with its granaries, stables, and out-houses; not far off is the little fortress to be for ever famous—Phalsburg. The authors, with great skill, bring their characters on the scene, limited by the places mentioned; and the progress of the invasion may be learnt by its effect on them. At first there is buoyancy and surprise at the temerity of the enemy in daring to approach France; then there is uneasiness not unmixed with hope; then there is acceptance of their lot; then, for a time, terror and physical sufferings of all kinds; then, finally, deliverance. All these phases are admirably marked by the authors, some of whose portraitures in this volume equal in execution that of our old friend Moses himself, by the same hands. The incidents are painted with masterly touches; and some of the descriptive passages are unsurpassed for their clearness and the interest they excite. We seem, whilst reading, to be among the personages, and to share in all their hopes, and love and of their hopes, and the share in all their hopes. and fears, and sufferings. A certain Yegof, a madman wandering about the country with a tin crown on his head and a sceptre in his hand, and who believes himself to be emperor of Australasia and Polynesia. is well conceived and drawn. With and Polynesia, is well conceived and drawn. his raven, which always accompanied him, he was looked upon, at the beginning of the invasion, as a prophet of evil. This, in truth, he became; and his end was brought about for his teaching. As every tale should, this ends happily with the wedding of the adopted daughter of our Hullin and her betrothed, Gaspard, son of the brave Catherine, owner of Bois-de-Chenes, who had been separated from her by his duties as a conscript. Beacons and Patterns; or, Lessons for Young Men. By Rev. W. Landels, D.D. (Hodder and Stoughton.)—Covetousness, rash impulse, rebellion to authority, scepticism, instability of purpose, and religious instincts wrongly directed, are here illustrated by the examples of Balaam, Esau, Absalom, Solomon, Reuben, and Micah; while for patterns of faith and steadfastness under trial, Naaman, Blind Bartimæus, and others : each of the twelve chapters being written in the easy, persuasive style observable in Dr. Landels' previous work

ANNUALS AND SERIALS. The Leisure Hour commences its new part with one of the best and most effective illustrations we have ever seen; it is a woodcut printed on a tone, but as clear, distinct, and true to life as a photo-graph. The contents of the part are varied and interesting, and include the first portion of an account of the editor's visit to the United States last autumn, and although we get no further with him than the landing-dock at New York, he has given us so life-like a narrative of the doings on board the "Scotia" that we are anxious to know how he got on ashore. John Timbs commences an autobiography which takes us back to the year 1806. Altogether, the magazine helps us to pass a leisure hour in a cheerful and profitable manner.

The Contemporary Review.—In this independent Review subjects are handled with a freedom of treatment from which more strait-laced journals would shrink. Prayers for the Dead, for instance, is one of the articles in this month's number; it is by Mr. Malcolm MacColl, and contains quotations from learned divines favouring his own views, sufficient to show that opinions in favour of the practice of praying for the dead have been held by men who rank as high in point of theological attainments as the present Archbishop of Canterbury. Turning to politics, we have some stirring thoughts on "Imperial Federalism," by the author of "Ginx's Baby," and several other subjects, any one of which will give subject matter enough to occupy a whole day's thoughts: and this can be said of very few popular magazines.

St. Pauls contrives a double debt to pay: it is a magazine in which stored up are articles by George MacDonald, the Author of "John Halifax," Sudan: Daba!! Mr. T. A. Tellone Days Green Sydney Dobell, Mr. T. A. Trollope, Dora Green-well, Bessie Parkes Belloc, and others; and it carries the dreary story of Ralph the Heir on its back.

The Catholic Directory (Burns, Oates, and Co.) is not merely a collection of names and addresses, similar to our Clergy List: but a complete and comprehensive cyclopædia of the Roman Catholic Church in the British Empire, not of ecclesias-tics merely, but of the Church. Moreover, it contains all that is usually found in secular almanacks, and is compiled in an attractive, intelligible To those who are not in the Church, much of the matter contained in the Directory will be of little interest; but many persons will be glad to know that it contains a carefully written account of the Vatican Council, including a diary of the proceedings and record of the divisions, and an authorized translation of the new constitutions, canons and dogmas. We are not sure that any translation, duly authorized, has been given before this.

The Colonial Church Chronicle will in future be published by Messrs. J. and C. Mozley. Messrs. Mozley have also commenced a new magazine, Work and Play, intended for those engaged in night schools.

The Penny Post. Vol. for 1870. (Parker.)little work continues its mission of usefulness, affording a large amount of interesting and instructive reading to young Churchmen. Not the least instructive portion of the work is that which is set apart for correspondence-a sort of Notes and Queries for Churchmen.

Parker's Church Calendar for 1871 contains the daily Tables of Lessons, and other Church matters, complete lists of the dignified clergy, and a large amount of information respecting the Church of England in Great Britain, Ireland, the Colonies, and the United States, with trustworthy statistics of the Universities and Public Schools.

The Parliamentary Buff Book (Effingham Wilson contains a record of all the divisions of the House of Commons during the last session, and that which we desire to recommend to the notice of all constituencies-a list of the times when hon, members went into the lobby. We do not wish all members to act as Mr. Candlish, the member for Sunderland, who, probably having no other mode of amusing himself, speaks and votes on all occasions, and only represents himself-but when we find London misrepresented by a Jew baron who can only make it convenient to be present at 22 out of the 244 divisions, we think it high time that one who more truly represents the citizens should be found. Seven members did not vote at all. For one of them, Mr. Bright, a reasonable excuse can be found. This Buff Book, however, shows that a good deal of reform is yet needed in the Reformed House of Commons.

The St. Bride's Scribbling Diary (Educational Trading Company) has the speciality of being done up in cloth, and that it contains two very good maps, one of London and another of the environs.

Ewins's Shilling Folio Diary (S. D. Ewins, Jr. and Co.), like the preceding, is well printed, and is interleaved with blotting. It would interest members of the Statistical Society if any one would take the trouble to compute the quantities of writing and blotting paper consumed, and the number of hands employed in the manufacture of scribbling diaries, especially if he could further ascertain that any one had ever made a profit out of their publication.

The Australian Hand-Book and Almanack (Gordon and Gotch) is an excellent compendium of Australian information, and should be procured by every person contemplating a visit to that part of the world, or interested therein.

Lang's Magazine Books (Marlborough) may be recommended to all booksellers selling magazines who wish to keep their orders for continuation, and an account of their delivery, in a clear and systematic manner. Like all other good plans, this is simple, and requires hardly a minute's

The City Press Almanack (Collingridge), like the paper it belongs to, is a model of what a local paper or almanack should be. Every town in the kingdom ought to have its local almanack or appendix. For a sheet almanack, no better plan could be followed than that of the City Press.

The Blue Book of the Borough of Birmingham contains a vast amount of information respecting the borough and county magistrates, clergy, police, charities, schools, and other local matters, bound up with Whitaker's Almanack.

The Household Record and Annual Domestic Guide (Cassell) contains many useful hints on household matters, but the chief feature is a number of ruled pages cut into an alphabet for the purpose of "recording" when children cut their teeth, and other domestic matters.

d g s BOOKS RECEIVED:—
From Messrs, T. and T. Clark:—Two Volumes of The Ante-Nicene Library, being Vols. 17 and 18 of the Series. They are the Clementina Homilies, the Apostolical Constitutions, in one volume, and the third volume of Tertullian, to which are added the extant works of Victorius and Commodianus.

From Messrs, C. Griffer vol. of the Commodianus.

From Messrs. C. Griffin and Co. we have four more volumes of their re-issue of Bell's Annotated Poets: "Ben Jonson," "Greene and Marlowe," and two collections: I. "Songs from the Dramatists," a collection which was culled with excelent judgment from hundreds of volumes of plays, many of them but little known. 2. "A Collection of Early Ballads, illustrative of History, Traditions, and Customs." It is said that Mr. Bell received fifty pounds a volume for editing this series—if so, it is clear that he conscientiously earned his money.

From Messrs. Longman and Co.:—A Second Edition of The Scriptural Doctrine of Hades, by the Rev. George Bartle, D.D., the first edition of which was noticed in the BOOKSELLER. Also, by the same author, a Third Edition of An Analysis and Exposition of the Church Catechism.

and Exposition of the Universal Calcanism.

From Messrs. Low, Son, and Marston:—Little Pussy Willow, by Harriet Beecher Stowe. Faith Gartney's Girlhood, by the Author of "The Gayworthys," and five series of Children's Picture Pastime, like those introduced by Messrs. Warne. These are to be cut out and mounted. Apparently, they are of Dutch extraction, and fall very far short of Messrs. Warnes in region of Gailwight of the state of Messrs.

short of Messrs. Warne's in point of finish.
From the Publisher, New York:—The Industrial Record for Nov. I, containing a Memoir of Mr. Henry Carey Baird, of Philadelphia, author and publisher. with postrait and publisher, with portrait.

From Messrs. Ward, Lock, and Tyler:—
Beton's British Gazetteer, a shilling feap. volume, printed in small type, containing 568 columns; and, printed in a similar manner, Beeton's Modern Men and Women; or, British Biography from the Accession of George III. to the Present Time; Beton's British Biography, from the Earliest Times to the Accession of George III.; and, uniform with the preceding, a Bible Dictionary, containing two thousand complete articles. Mr. Beeton must be the person we have heard named as the "walking cyclopedia," for the next book upon our table is a Guide to the Stock Exchange and Money Market, with Hints to Investors and Speculators.

From Mr. D. Wilson, Glasgow:—Waverley, the first volume of a cheap issue of the Waverley novels, edited by the Rev. P. Hateley Waddell, LL. D.; with memoir, explanatory notes, and glossary by the Editor; these, with a portrait of Scott, and a vignette of Tully Veolan go far to make the volume one of the cheapest of all the reprints of the great novelist.

MANACK FOR 1871.

The Weekly Dispatch says :-

Whitaker's Almanack still remains beyond all comparison the best work of its class ever published. It seemed to us twelve months ago that this wonderfully cheap volume contained everything that could possibly be included in an almanack, but the indefatigable editor has searched far and wide for fresh features of excellence, until, instead of saying that no library is complete without it, we may fairly assert that any library is complete with it.

"The student of modern history especially needs a knowledge of Geography, because first and last his inquiries will lead him to every quarter of the globe."—ARNOLD.

TEACHERS and STUDENTS alike have long felt the want of a connected Series of Maps, prepared expressly to illustrate the leading events of History, adapted for Schools, and published at a price so moderate as to be brought within the reach of all learners. The object of this Atlas is to supply the deficiency. It is uniform in size and price with the Author's smaller Atlases of Physical and General Geography; and from the scrupulous care bestowed on its production, the Publishers trust that it will be received with the same high favour which has been universally accorded to them.

While the Atlas is specially designed to illustrate British History, and so contains all the names which occur in the best school text-books on that subject, it also serves for a course of Modern European History, in sufficient detail for all ordinary purposes.

Edited by NORMAN MACLEOD, D.D.,

ADDRESS FOR 1871.

What shall we say by way of Prospectus to the Twelfth Volume of Good Words? Not a repetition of what we have said in former Prospectuses; that vould be timed more to all competitors; that might be deceptive. We will supply use that while we shall in no respect relax our efforts to render this Magazoe equal to the best in literary and pictorial merit, we shall, with not less aniety, aim at maintaining the special tone and spirit by which it has been all sing characterized.

The public already know that Good Words does not strive after the imposing the pube already know that Good Words does not strive after the imposing paties of sensation and excitement—to ignobly interest or frivolously amuse; but sets rather to provide the wisest instruction in the pleasantest manner, wibut neglecting to supply wholesome entertainment for every diversity of tase. At starting, we chose a distinctive walk for ourselves, and after a course of cleven years, which gratitude rather than vanity induces us to term singularly formant, it is our ambition to make the Magazine answer more and more to feezy ethepts motto—"Good words are worth much and cost little."

. The Publishers are not in the habit of quoting the opinions of the Press on such a well-known publication as GOOD WORDS, yet the following is such a striking tribute to its worth, that they cannot refrain from citing it here:

if here:—

An ing serials for the educated, there is first of all Good Words—a phenomenon of prividical literature—a phenomenon in its circulation of 130,000 a reach, so that it is known wherever the English tongue is spoken, and was the first hing asked for by the Pitearin Islanders from a ship that lately visited then—a phenomenon in that it gives for sixpence the original thoughts not only if men sho are foremost in the republic of letters, but numbers among its constitutes those who are highest in rank, both in Church and State."—From the Payr on Periodical Literature read at the Dublin Church Congress.

MOUNTAINS and LAKES

ZERLAND AND ITALY. Sixty-four Picturesque Views, in Chromo-lithograph, after Drawings taken from Original Sketches by C. C. PYNE. With a Map of Routes and Descriptive Notes by the Rev. JEROME J. MERCIER. Crown 4to, £2 2s.

Chromo-lithography cannot do more than it has done in Mountains and Lakes of Switzerland and Italy. The 64 Illustrations scattered through the pages strike us, taken altogether, as the most faultless specimens of this art we have seen. Considered as chromo-lithographs, they are an example of the very highest development this method has yet reached: no other process suitable for book-illustration can give so well the light, the colour, the transparency, and the tone of a lovely landscape. Chromo-lithography can be pleasing, effective, and, in many respects, admirable. There has been no slovenliness nor unskilfulsess in this volume; and there is evidence on every page of the pains which have been taken. We should think that many of the illustrations are the result of tining that many of the indistrations are the result of eight or ten printings, and we can say of all of them that they reduce the evils of chromo-lithography to a minimum. He who desires to bestow a Christmas Present will be hard to please if he cannot make his choice among these beautiful works. Had we to choice among inese ocausijus words. Itaa we to choose, either what to give or what to take, we think our choice would fall on the volume of Swiss and Italian Views. It is not dear, and has an extrinsic as well as an intrinsic value, for it shows us how an art, the early growth of which was very unpromising, has at length attained beauty and excellence, and it fixes a standard which that art has now no excuse for falling short of.—The Times, Dec. 21.

another art than his own can bring before us, of

Every one of the autotypes is carefully and admirably done, and they bring before us, as much as | Raffaelle's matchless drawing and sweet angel and Madonna faces.—Times, Dec. 21.

Ready on the 15th January, the New Edition of taining Thirty of the most important of Rembrandt's Etchings, the same size as the originals, from the celebrated Collection in the British Museum. Selected by G. W. REID, Keeper of the Prints and Drawings. With a Life of the Artist and Notes on the Etchings by H. NOEL HUMPHREYS, Author of "Masterpieces of the Early Painters." &c. Imp. quarto, price £3 3s.

That a book of such fac-similes as those before as offers the admirers of a great master who have no thousands to spare, and who yet do not care for valueless and inferior impressions, a chance not to be despised-a chance of bringing into their homes, that is to say into their daily lives, quite enough of his genius to be a continual delight to them, a delight under their hand, which is a very different thing from a delight locked up in a museum. - Times, Dec. 21.

THE LANDSEER GALLERY.

of Autotype Reproductions of Engravings of the celebrated Early Paintings of Sir Edwin Landseer. Imp. quarto, price £2 25:

In the Landseer Gallery we recognize many old frends, and some that are not so familiar; the auto-types are excellent, and miss nothing that autotypes Times, Dec. 21.

can give. There can be no question that this process has already proved itself a valuable handmaid to art.

graphic Reproductions of Rare Engravings after Titian in the British Museum, by STEPHEN THOMPSON. With Descriptions by G. W. REID, Keeper of the Prints and Drawings in the British Museum. Large folio, half-bound, price £5 5s.

These 17 exquisite photographs deserve the very highest comparative praise; their absolute value is such that he who knows none of the glories of Titian may, even in the dark glass of photography, catch a timpse of them sufficient to stir his soul, while he who knows some of them will find a representation of others such as he has never yet seen, conveying as much of the beauty of each as he can hope for in default of the great original itself .- Times, Dec. 21.

* This edition deserves special attention, from the fact that it is the only correct one that has been printed since the time of Defoe. By the kindness of Mr. Lee a copy of the rare and valuable original, in 3 vols., was deposited with the printers during the progress of the work, and all those alterations and blunders which have been discovered in every ecent edition are in this case avoided. There is a living artist better adapted to the task of illusrating "Crusoe" than Ernest Griset.

THE ADORNED EDITION.

THE great popularity attained by the "Globe Library" (upwards of 140,000 Volumes having been already sold) has led the Publishers to think that a still wider circulation may be obtained by bringing the series out in a form better suited for PRESENTS and SCHOOL PRIZES. To carry out this idea they have now ready the "ADORNED EDITION," elegantly bound in cloth extra, with gilt side, back, and edges, and Coloured Title-pages, selling at 4s. 6d. each Volume.

The "Globe Library" will still be issued in the original form at 3s. 6d., and the Trade can be supplied with all the Volumes in Calf or Morocco at Moderate Prices.

The following Volumes are Now Ready. Milton and Virgil will follow shortly.

"This volume proves, in a manner as beautiful as it is convincing, the doctrine of THE RECOGNITION OF FRIENDS IN HEAVEN. It demonstrates THE INTEREST WHICH THOSE IN HEAVEN FEEL IN EARTH, and proves, with remarkable clearness, that such an interest exists, not only with the Almighty, and among the angels, but also among the spirits of departed friends."—Herald.

BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED BY GIACOMELLI,

ILLUSTRATOR OF "THE BIRD," BY MICHELET.

BIRDS AND FLOWERS. By MARY HOWITT. With Eighty-seven Illustrations.

Crown 8vo, cloth, richly gilt, price 6s.

"The Poems are of the most unaffected and unadorned description. . . . A great feature of the book is the artistic department—for the illustrator is M. Giacomelli, whose delicate and yet vigorous pencil lent much of its charm and value to M. Michelet's well-known work on 'The Bird.' Whether in landscape or in the representation of the feathered tribes, the artist is equally graceful and successful; and some of the engravings are perfect gems of force and fine execution."—Daily Telegraph, Jan. 3, 1871.

TO CHRISTIAN PARENTS AND TEACHERS.

Just Out, crown 8vo, price 2s. 6d.

PEARL ΟF STORY BOOKS.

It is a fact often observed, and readily acknowledged by Christian parents and teachers, that no "stories" are more attractive for intelligent young children than those of Scripture. The histories of Joseph, of Daniel, of David—who has not felt or witnessed their charm for the little group gathered round a parent's knee? The Book of God was written for all mankind; it speaks to the heart, the imagination, the conscience-in childhood as truly as in advanced age.

But when our children begin to read for themselves, the small type of most Bibles, and the interruption of chapters and verses, are often serious hindrances to enjoyment.

It has been thought that to print the beautiful narratives of the Old Testament in large type and in a connected form, would be to confer a boon alike on parents and children. If the "fine gold" of Scripture, drawn from the mine in the shape of collected "promises," &c., has been often found a blessing by advanced believers, why should not the golden "stories" be equally attractive and useful for the young?

This has been accordingly done in the volume now offered to the public. A few details have in some cases been omitted; but the words of Scripture alone are rigidly adhered to throughout.

. In preparation, uniform with the above, "THE LIFE OF OUR LORD," from the Gospels.

TRADE GOSSIP.

DISTRESS IN PARIS.—We desire to draw the attention of our readers to the following paragraph which appears in the current number of the Publisher's Circular, and ask them for their assistance in carrying out the relief therein proposed.

"It has been suggested that the Publishers and Booksellers of Great Britain ought to unite in the benevolent project of extending help to the distressed assistants of Publishers and Booksellers of Paris, upon whom not only the siege of the city itself, but the devastation of so many quarters of France and the wide-spread destitution amongst all classes of their customers, have brought so much bitter distress. Assuming that the Publishers of Paris will welcome this brotherly aid, we gladly respond to the appeal towards the "Paris Publishers' Relief Fund," and with pleasure announce that subscriptions towards the "Paris Publishers' Relief Fund" will be received at the office of the Publishers' Circular, and at the office of The Bookseller, and its receipt acknowledged in their pages. We may add, the more immediate the aid, the greater will be the benefit."

Messrs Firmin Didot, Hachette, Plon, and other Publishers in Paris have been requested to see to the distribution of the Food, and relying upon the good feeling and co-operation of the Trade, Mr. Sampson Low, of the Publisher's Circular, and Mr. J. Whitaker, of The Booksdur, have already taken steps to send a first instalment of relief, consisting of dried and preserved meat, rice, lentils, coffee, &c., &c.

Several liberal donations have already been promised, and we trust that the assistance thus rendered will be received as a token of neighbourly sindness and goodwill. We desire to express no opinion respecting the War or its results, but are simply anxious to mitigate some of its miseries. It is probable that members of other trades will follow the example set by the Booksellers.

FRENCH TRAVEL-TALK.—Visitors to Paris will remember the good-tempered Alsatian who acted as interpreter, guide, and friend to bewildered tourists. Alas! he is no more; and Englishmen must now rely on their own resources. To such as speak the language imperfectly, let us recommend a little eightenpenny book, just published by Hachettes, "Brette and Masson's Nouveaux Dialogues Familieres et Progressifs Français-Anglais." In this they will find all the words necessary to carry them from Givet to Bordeaux, or whatever other boundaries the Prussians may leave the nation.

THE LATE DEAN ALFORD.—It was remarked that, at the Dean's funeral one of the pall-bearers was a Dissenting minister, the Rev. Dr. Stoughton—a veryunusual circumstance in these days, when Churchmen appear to be more than ever desirous of keeping aloof from those Protestants who are not of their own communion. The latest works of the Dean were published by Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton, who now have in the press the tery latest work written by the deceased, entitled, "Trust and Truth: Lessons of the War."

We are glad to hear that Professor Masson has been employing his leisure upon the continuation of his "Life of Milton," the second volume of which is now nearly ready.

The Illustrated Review, now under the editorship of Mr. R. S. Townsend Mayer, will in future be published on the 1st and 15th of every month.

To Members of the Scholastic Profession.—Educational numbers of The Bookseller are published twice a year, February I, and August I. These numbers contain advertisements of nearly all publishers engaged in the production of school books, and copies are distributed amongst members of the scholastic profession at home and abroad, with the view of bringing these books under the notice of persons most interested in their use. The publisher will be happy to receive the names of any schoolmasters desiring to receive these educational numbers, and will forward them regularly, free of charge.

OUR SCHOOLS AND UNIVERSITIES.—Just before the siege of Paris closed that city to the outer world, the Imperial Printing Office issued a handsome volume, containing an account of our Universities: "Rapport Addressé à Son Exc. M. Le Ministre de l'Instruction Publique, par MM. J. Demogeot et H. Montucci." The report is dated May 3, and gives an account of the investigations made by those gentlemen while in this country carrying out their mission to inquire into the appliances we possess for educating the upper classes, and the kind of education imparted. The history, revenues, discipline, and course of study in the Universities; how our lawyers, divines, and physicians are instructed in their various professions, are described in a very clear and unbiased manner—some criticisms by no means favourable to our long-cherished notions being intermingled.

AN ANGRY AUTHOR.— The British Quarterly, in a review of the new edition of Archbishop Leighton's works, very severely, and, we think, justly, criticised their editor Mr. West, and charged him with doctoring the text in order to suit his own views. He is very angry at the charge, and has printed a long pamphlet by way of reply, and has had it inserted at the end of the new number of the Krview—a number of more than usual interest, and which we had intended to notice at some length.

Oxford.—Many of the Clarendon Press publications have been reduced in price; amongst those so reduced are many which scholars will be glad to possess, c.g., Wycliffe's Bible, originally published at £5 5s. in sheets, may now be had for £3 3s. in cloth. Dindorff's "Demosthenes, with the Annotations and Scholia," from £5 3s. to £2 6s. Gaisford's edition of the "Scriptores Rei Metrica," from £1 10s. to 15s. Routh's "Reliquiæ Sacra and Opuscula," from £3 11s. to £1 15s. Bingham's "Antiquities," from £5 5s. to £3 3s. The works of Bishops Hall, Jewel, Patrick, Sanderson, and many others, have been similarly reduced. The works of Bishop Berkeley, edited by Professor Campbell Fraser, are announced as nearly ready.

The Educational Calendar and Scholastic Year Book, 1871, published by the Educational Trading Company, Limited, is the best and most complete manual of educational statistics we possess. Unlike many recent works of a similar nature, it is honestly compiled: it is not a mere peg used for the purpose of collecting advertisements, but it gives a very full account of scholastic institutions and appliances. One of the features is the classified list of school books, which appears to have been compiled without any attempt at favouritism—and compiled too, by one who is well acquainted with his subject. In future editions we would recommend that the advertisements should all be placed at the end of the volume, and thus avoid the appearance of shoppiness.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

A Comparative Grammar of the Teutonic Languages. Being at the same time a Historical Grammar of the English Language. By James By James Helfenstein, Ph.D. (Macmillan.) - For six years Dr. Helfenstein has patiently and systematically devoted himself to the work which he now presents to English-speaking people in their own language. To do justice to the learned author's labours would require more time and greater space than we can afford. But it is impossible to let the volume pass without a word of welcome and recommendation. It is a most valuable addition to philological literature, and will, we are sure, be received with favour by all educated men in England and America. Dr. Helfenstein designed his grammar as a guide for the student of English through its different stages of development, and shows how it arrived at its present grammatical structure. It may, therefore, be described as an Historical Grammar of the English Language. It comprises Gothic, Anglo-Saxon, Early English, Modern English, Icelandic (Old Norse), Danish, Swedish, Old High German, Middle High German, Modern German, Old Saxon, Old Frisian, and Dutch. It is clear that without some knowledge of its sister dialects in their historical course, it is impossible to learn aright the development of our own language. The author has consequently placed the Teutonic languages in their different phases of development "side by side, so that they may be studied in the relation they bear to one another, and to the English language in par-ticular;" and has given all the necessary data for the study of comparative grammar. No grammatical form, the knowledge of which is required for the study of ancient literature, is omitted. The grammar of each dialect is, indeed, so complete, as to enable the student who has mastered the details contained therein, to proceed at once to the study of the literature of his chosen dialect. As an introductory manual to those who desire to make Teutonic language and literature their study, it is not only the best, but, we believe, the only text-book we possess. The best authorities have text-book we possess. The best authorities have been consulted, and the results of the latest research are given; so that any one who thoroughly masters the contents of the volume may consider himself in a position to extend his studies in this direction with peculiar, and hithertonon-existing advantages. In an introduction-which, by-the-by, we hope the publishers will issue in a separate form for the use of middle-class schools, Dr. Helfenstein shows, without taking too much credit to himself and the science for which he has done much, the advantages to be derived from a study of comparative grammar. He gives examples of words, taken at random, and exhibits the method of treatment pursued, and the various points of view from which they may be examined. Just as a naturalist treats a plant, he treats a word; and so full of interest are his preliminary examples and illustrations, that we cannot conceive a reader of the Introduction whole volume. "Vowel Sounds," "Consonants," "Roots and Themes," "Pronouns,"
"Numerals," "Comparisons," "Declensions," and "The Verb," are the titles of the several divisions of the work; and under these he amasses a vast store of information, which shows the intimate connection between the several branches of the Teutonic stock of languages, and enables the reader at a glance to see the connection. diagram which shows the relation of the Teutonic languages is at once clear and intelligible; and the whole volume may be considered an exemplification. As a text-book, the "Comparative Grammar of the Teutonic Languages," has long been wanted, and we have no doubt it will become the standard work on the subject on which it treats. We are glad to see that in addition to the works of Bopp, Schleicher, Max Müller, Jacob Grimm, and Heine's volume on the ancient Teutonic languages, Dr. Helfenstein has made Dr. Koch his authority for the English language. Dr. Koch's "Die Lautund Flexionslehre der Englischen Sprache," published at Weimar, in 1863, is said to be the best philosophical English grammar yet written; and we may here express a hope that it may without delay be translated into English, and issued to the devotees of Lindley Murray.

The Iliad of Homer. Translated by J. G. Cordery. 2 vols. (Rivingtons.)—Instead of being valued for himself and for the pictures of the early ages of Greek life which he presents, Homer seems now to be chiefly valued and used as a Greek exercise-book for Englishmen to turn into English metre. To omit from mention Chapman, Hobbes, Pope, and Cowper, we have lately had Professor Newman, Lord Derby, Mr. Worsley, and less known men, each presenting us with his version of the poet, in which we are expected to find some special excellence not to be discovered Mr. Cordery, a member of the Bengal Civil Service, is of opinion that no really independent translator of Homer can be like another. One catches one characteristic of the many-sided original, and another another. The two qualities Mr. Cordery himself has desired most to retain are those of rapidity in movement and distinctness in speech. Rapidity in movement depends, of course, upon versification, and in this respect we do not see that the author has any very special merits. He has chosen blank verse as his form, and his work begins thus-

> Sing, Goddess, of Achilles, Peleus' son, The Wrath that rose disastrous, and the cause Of woes unnumber'd to Achaia's host, Casting to Hades many a mighty soul Of hero ere his time, and many a limb Prey to the dogs and all the fowls of heaven.

Such a passage as this is, of course, no test of a translator's skill; but we have compared numerous casual passages in several of the books with those of previous translators, and do not find that Mr. Cordery excels them in the special qualities he aims at presenting. Although he eschews the Miltonic form of blank verse, with its elaborate and complex harmonies, and breaks up his matter into paragraphs no longer than the original Greek, something else is required before we obtain rapidity of movement. And this something else we miss. With respect to directness of style, it is clear Mr. Cordery understands Homer, and has, therefore, the first qualification to give clearly the images he clearly discerns. His translation must be praised for its resemblance to the original in meaning, and, in some degree, in versification. Commenced in the Punjaub, and completed in Central India, it is highly creditable to the author's industry and taste. As a version of Homer suitable for those ignorant of the Greek, it will be of value; but it possesses few indications of originality in poetic power. The notes to the twelve books are serviceable and succinct.

The Half-Crown Atlas of British History. By Keith Johnston, LL.D. (W. and A. K. Johnston.)—Looked at from a hundred years hence, the time through which we are now passing will appear of prodigious importance, and its chief

Especially in regard to the historical and geographical changes we have seen with the last few months, will there be cause for wonderment. 1Darative assumes, with there we cause for wonderments. The fall of the Papacy as a secular power, and the "States of the Church" disappearing from the map of Europe; the occupation of Alsace and Lorraine has long will ben which by German armies; the completion of Prim's lition to Müller. The several changes which at certain ed at consulsive periods like our own have occurred, were never so clearly and simply shown as in the historical atlas before us. In it we have a connected line of maps which illustrate, in such a manner as to be understood by schoolboys, the lading events of history. Although specially designed to elucidate British History—and for this Purpose it is chiefly valuable—it also serves for a detail for all ordinary purposes." There are allogether thirty-one maps, the last showing the world, with the possessions and dependencies of this great empire marked, a plan we desire to see in every atlas, whether designed for schools or for The maps are arranged in chronological order, so that an examination of the succssive pages will give the student an intelligible was of the various changes that have successively ocurred from the early period of British history down to our own day. For the causes of the changes indicated, recourse must be made to hisloy; but a man of moderate historical acquirements will be able to extend and exercise his knowledge by a reference to these maps; and without them, or something equivalent, it is impossible to undersand the records of modern Europe. At the present moment it is instructive to see the condition of central Europe during the various periods. In our Norman and Plantagenet times the Roman-Geman empire extended from the Baltic to the Adratic, and included Holland and Belgium, and Lorraine and Alsace. At the time of the Refornation a great change had taken place, by which was lessened. In the period embraced between 1600-1714 it became again smaller. Before 1830 it has ceased to appear on the maps; and now, again, it is about to reappear as "the new German The successive changes of all countries are to be observed in the same manner. placs given are all clearly printed on the maps, and the Index at the end of the volume is very cooling. copions. The Spanish Commercial Correspondent, with English Grammatical and Idiomatic Notes, and a General Vocabulary. By J. T. Daun and Don a General Vocabulary. Garino Gonzalez. (Asher and Co.)—So much commerce is now conducted by means of the Spanish language, and the opportunities of mastering that language are so infrequent, that the publication of a series of business letters, which seem to fit every available occasion, is both important and felicitous. By the aid of this book, a young man may very speedily qualify himself to conduct a commercial correspondence on the All branches of commerce are adequately represented in this hand-book, and classified in such a manner as to facilitate re-It is worth mentioning that the examples of letters are no fiction, but are in many cases actually transferred from the files of commercial firms; especially in the models of circu-lars, bills of exchange, market statements, &c. There is also a table of Spanish weights and measures, and a vocabulary of commercial terms. The design and carrying out of this hand-book are both admirable, and to those for whom it is compiled it should be invaluable.

The Prologue to Chaucer's Canterbury Tales. With Explanatory Notes, and a Glossary, and a Life of the Poet. By Walter M'Leod. (Longmans.)—A more complete edition than this of Chaucer's Prologue has never been issued. The text is well and clearly printed and is preceded. text is well and clearly printed, and is preceded by a large quantity of illustrative matter, including remarks on Chaucer by Campbell, Hazlitt, and Mrs. Browning, papers on Chaucer's grammati-cal forms, and remarks on his versification. Brevia. Short Essays and Aphorisms. Author of "Friends in Council." (B Daldy.)—This is a book which one may read in snatches; it does not require any prolonged attention. We have in "Brevia" short essays on a variety of subjects, and they are not too long to read while waiting for dinner. The style of the author of "Friends in Council" is well known to the reading world. It is distinguished for simplicity and nuturalnam it is collouis. for simplicity and naturalness. It is colloquial, and just the style calculated to be popular among educated classes. In this work we have the author's merits and defects equally displayed. us an aphorism, and he expands his remarks into something longer than an aphorism. Helps is always an interesting and entertaining companion. His experience of life is great, and here we have some of the results of his experience.

Beethoven. A Memoir. By Elliott Græme. With an Essay on the 100th Anniversary of his Birth, &c., by Dr. Ferdinand Hiller. (Griffin and Co.)-All lovers of music, as well as the disciples and worshippers of Beethoven, will value this charming little book. Modestly disclaiming any special originality in this brief resume of the life of the great tone-poet, the author of the memoir presents us with a sketch of the mighty musician, faithfully yet tenderly drawn, and abounding with skill in portraiture. There are so many lovers of good music who would thankfully receive such information concerning Beethoven as will be found in these pleasant pages, when they might be dis-tracted from a more elaborate and exhaustive biography. To supply a brief and entertaining memoir of Beethoven's Works and Life (long a desideratum), has been the unambitious aim of the author; and we must acknowledge the success of the design and the execution. No one who takes up this elegant tribute to a great genius will be inclined to lay it down till every page has been diligently and lovingly read, and no one can read the book through without catching the kindly and gentle spirit of the writer, and insensibly endorsing all that he would convey concerning the immense power of the musician. The whole work is delightful, and all well-tuned minds, whether musical or not, should add these pages to their stock of thinking matter, while every musician should place the book in his library. Dr. F. Hiller, in the opening of the work, contributes a fervent and eloquent essay upon Beethoven's genius, and the effect of his grand compositions upon musical posterity. The essay is written by a true devotee of the great master, and it is a worthy tribute to an honoured name. An authentic portrait of the subject of the memoir adds value to the volume.

Illustrated Travels and value to the volume.

Illustrated Travels: A Record of Discovery, Geography, and Adventure. Edited by H. W. Bates.

With engravings from original drawings by celebrated artists. 4to. (Cassell.)—This fine volume may be described as a collection of described as may be described as a collection of deeply interesting papers on that most interesting of sciences -geography. The places described and the adventures recorded are selected for the attractive facts which can be brought together respecting them. Mr. Bates, the assistant secretary of the Royal Geographical Society, who undertook the duties of editor, has been very happy in the selection of topics. There is no perceptible arrangement observed. All countries that offer scope for picturesque description, strange scenes of nature, adventures of unusual occurrence, either for the peril involved, or the results obtained, find place; perli involved, or the results obtained, into place, and, as a consequence, the book is as entertaining as a work of fiction. Algeria and its natives, Alsace and Lorraine, the Caucasus, the Chincha Islands, Formosa, the Red Sea, Thibet, Eastern and Formosa, the Red Sea, Thibet, Eastern and Western Turkistan, the Volga, are a few of the districts described; and the adventures given are admirably illustrated by woodcuts, which have the merit of being not only artistically effective, but accurate representations of the subjects. Some of the latter are splendid specimens of wood engraving. Some of the views of the Mormon settlements on the Salt Lake, and of the scenery of the Senegal and Niger Rivers, are especially remarkable.

The portraits given of sketch-maps of the countries, are highly service-able, and add value to the work. As a table book, and a volume for young people, "Illustrated Travels" is equally valuable.

Francis of Assisi. By Mrs. Oliphant. (Macmillan.)—Adored during his lifetime, canonized two years after his death, his name almost defied in the middle ages, his career sketched by Dante, who pauses in his marvellous journey to give a full narrative of the life of the beloved Saint— Francis of Assisi is certainly one of the most interesting figures left us by mediæval times. Whilst far from accepting, unreservedly, Mrs. Oliphant's view of the Saint's life and works, we can thoroughly sympathize with her reverence for his character, and give due praise for the ability with which she has recorded it in this volume. Deriving her information from the three original biographies preserved by the Church and edited by the Bollandists in the "Acta Sanctorum," she lays before us the manner of life St. Francis lived "in the heart of Italy in the thirteenth century, in imitation of his Lord." There are writers who have composed biographies of the Saint simply legendary, in which Franciscan monks attempt to raise their founder to the highest fabulous rank of sainthood. But Mrs. Oliphant finds authentic materials sufficient for her purpose; and from these she has composed her history. Francis Bernardone was born in the little town of Assisi —since become illustrious through his name and memory—towards the end of the 12th century, in the year 1182. The first epoch of his life Then came a change. His mind turned to spiritual things. He found companions like himself, who became his disciples; and, as soon as these numbered seven, in emulation of Christ, he sent them out by twos to preach. He shortly found himself head of an order which increased day by day; he performed miracles and wonders; and, finally, before he died, he had developed a new power in the Church. Mrs. Oliphant traces this Saint's the Church. career, from his earliest years to his death, in an admirable spirit-free, on the one hand, from superstitious adherence to what no Protestant reader would accept; and, on the other, paying becoming respect to the feelings of those who regard her hero as semi-Divine. She divides her narrative into nineteen chapters, wherein she judiciously gives prominence, not to those incidents in the life for which most materials exist, but to what was most characteristic of the Saint, and what is most capable of interesting modern readers. She does not omit any salient point. The famous incident on Monte Averno, for instance, where St. Francis saw the heavenly vision, and found the marvellous marks in his flesh, is given with sufficient fulness; and the author has the merit besides of not seeking to influence the reader's opinion on the subject, but records the facts with impartiality. As a picture of that period of transition in which the thirteenth century opened, as well as a biography of a beautiful character, the work has exceptional value. Style and matter are both excellent. Life of Ambrose Bonwicke, by his Father. By John E. B. Mayor, M.A. (Deighton, Bell, and

Life of Ambrose Bonwicke, by his Father. By John E. B. Mayor, M.A. (Deighton, Bell, and Co.)—Ambrose Bonwicke was really what he is described, "A Pattern for Young Students." As a boy, a scholar at St. John's College, Cambridge, and in his after life, there is much to make him and his character beloved. It is impossible to read these memorials without agreeing with Mr. Mayor that men of all opinions must respect the constancy of the young confessor, who, while jealously guarding himself against morbid scruples, without hesitation, "resigned the provision for a learned leisure which lay within his grasp." Several other names will occur; the Bonwickes, father and son, Francis Roper, Thomas Browne, Thomas Baker, who, for nearly a quarter of a century bore the words socius ejectus as a title of honour, are some of those who will be met with in the work. But young Bonwicke himself is, of course, the chief figure. He was born in 1691, of a family of booksellers. He was admitted, 1702-3, at Merchant Taylors' School, when he boarded with his uncle, a bookseller, in St. Paul's Churchyard. had non-juring scruples, and his life in college may be described as an example of non-juring principles.

He died in 1714, at St. John's College. Appended to the life are numerous notes, which the Editor offers as a contribution to Athena Cantabrigienses. He slightly deprecates his own labours; but all who read what he has written, whether a Cambridge man, or simply a man of literary tastes with antiquarian tendencies, will find himself deeply indebted not only for reproducing the "Pattern for Young Students," but for his own care and trouble as editor. As a picture of student life in Cambridge among "steady men" during the period over which the history extends, and as an exposition of a phase of religious life which has passed, this well printed little volume will be velcomed by all students.

Walks in Rome. By Augustus J. C. Hare. Two Vols. (Strahan.)—In these two volumes the Eternal City has found a worthy historian. The reader, master of them, will find himself in possession of a larger stock of information on the subject than can be found in any other single work. The surrounding country, the city, with its streets and the public buildings, with the varied tressures they contain, are all adequately described. Mr. Hare well says that one short residence at kome is not sufficient to make a foreigner acquainted with it. It is only by returning again and again, "by allowing the feeling of Rome to gain upon you, when you have constantly revisited the same view, the same temple, the same picture, that Rome engraves itself upon your heart, and changes from a disagreeable, unwholesome acquaintance, into a dear and intimate friend, seldom long absent from your thoughts." The late Charles Dickens was unable to excite in himself that feeling to which the writer in the sentence quoted alludes; but Mr. Hare himself seems to be thoroughly possessed of it. He gives us an account of Rome, ancient, mediæval, and andem, and facts relating to each period are jadiciously as orted. Indeed, the chief merit of the volumes consists in the distribution of the vast amount of matter brought together. The work consists of twenty chapters, each of which is devoted to a special quarter of the city, or a particular building, such as St. Peter's; and under this heading we find a full description. Its origin, its history, its present condition, and the historical allusions or poetical references made to it, are all scripulously recorded. As a handbook to Rome, its ralue cannot easily be over-estimated. Mr. Hare is a scholar, an antiquary, and a man to whom the masterpieces of literature are known; and in the production of these "Walks in Rome, be has utilized his knowledge and experience for the advantage of the world. We should add that the work is not only a descriptive and an historical guide, but contains all necessary information— "dull-useful information," the author himself calls u-for travellers and tourists.

Lature and Essays. By T. R. Seeley, M. A. Dasmilan. —Roman Imperialism, Milton as a Poet and Politician, the Elementary Principles of Art, English in Schools, are the chief topics of these "Lectures and Essays." They are treated with different degrees of merit as well as of authority. On Roman Imperialism, for instance, the professor of modern history would be expected to have original views, and to be able to lay them before the public with ability. And in the three lectures on this subject—originally delivered at the Royal Institution in 1869—Mr. Seeley gives an admirable résumé of Roman affairs from the time of Cæsar to the end of the lower Empire. He traces the causes of Rome's decline, describes the state of morals during the several stages, and gives, in a few touches, the characters of the men who presided over the destinies of the Empire in its decline. These three chapters are the best, and should be read by all students of history. In the professor's papers on Milton, he justly regards Carlyle's "Cromwell" as the transfiguration, or apotheosis, of the treatment history, such as that of the seventeenth century, should receive, and his Review of the Life, and Times, and Works, of the famous Latin Secretary to the Commonwealth, is a valuable contribution to the history of the period. With his notions on the principles of art, there is much from which most men who have ideas of art will differ. That art is play, that pleasure is its end, that it should be exercised for its own sake, all will agree; but with certain subsidiary speculations, not in themselves new, but here advanced as original, we take leave to disagree. The chapter on "Liberal Education in Universities" has much to recommend it, and that entitled "English in Schools" contains some sound sense on a subject of national importance. The last named, however, is written with great slovenliness, and on almost any page we could point out instances of even bad grammar. Surely (p. 222), "neither of these reasons apply to the Latin Grammar," is not correct at Cambridge. "The words he knows are English not Latin ones," ought to be considered inelegant at the same place. "The different kinds of words that," &c., is a phrase to be improved by the use of "which." "Though the law of words be difficult," may, we fancy, be improved by the substitution of "is." In truth, this paper on English is not composed in respectable English. The volume, however, deserves wide circulation, and will doubtless receive it.

A Student's Manual of the History of India, from the Earliest Period to the Present. By Meadows Taylor, C.S.I., M.R.I.A.S.A. (Longmans.)-In the preface to this excellent manual of Indian History, the author justly remarks that to a large proportion of Englishmen, the history of our largest and most valuable colonial possessions is a sealed book, and that if any should be induced to search into their important annals, the great bulk of existing histories would very probably frighten them from the task. Mr. Taylor accordingly has compiled a succinct, but by no means a brief or defective manual of Indian history, which he presents in an attractive and eminently readable form; clearly written, well and intelligibly divided into easily remembered epochs, and of convenient size. In addition to the vast amount of historical information to be gathered from this handy volume, the text is illustrated by maps and plans which greatly assist the reader in his impressions of the mode of attack adopted by the native princes, and the lines of defence established by the conquerors of this immense kingdom. The history, which begins with the earliest records of India, is continued to the year 1870, so that a diligent perusal of this manual, and a fair memory of its contents should qualify any reader in the history of our Indian possessions. Mr. Taylor has done good service to the student in issuing this very admirable and well composed history, which will, we have no doubt, be adopted as a textbook for schools and colleges.

Materials and Models for Greek and Latin Prose Composition. Selected and arranged by J. G. Sargent, M.A., and T. F. Dallin, M.A. (Rivingtons.)—Mr. Sargent, who enjoys a high reputation in Oxford for scholarship, has, before the issue this book, compiled a somewhat similar manuwhich is still extensively used in schools and universities; but the present compilation differs from preceding collections of the kind in two respects. First, the passages are arranged according to style and subject matter, for convenience of reference; and secondly, to each English piece references are appended to analogous or similar passages in classical authors of approved merit, with the object of furnishing a model to the student in his attempt to render them into Greek or Latin. The idea of this arrangement is excellent; it not only supplies matter for composition, but suggests the style of its treatment, and puts the student's mind into the harmonious groove of thought. We have no doubt of the value of this publication, and of its ready adoption by tutors and students. The collection is large and discreetly selected, while the printing and exterior of the book are all that can be desired.

The Civil Service History of England. Being a Fact-Book of English History. By F. A. White; revised throughout by H. A. Dobson. (Lock-Being a wood and Co.)-Mr. Dobson explains his connection with this work in the Preface. The volume is now issued for the first time. Originally pre-The volume pared by Mr. White, a gentleman of long experience in tuition and the preparation of candidates for examination, it was placed in the hands of Mr. Dobson for revision and modification, so as to make it suitable for taking its place with the "Civil Service Geography" already issued. Mr. Dobson and the compiler have each done their work well. As a "cram" book it has innumerable advantages over other works of the sort. No facts that should find a place seem to be omitted; and the arrangement is so clear, as to be easily and thoroughly understood. For examination candidates, public schools, and students generally, the history will be of great service. The arrangement of type adopted greatly aids the eye in quickly ascertaining any fact desired to be discovered.

"Enquire Within."—Not a very attractive title, nor a very attractive-looking book: yet the new edition just issued informs us that more than four hundred and fifty thousand copies have been sold. There must be real merit in such a work—it must meet a real want—it must be full of information to all who "Enquire Within"—or it could not have attained such a circulation. It appears to contain everything—from gout to grammar, from courtship to breach of promise, and from matrimony to divorce; everything about good wives and bad husbands, and how to manage or get rid of the latter. It is said that the copyright of this book is a little fortune, and that recently, when a dissolution of partnership occurred, it was valued at nearly £4,000! Apparently the editor takes advantage of every fresh edition to bring the work up to the present time.

Wonders of the Human Body. From the French of A. Le Pileur, M.D. Illustrated by Léveillé. (Blackie and Son.)—Is a readable and not too scientific treatise on the general structure and organism of "the house we live in." While sufficiently minute as regards its anatomical and physiological details to satisfy those who wish to instruct themselves more particularly and deeply, the book is written in an easy and readily comprehended style, so as to be useful more generally in ordinary hands. There are some omissions from ordinary hands. the anatomical catalogue, which render the work desirable as a hand-book in any gentleman's or lady's house; and the chapters treating of phrenology and music, which accompany the anatomical discussions on the skull and the organs of voice, are both instructive and attractive to a casual reader. The engravings are well executed.

ARBER'S ENGLISH REPRINTS. A Discourse of English Poetrie, 1586. By William Webbe, Graduate. Carefully Edited by Edward Arber. (Arber.)—Sermons. By Thomas Lever, M.A. 1550. Carefully Edited by Edward Arber. (Arber.)—Both these volumes will be welcomed by students of our literature. The first is so rare that two copies of it only are known; one, from which the reprint is made, in the Bodleian, and one, which at the Roxburgh sale fetched £64, now in the possession of the Marquis of Blandford. The tract, however, has value other than bibliographical. It is one of those early poetical criticisms which appeared before the advent of Shakspeare, and forms an excellent example of the best form of essay writing of the time. Mr. Arber, who believes that, with the exception of Milton, there is nothing approaching, either in the average merit of the journeymen, or the superlative excellence of the few master crastsmen, the poesy of the Elizabethan age, justly places the treatise very high among works of its class. Webbe, a Cambridge graduate, became private tutor in a family in Essex, and gave his leisure hours to the study of Latin and English poetry. He was acquainted with the older poets and with those who were his contemporaries, and his Discourse contains his views as to what English poetry actually was, and what it might and should become. It is the most extensive piece of criticism that had hitherto appeared. The author exhibits not only thorough acquaintance with his subject, but rare taste and sound judgment in his verdicts and in his suggestions. We agree with the editor that the study of such a work is essential to the right understanding of our best verse. Mr. Arber, in addition to a brief introduction, has prefixed some interesting notes on Webbe, has given the names and works of contemporary English authors referred to in the Discourse, and has added such bibliographical facts as are needed.-Thomas Lever was in succession fellow, preacher, and master of St. John's College, Cambridge, pastor in exile of the English Church at Aaran, prebend of Durham Cathedral, and master of Sherborne Hospital for the poor. The Reformation was some twenty-five years old when his sermons here collected were preached Edward the Sixth was on the throne, and as the pulpit then did the work now done more effectually by the press and the platform, we shall expect to find many allusions to the social, domestic, and political manners of the time, as well as to religious doctrines, in these sermons. And this is the case. The preacher inveighed against the abuses of his Enclosures and the impropriations of ecclesiastical benefices are among his topics. denounced the aspiring of the lower classes against the nobility and gentry; the utter destitution of the poor, the plurality of benefices, the general covetousness, and other such like questions form the subjects upon which he exerted his eloquence. The volume is edited with the same care as the preceding.

Waifs and Strays of Natural History. By Mrs. Alfred Gatty. (Bell and Daldy.)—Anything that Mrs. Gatty writes is worth reading. For young people, who would combine instruction with amusement, this little volume is a choice gift-book. There is a full account of coral and coral islands, sponges, blue snail shells, zoophytes, and various microscopic objects; and these chapters are written in that pleasant, chatty style, for which Mrs. Gatty is deservedly admired. The present little volume is quite a manual of certain branches of highly interesting natural history; and, aided by capital illustrations, it cannot fail to be popular with more advanced children.

A Parisian Family. By Madame Guizot de Witt. Translated by the Author of "John Halifax, Gentleman." (Low.)-There is a dash of worldliness, with more than a touch of Christian teaching in "A Parisian Family." Louise, the eldest daughter of a M. Rambert, has been saved from death by drowning by her cousin Raoul, eldest son of M. de Bresse. The Ramberts may be considered representatives of the world, and the de Bresses as Christian characters. During a lingering illness. Louise finds how much better and kinder her uncle's children are than her own sisters and brother, and, as a consequence, finds her opinions and conduct undergoing a change. On the last page we have the remark from M. de Bresse, addressed to his wife, "Louise will never make a nun: don't think it." The reply may be regarded as in substance the teaching of the book. "I neither think it, nor desire it," says the wife; "I only wish her to live in the world, not as of the world, but as glorifying the name of our Master in the common life of every day.

Emily Milman, the Little Sunbeam of the Farmhouse. By the Author of Sophia Harold. (Book Society.)-Emily has become the lady her mother wished her to be, and tried to make her; but she was much better—the loving, gentle attendant on her father's declining years; and then, when the right time came, she gave her heart and hand to her first love, a poor young farmer, in whose home she shone like a sunbeam. The incidents which lead up to this happy conclusion are brightly written; and the reader who finds little Emily, with her pleasant face and curly hair at the threshold—a pretty picture, so fresh and fair—will go on to the end, inevitably. As a story for guls, prettily illustrated, this may be warmly recommended.

٠. €, ₹ A Happy Village, and How it Became So. By Mary Wright. (Book Society.)—In this pretty little story of country life we have evidence of an improvement in both the method of the writer and the taste of her readers; for, though eminently a religious story, it is written in a healthy tone, and may be recommended as containing all the elements of a novel that are worth preserving -and something more.

Secular Annotations on Scripture Texts. Francis Jacox. (Hodder and Stoughton.)—A capital idea this annotation of Bible texts from the writings of historians, poets, essayists, and novelists; and really it is astonishing how many and how various are the illustrations of particular truths to be obtained from the works of Plato, Cicero, and Horace, Shakspeare, Milton, Southey, Froude, Scott, Byron, Longfellow, Dickens, and Lord Lytton; while even from such apparently unlikely sources as Captain Marryat's sea stories and Alexander Dumas' romances, Anthony Trollope's novels, and Artemus Ward's "goaks," the writer—best known in periodical literature as "Parson Frank"—finds many and curious extracts suitable for his purpose. With-out preface or introduction, Mr. Jacox plunges into his subject, and, in upwards of three-score well-written chapters, piles up argument upon argument, example upon example, and illustration upon illustration, the whole making a volume at once curious, original, and instructive.

In consequence of the pressure upon our advertising pages, we are compelled to omit our "Cor-respondence," "Obituary," some "Notices of Books," "Books Received," and many items of literary news. In our next we hope to make up for all deficiencies on the present occasion.

THE WINDOW; or, The Songs of the Wrens. A Song Cycle. By Alfred Tennyson, Poet-Laureate. With Music by Arthur Sullivan. 4to, cloth, gilt extra, 21s.

"What more can heart wish than Alfred Tennyson's verse and Arthur Sullivan's music? What more can eye desire than the rich yet tasteful emblazonment which makes the casket worthy of the jewels it contains? Mr. Sullivan's music is such as only Mr. Sullivan could write. Of perfect melody, but rescued from monotony by a richness of harmony and articly of accompaniment rare indeed, at least in English Song, it is suited to the words, and they to it; and both are with the reputation of the first song-writer and the first song-setter of the day."—Times.

"School histories are generally mere abridgments of some larger work, or at best compilations from several, rather than the result of original investigation. This may fairly be styled a new one, from its being constructed on the new plan countries, and thus throwing new light to even such that stiffing a statistical with traditional views, the writer has examined the earliest writers, the statute-book, the public star was a statistical with traditional views, the writer has examined the earliest writers, the statute-book, the public countries accurate account of our history than can be found in ordinary text-books. It has also more pretension was. There is a brief geraphical introduction, with four maps of Britain at various periods, containing all places of successions. This we consider a great advantage. Generally speaking, the author is moderate in the expression of his clause, but he takes no pains to conceal his decided bias in favour of authority both in Church and State."—Athen sum.

CORNER'S HISTORY OF ENGLAND.—NEW EDITION.

THE New Edition of the HISTORY OF ENGLAND contains, in addition to the former illustrations, a folded Plate (sh. im.), beautifully etched on Steel, representing the Costumes of the English Nobility, Clergy, Gentry, Army, Navy, Civil Officers, Artisans, Labourers, &c., from the ConQUEST to the reign of QUEEN VICTORIA: also the Ships, Furniture, Household Utensils, Musical Instruments, &c., of the several periods. The whole, including the Armorial Bearings of the successive dynasties, chronologically arranged.

This elaborately-drawn and carefully-executed Plate has been compiled from the most authentic sources, a great part being copied from Illuminated Manuscripts of the Middle Ages, many of which have not hitherto appeared in any modern publication.

Miss Corner's Histories are well adapted for School and Family Reading, Being Pleasantly written, and forming agreeable contrasts to those dry epitomes with which children are so often teased; the whole compiled from accepted English and Foreign authorities, and each History has Chronological Table, Index, Map, Steel Plates, and is strongly bound, viz.:—

NEW EDITION OF BUTLER'S GEOGRAPHY.

A NEW INTRODUCTION TO GEOGRAPHY:

In a Series of Lessons for Youth.

With an Appendix, containing Problems on the Globes, & Questions as Exercises for each Lesson.

BY JOHN OLDING BUTLER.

NINETEENTH EDITION, THOROUGHLY REVISED, PRICE 2s. 6d. CLOTH.

"HE present Edition of "Butler's Introduction to Geography" has undergone thorough revision at the hands of an eminent Geographer. Without in any way altering its treatment of the subject-attested as the value of that treatment is by a lengthened course of usage in schools, and by the approval of experienced teachers—the Editor has sought not merely to correct inaccuracies, which, from various causes, had crept into the text, but to engraft on it such additional information as lapse of time and altered political circumstances, as well as the continuous extension of geographical research, have rendered necessary. In the case of a subject so eminently progressive as Geography, such revision, at frequent intervals, is especially demanded. The altered political relations of Italy, Austria, Denmark, Germany, and other States of Europe, not less than the information which recent explorations have furnished respecting the Nile and elevable many formation of the Reitich Colonies in Australia and elevable many formation of the States of the Reitich Colonies in Australia and elevable many formation which respective limits of the British Colonies in Australia and elsewhere, may be referred to as illustrations of this truth.

Considerations such as the above have guided the present Editor in the performance of his task; and, in the assurance that no effort has been spared to render this edition of "Butler's Introduction to Geography" as complete as possible, the Publishers hope for a continuance in its behalf of the favour which it has hitherto enjoyed as a popular class-book.

BEAUTIFUL VERBATIM ET LITERATIM REPRINTS OF

THE FAMOUS ELIZABETHAN BOOK-RARITIES,

Discovered by him at Lamport Hall, near Northampton, the ancient Seat of Sir Charles E. Isham, Bart.

This Extraordinary Discovery comprehends not merely many of the Rarest and most Precious Poetical Productions of the Elizabethan Era, which are generally in an uncut state as issued by the printer, but 20 less than Thirteen different works of the same period, of none of which is any other copy known to have instead the raveges of time; and, what is still more remarkable, no record of any of them having been written or printed has been produced by our most indefatigable critics.

No. 1.

SHAKESPEARE'S VENUS and ADONIS. From the hitherto-unknown Edition, printed for WILLIAM LEAKE, 1500.

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIME, by W. SHAKESPEARE. From the First Edition of 1599, of which only two copies are known.

EPIGRAMMES, written by Sir John Davies; and certaine of OVID'S ELEGIES, translated by Christopher Marlowe. From a rare and very early suppressed Edition.

muy pren, and the Preface to the "Passionate Pilgrime raises and studes some very remarkable literary questions as to Shakespeare's share in that work. We regret that circumstances, for which Mr. Edmonds is not responsible, have restricted the reprint to such an exceedingly limited number of copies as 131—though, of course, the scarcity of the edition is calculated to give it a fancy price in the market. On the whole, since the reprint of the 'Devonshire' Hamlets, by Mr. S. We heartily congratulate the town [Birmingham, which has established a Shakespeare Library, containing every edition of Shakespeare, and every work bearing on his works and himself, both in English and other languages] on the continued activity and ability of its Shakespearian scholars, and as heartily tender our thanks to Mr. Edmonds for the admirable work he has produced."

Of its claims to notice Mr. Payne Collier thus speaks in his recently-published "Bibliographical and Critical Account of the Rarest Books in the English Language:

"There is no more rare or more curious work than this in our language. Only a single copy of it is known (that we have used); and, although mentioned by later bibliographers, it was unknown to Ritson, and nobody has yet pretended to give a notion of its contents. We shall do so in more detail than usual." And to this purpose he devotes no less than six pages.

The present volume, which will appear very shortly, will contain an elaborate Preface by Mr. CHARLES EDWORDS, with Extracts from the various Works of EDWARD HAKE, which abound in curious allusions to the manners and politics of his time.

CASSELL'S PRIMARY SERIES

Is an entirely New and Original Series of Educational Manuals, published at prices varying from Fourpence to Two Shillings. But a short time has elapsed since many of H.M. Inspectors of Schools called attention to the fact that no cheap, simple, and efficient series of Treatises on the Rudimentary Branches of Education existed for general use in Elementary Schools. To meet this want the volumes comprised in the Primary Series have been prepared by men whose practical experience as teachers rendered them peculiarly fitted to write on the special subjects entrusted to them. Of this series the following volumes are now ready :-

- ELEMENTARY ARITHMETIC. Part I. 4d. Key to ditto, 3d. 5th Thousand.
 ELEMENTARY ARITHMETIC. Part II. 6d. Key to ditto, 3d. 3rd Thousand.

Teachers requiring a Manual of abstract Arithmetic devoted to the simple rules will find just what they require in Part I. of the Elementary Arithmetic, while Part II. renders the pupil familiar with the Compound Rules. Both Parts contain numerous Exercises in words as well as figures, as required by H.M. Committee of Council on Education.

- 3. ELEMENTARY HISTORY OF BRITAIN. 6d.—A Manual which contains everything necessary for a boy to know to enable him to pass the Oxford and Cambridge Middle-Class Examinations in the History of his own country.
 - 4. AN EXPLANATORY INTRODUCTION TO GEOGRAPHY. 4d. 8th Thousand.
 - 5. ENGLAND AT HOME, 1s.

From the first of these may be learned the chief facts in the Physical and Political Geography of the whole World; while from the second a learner will gain a sound and thorough knowledge of the principal Physical, Social, Commercial, and Topographical features of England and Wales, with the principal Historical Events connected with different Localities in each county.

- 6. OUR FIRST GRAMMAR, 1s.—A brief Treatise on the groundwork of English Grammar, clearly pointing out the distinctions between the different parts of speech; numbers, genders, cases, and kinds of nouns; classes of pronouns; kinds, moods, and tenses of verbs, &c. Numerous Exercises for Home Work, and Examination Questions are given.
- 7. RIGHT LINES IN THEIR RIGHT PLACES, 1s .- This book is intended to give Children an insight into the Elements of Geometry without the use of instruments, and to afford them easy and suitable practice in the Rudiments of Drawing.

8.OUR BODIES, 15.; 9. The ANIMAL KINGDOM, 2s.; 10. VEGETABLE PHYSIOLOGY, 1s.6d.

In these books a successful attempt has been made to give Children an insight into the Elements of Physiology as exhibited in the structure of the human form, and the leading types of varieties of the Animal and Vegetable Kingdoms. In "Our Bodies" a concise but sufficient description is given of the bony framework or skeleton of man, the muscles with which it is covered, the organs with which it is endowed, the digestive processes, and the network of veins and arteries by means of which the blood It endowed, the digital parts of the body and repairs the waste caused by exertion of any kind; while "Vegetable Physiology" shows us of what elements organic and inorganic plants are composed, and the functions they perform, &c. "The Animal Kingdom" is a well-illustrated Elementary Work on Natural History, written in accordance with the system of classification adopted by Cuvier, and seeks specially to inculcate in the minds of the young the principles of kindness to animals.

Inspectors of Schools for Examilitation, and that in the early voluntee of the set Suparate Renders have been prepared for each see, as it has been rightly judged that what may be calculated to arouse the interest of a boy may not exert a similar influence on the mind of a girl, and vice versa.

LANGUAGES.

The safest and most thorough means of insuring facility of composition in any language is to accustom the pupil, by the aid of copious Exercises, to turn words, sentences, phrases, and paragraphs in his mother-torgue into the language that he is seeking to acquire, and vice versa. Useful aids to in his mother-tongue into the language that he is seeking to acquire, and vice versal, gaining a grammatical knowledge of French and German will be found in

WEBSTER'S ETYMOLOGICAL DICTIONARY, 3s. 6d.

These Dictionaries are closely but clearly printed, and, although they are issued in a compact and hardy form, contain as much matter as is found in more bulky and pretentious volumes sold at a far higher price.

ARITHMETIC AND MATHEMATICS.

The best Manuals of Arithmetic for a boy's use are those which tell him what to do and how to do it in an intelligible manner, and then furnish him with numerous Examples for practice. This plan

WALLACE'S ELEMENTS OF ARITHMETIC. 1s. 6d., and

To teach Book-keeping in Schools has frequently been found a work of considerable difficulty, owing to the fact that most manuals on this subject consist of little else than a Set of Examples which the pupil'has to copy. In

This error is avoided, for the component parts of each book form a set of Exercises, the working out of which demands considerable thought, care, and attention from the pupil. Ruled Sets of Books may be had for each system, price 2s.

NATURAL PHILOSOPHY, PHYSICAL SCIENCE, &c.

Twenty years ago but little attention was paid in schools to anything beyond the range of Classics and Mathematics. The necessity, however, of a fair amount of knowledge of Modern Languages and Natural Science has been clearly proved, and for every branch of the latter a variety of Text-books has sprung up. Among these are LESSONS IN NATURAL PHILOSOPHY. By JOHN TYNDALL, F.R.S. 2s. 6d. 4th Thousand.

THE ELEMENTS OF NATURAL PHILOSOPHY, for the Use of Schools. By the Rev. S. HAUGHTON, M.D., F.R.S. 3s. 6d.

ELEMENTARY CHEMISTRY. By the Rev. H. M. HART. 3s. 6d.

The great truths and natural laws enunciated in these volumes are illustrated by apt allusions to incidents of every-day occurrence, and by experiments that may be readily and safely made by anybody; the easy and familiar style in which they are written being calculated to awaken interest and arouse curiosity. The "Elementary Chemistry," has been written with a view to the requirements of Candidates for Competitive Examinations, and contains everything necessary for a boy to know on this subject, from the force of Attraction to Spectrum Analysis.

THE NATURAL HISTORY OF COMMERCE, cloth, 5s., is one of a series of books on subjects with which every boy should have as full an acquaintance as possible. A knowledge of the Raw Materials used in Art and Commerce, and the preparation of Food, Clothing, &c., is necessary to all. In this book, which will be found a useful Reading Book for the Higher Classes in Schools, learners are taught what raw produce is, from what part of the world the raw produce of the animal, vegetable, and mineral kingdoms is derived, and to what uses it is put. It is accompanied by a good Map of the World in Botanical Zones, and a copious List of Commercial Terms with their equivalents in several languages.

SCHOOLBOY FRIFNDS:

A Story of Whitminster Grammar School.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

Westminster Review.

""My Schoolboy Friends' is a most interesting book. It has many attractive qualities, which are sure to win for it a wide and lasting popularity among the best sort of readers. Boys, for whom it is especially written, will thoroughly enjoy it. The pluck, forwardness, buoyancy, honesty, fun, mischief, so characteristic of healthy boys, are found here, shaded by the meanness, folly, and premature wickedness which ever cross the path of even the juvenile pictures. But there is no attempt to draw a spotless character to play the character of hero. Best and worst are alike boys, and their varied and varying natures are the most significant proofs of their faithfulness to life. The author reports accurately what, under the circumstances, boys are likely to do: and with evident enjoyment, he chronicles the exuunder the circumstances, boys are likely to do; and, with evident enjoyment, he chronicles the exuberant, joysome commonplaces.

In short, the author combines the power of vivid reminiscence of his own early days with the keen observation of a frank and good schoolmaster, and eminently demonstrates his fitness to become the authoritative writer of books of this class. As such, we welcome him, feeling certain that he will prove a benefactor to the younger public, who are too much led away at present by the insane, unhealthy, and heightened stories of daring crime and sin belonging to the Boys of England school of literature. To this poisonous cheap drug, Mr. Hope's stories are a sure and safe antidote, for while his characters and incidents are real, they are described in a style graphic, pleasing, interesting, and amusing. For the good work he is doing, Mr. Hope has, therefore, our hearty thanks and recommendation. hearty thanks and recommendation.

The Scholastic Register.

"Principals of schools cannot introduce into their circulating libraries a work that would be more appreciated by their pupils. The author, who has already won his spurs in this description of literature, here adds to his laurels. The story is essentially of school life, life-like. taining volume for boys has not issued from the press for many years."

Third Edition, in crown 8vo, with Illustrations, elegantly bound, gilt edges, price 5s.

STORIES SCHOOL

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The Athenseum.

"That Mr. Hope should give us a book interesting, to a certain extent amusing, and generally natural, no one who has read 'A Book about Dominies' will for an instant doubt. The stories have a hearty and healthy tone, and are entirely free from the maudlin sentimentality with which many ladies, who, knowing little or nothing about schoolboys, take it upon themselves to write stories for them, often interlard their pages."

Public Opinion.

"Every one who had the good fortune to read those delightful books of Mr. Hope's, 'A Book about Dominies' and 'A Book about Boys,' must have registered a hope that he would some day give us a collection of stories about school life; and here is the identical book. The stories are genial and refreshing, rich with the highest moral sentiments, never maudlin, and thoroughly natural. We trust to meet Mr. Hope again and again in similar works, for we can assure him that no sensational story that has ever been written ever possessed half the interest or enjoyment which these stories possess.

Elegantly bound in cloth and gold, and profusely Illustrated, price 3s. 6d.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The North British Mail.

"A book for boys by Mr. Hope stands in no need of recommendation. His previous tales have proved such favourites, that the simple announcement of his name is sufficient to ensure for his new volume a wide circulation among the host of youths who are let loose from school about Christmas-time. These stories are admirably suited, in their subject and style, to excite and attract all juvenile readers. They have the rare advantage of really good illustrations, and the style of binding is the prettiest and most artistic we have yet come across."

The Carlisle Patriot.

"Mr. Hope has established a reputation by his healthy, vivacious, and entertaining books about and for boys. We envy the pure fame of a writer who has become the favourite of the rising generation, whom, while he enchants, he instructs in nobleness, truthfulness, and bravery of life and conduct. This book, which contains a dozen delightful tales, is beautifully got up, and will make a most acceptable Christmas or New Year's gift."

GROOMBRIDGE'S SCIENCE MANUALS.

CHEMISTRY. By F. S. BARFF, M.A.

Illustrated with numerous Wood Engravings. Fcap. 8vo, cloth, 4s. An Introduction to Scientific Chemistry, designed for the Use of Schools and Candidates for University Matriculation Examinations.

"This is the first volume of an educational series of elementary treatises about to be issued for students. The student who knows Mr. Barff's book, in the way it is intended to be known, will have a solid ground-work of chemical knowledge on which he may safely rear the more speculative branches of the science. For the purposes of clear instruction for preparing for the earlier examinations, and last, though not least, for cheapness and excellence, we heartily recommend Mr. Barff's work to the notice of students.—Lancet.

"It is impossible to read this book without a conviction of its marked superiority. The conciseness and lucidity with which each point is handled, give to it the freshness of original study; and the reader is disposed to regret that in his younger days he was possessed of no such handbook on this difficult science with which to quicken his awakening aspirations. Mr. Barff's book is a complete success in the art of driving a way the weariness of first attempts."—Examiner and London Review.

HEAT. By TEMPLE AUGUSTUS ORME.

Illustrated with numerous Wood Engravings. Fcap. 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. An Introduction to the Science of Heat, designed for the Use of Schools, and Candidates for University Matriculation Examinations.

"This book is full of excellent examples of the various laws of heat, and the student who has worked through these questions cannot fail to have acquired a good practical knowledge of the subject."—Nature.

"Mr. Orme has produced an educational work, which is well fitted for giving all who study it with understanding a very thorough insight into the laws and phenomena of heat."—British Medical Journal.

MECHANICS. By RICH. WORMELL, M.A., B.Sc.

Illu strated with numerous Wood Engravings. Fcap. 8vo, cloth, 4s. An Elementary Course of Theoretical and Applied Mechanics, designed for the Use of Schools, Colleges, and Candidates for University and other Examinations.

"Mr. Wormell states in clear and concise language the principles of elementary statics and dynamics." We have no doubt that this excellent little work will be a great success."—Nature.

"Mr. Wormell's book cannot be too warmly praised as an introduction to the study of theoretical and applied mechanics."—Chemist and Druggist.

HYDROSTATICS and SOUND. By R. WORMELL,

M.A., B.Sc. Illustrated with numerous Wood Engravings. Fcap. 8vo, cloth, 3s. An Elementary Course of Hydrostatics and Sound, designed for the Use of Schools, Colleges, and Candidates for University and other Examinations.

"Forming one of the admirable series of 'Groombridge's Science Manuals:' 'Hydrostatics and Sound' is in every respect worthy of the position assigned to it. The various principles enunciated are illustrated most clearly by experiments, which, being fully and carefully described in a popular style, may readily be performed by the uninitiated."—City Press.

"The whole subject is dealt with in a very simple and intelligible way, which will doubtless recommend it to students."—Educational Times.

Messrs. HACHETTE & CO. beg to call attention to the following New Works suitable for Reading in Classes and in Family Circles:-

HACHETTE'S FIRST FRENCH READER,

Adapted to the Use of Young People (10 to 15). Containing Extracts in Prose and Poetry from Standard Authors, with a French and English Vocabulary.

EDITED BY THE

Rev. P. H. ERNEST BRETTE, B.D., Head Master of French School, Christ's Hospital, London;

GUSTAVE MASSON, B.A., Assistant Master at Harrow School,

PAST AND PRESENT EXAMINERS IN THE UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.

One Vol., small 8vo, 300 pages, price 2s.

In preparing this "French Reader," the object of the Compilers has been to strike out a new path away from the field where selections are generally made. La Fontaine, Florian and Fénélon may be said to have been worn threadbare by the Authors of School-books; and it is believed that Extracts, equally unobjectionable, in point both of style and ideas, can be placed before young readers as well as the well-known classical morceaux which crowd the pages of the old Recueils Choisis. With a few exceptions, therefore, the pieces contained in the present Volume have been supplied by Modern Writers, and they thus possess the advantage of novelty, besides that of real literary merit.

Care has been particularly taken to exclude, not only every sentence, but even every word, that could offend the most fastidious ear; and some of the pieces have been selected with a view to give to the pupils a sufficient knowledge of Colloquial French.

The Vocabulary placed at the end of the Volume will be found to explain all the words and idioms which might puzzle beginners.

The greater number of the Stories and Poems in this volume have never been printed in any other French Reader, and cannot be reproduced without the special consent of the Publishers, who own the Copyright.

HISTOIRE DE CHARLES XII., par VOLTAIRE. Nouvelle édition, publiée avec une Carte de l'Europe Centrale, des Notes littéraires et des Eclaircissements historiques et géographiques. Par E. BROCHARD-DAUTEUILLE. With Explanatory Notes and an English Vocabulary, by GUSTAVE MASSON, B.A., of Harrow. I Vol. small 8vo, in boards, 2s.

NEW FAMILIAR AND PROGRESSIVE

ENGLISH AND FRENCH DIALOGUES.

RICHARD and QUETIN, with Dialogues on Railway and Steamboat Travelling, and a Comparative Table of Monies and Measures. New Edition, carefully Revised by the Rev. P. H. ERNEST BRETTE, B.D., Head Master of the French School, Christ's Hospital, London; and GUSTAVE MASSON, B.A., Assistant Master of Harrow School, Past and Present Examiners in the University of London. Price 1s. 6d.

This little book has been carefully corrected throughout, with a view to the present edition; and the revisers confidently hope that, in its improved shape, it will be found useful by young people of both sexes, for whose benefit it is especially intended.

THE BIBLE ATLAS. By SAMUEL CLARK, M.A., Vicar of Bredwardine. With a Complete Index to the Geography of the Bible by George Grove, Esq. Royal 4to, cloth, gilt edges, price Reduced to 215.

The Mays contain such Geographical and Topographical Illustrations as are required in the study of the Sacred History. They are accurately drawn, and care has been taken to distinguish what is certain from what is only probable. The Notes comprise a selection of references bearing on the positions of places, and compact views of the most important questions on the Geography and Topography of the Bible, with hints to assist those who may wish to follow out more thoroughly particular topics of inquiry. The INDEX, compiled by Mr. Grove, gives the Original Name of each place in Hebrew or Greek, with an exhaustive statement of its occurrences in the English Bible, and the Modern Name wherever it can be identified with certainty or with fair probability.

COMMENTARY ON THE NEW TESTAMENT, BY VARIOUS AUTHORS.
THIRD EDITION.

THE FOUR GOSPELS, according to the Authorised Version. With a Brief Commentary by the REV. W. WALSHAM HOW, M.A., Honorary Canon of St. Asaph, Rural Dean, Rector of Whittington, Salop. With Maps and Plans. Crown 8vo, cloth boards, 4s.

The Second Volume, containing the rest of the New Testament, is in the Press.

The aim of the Commentary is to give such information as is likely to render the study of the Holy Scriptures more easy to a reader of ordinary intelligence, especially to the Young, passing over no real difficulties, but abstaining from learned and elaborate discussions. Such practical reflections are introduced as seem to arise naturally out of the passages under consideration, and are in truth an essential part of the exposition. Some varieties of reading, suggested by the examination of the best manuscripts, have been noticed, and some amendments in the translation have been proposed, which seem to make particular passages more easily understood.

In order fully to ascertain and carry into effect the wishes of the Trade, a meeting was called for February 6, at which Mr. Thomas Longman consented to preside, and the Stationers' Company lent their great hall for the purpose. Although the notice given was necessarily short, there was a good attendance, and the following resolutions were unanimously carried :-

I. That the names and the amounts of subscription shall E taken in the room, and means adopted for collecting intersubscriptions, the proceeds of which to be devoted to the relief of the assistants of Publishers, Booksellers, Music-sellers, and such other persons connected with litename as may be judged expedient by the Committee which will be formed in Paris for this object.

II. That Mr. MARSTON be requested to act as Secretary and to ollect subscriptions, and that Mr. JOHN MILES be requested to act as Treasurer of the Funds collected at this ceting and subsequently.

III. That this Meeting request Mr. BUTTERWORTH, Mr. HUDSON, III. Hat this Meeting request Mir. BUTTERWORFI, MIR. CHAPMAN, Mr. CHAPPELL, Mr. GALPIN, Mr. HUDSON, Mr. W. KENT, Mr. THOMAS LONGMAN, Mr. SAMPSON DOW, Mr. JOHN MILES, Mr. J. J. MILES, Mr. JOHN MUERAY, Mr. SOTHERAN, Mr. STANFORD, Mr. STEWART, Mr. UNITAKER, to act as a Committee (of their things around with power to add to their thom five shall form a quorum), with power to add to their

IV. That the funds collected shall not be disposed of without the consent of at least three members of the Committee.

Y. That MM. Diddt and MM. Hachette having been written to for advice on February 3, it would be desirable that the Committee should wait their reply before deciding on any distribution of the Funds.

VI. That should it appear to the Committee that there would be too much delay and impediment in a separate distribution of the funds, for the special purpose proposed, they should call a General Meeting of the subscribers to take their opinion as to paying the money over to the Lord Mayor's Fund.

A sum of more than £500 was subscribed in the m, and by the time the committee met this was siderably augmented. The committee were rplexed as to the best mode of procedure, as, hough several letters had been written, no reply ad been received from Paris, and it was not even known in what spirit the offer would be received by our friends there. Another meeting was held a week afterwards, and the committee were on that occasion favoured with the presence of M.

uret, a member of the firm of Messrs. Hachette 1 Co., who stated, that at the time of his a ing Paris, a day or two before, the food disatched ten days previously had not then arrived: advised that a fresh supply should be sent. but the committee, searing there might be some isadventure that would mar the intention of the mors, thought it best to send the sum of £500 1 money, to be distributed at the discretion of the 'aris committee. Not till March 1st had Mr. Marston, the indefatigable secretary, information that the whole of the goods consigned on the 4th February had reached their destination. letter conveying the news entered into full par-liculars of the mode of distribution adopted, the class of recipients, and the good feeling engendered by the efforts made on their behalf. To quote the words of the writers :-Permettez nous d'abord, Messieurs, de vous re combien nous avons été personnellement ouches de la cordiale sympathie dont les éditeurs

M. Noblet, printer, secretary du Cercle de la Libraire, M. Fiet de la Papeterie du Marais, M. Breton, and M. Fouret, of Messrs. Hachette's, who had been nominated by the council of administration to superintend the distribution.

et libraires Anglais ont donné des marques si éclatantes aux membres de leur corporation qui ont été si éprouvés pendant le siège de Paris, vous nous donnez aussi, comme le disait dernièrement l'un de vous un généreux témoinage de la solida-rité professionnelle qui, en déhors des questions politiques unit les uns aux autres les divers membres d'une même famille commerciale." They then proceed to say that if the givers had been present at the first distribution, they would have been gratified to see the satisfaction of those who came to receive their portions, and that which contributed to increase their happiness was the nature and tout Anglaise of the articles distributed. On receipt of this gratifying intelligence, the committee again met, and it was resolved to send a further supply of food to the amount of £500, and that no time should be lost in forwarding it.

It was at the same time determined that the subscription should be kept open till the end of this month, so that those who wish to do so, may add their names to the list :-

Wright, R. W., Stanora

The amount received up to the present date is about £1,300; we shall be glad to see this increased to £2,000 before the list closes; we hope that the names of several hundreds more of our provincial subscribers will be found therein, and will be happy to take charge of any sums, however small.

WASTED ENERGY. — The new halfpenny postal cards have been a great success; in their issue the public recognised a great boon, and at once adopted them with avidity. In order to supply them in the best manner, the Post Office authorities contracted with one firm, Messrs. De La Rue, for their manufacture. Naturally, the other wholesale houses felt hurt at this apparent favouritism, especially as the cards interfered with arounism, especially as the cards interfered and the demand for envelopes, and accordingly an indignation meeting was held on the 28th ult., at the Cannon Street Hotel, Mr. Chater, of the firm of Grosvenor, Chater, and Co., taking the chair.

In opening the proceedings, the Chairman said that the meeting had been called for the purpose of protesting against the gratuitous supply of spinesting against the Government, more especally of postal cards, which were issued at the charge of postage only, nothing being charged for the cards. He further said that, previous to the Act under which they suffered being passed, a deputation waited upon the Secretary of the Post Office, and complained of the injustice which would be done the whole body of stationers should the measure come into operation. was informed that nothing could be done at that stage of the bill, but should the system subsequently be found not to work well, an alteration might be effected at a future time. A meeting was held on the 31st of January to consider the matter, and a Committee was formed, which had met several times, and had prepared a series of resolutions, which would be submitted to the present meeting.
The number of letters received from all parts of Great Britain, in reply to a circular issued by the Committee, showed that considerable interest was feli in the matter by every one connected with the trade. Deputations from various parts of the United Aingdom were present, and a letter had been received from Scotland giving a copy of a resolution on the subject passed at a meeting in Edinburgh. might safely say that 10 or 15 per cent. of the letters received by mercantile houses were written on postal cards, which were issued gratuitously, to the or the same of the the great injury of the stationery trade. He thought that a far better system would be to issue a 2d. slamp for letters under 4 oz. This would remedy the evil, and he thought would give general satis-

Mr. Watson, the secretary, then read a number of letters from persons interested in the motion.

Mr. Evans (Messrs. Dickenson and Co.) moved the first resolution, as follows:-

"That under the present system the supply of postal cards to the public is gratuitous, inasmuch as the half-way, charged is, according to the act authorizing their be card," be postage alone, so that no part of it can be for

The resolution was seconded by Mr. Gotto Messis. Parkins and Gotto), and supported by r. I. E. Richard and Mr. Creese (Birmingham), Mr. James S picer moved:-

That this gratuitous supply of writing materials to the blic is unjust in principle, unauthorized by parliament, in the highest degree injurious to the stationery trade. Mr. Topping seconded the resolution, which is carried.

Mr. Bushby, of Grantham, moved, and Mr. C. imwade seconded, the third resolution :

That the practice of the Post Office, in supplying its or return, while it call on the stationer payment in advance, renders all competition with the Post Office, and tends to establish an unjust monopoly."

his resolution was duly carried.

Mr. M'Corquodale moved, and Mr. Rolls seconded, the fourth resolution as follows :-

"That a Committee be appointed to wait on the Postmaster General, and, if necessary, on any other members of the Government, with the view of getting the supply of cards and other writing materials by the Post Office abolished, or placed on a more equitable footing; and that, in the event of the Postmaster General declining to make any satisfactory alteration in the supply of stationery by the Post Office, each member of the trade be requested to bring the matter under the notice of his representatives in parliament."

With all humility we venture to suggest that the wholesale stationers are merely wasting their time and labour in endeavouring to induce the Govern-ment to change their tactics. The advantage of the new system is, that for one halfpenny, and no more, the public can buy exactly what it requires, viz., a means of free communication between one part of the country and another. And, however painful the confession may be, it is true that the public cares more for its own convenience than it cares for the pockets of stationers.

The true policy of stationers should be that of adapting themselves to the convenience of the public. Let them see whether they cannot supply more convenient, more useful, or better cards, paper ready stamped, and if they can the public will purchase. At the present time it is probable that not more that one stamped envelope is sold to one thousand unstamped, yet we know that the stamped Government envelopes are the more convenient for postal purposes. In envelopes, the stationers have beaten the Government, yet, when they first came out, we remember that there was a general outcry against the Post Office for supplying envelopes at the rate of 10s. a thousand! that time there were not more than half a dozen houses engaged in their manufacture. may be sure that neither the House of Commons Stationers nor the public will submit to any increased charge for the halfpenny post-cards.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION. In a subsequent page will be found a letter from a most respectable member of the trade, who is largely engaged in supplying booksellers and stationers with their periodicals and miscellaneous books, Mr. Williams, of Warwick Lane. books, arr. Williams, or Walvick Lanc. Williams, not altogether unnaturally, confounds two things entirely distinct, the Booksellers' Relief Fund of Paris and the Booksellers' Provident To the former we warmly welcome him, and have forwarded his donation to the treasurer, by whom it has been paid into the bank and thence transferred to Paris, where it has served to gladden the heart of some poor assistant whose home had been rendered desolate and tenantless by an incendiary Prussian shell. The Paris Booksellers' Relief Fund has nothing to do with the Booksellers' Provident Institution. The management of the latter institution is in the hands of some most respectable and very estimable men, the majority of whom have a most microscopic vision; they can only discern as booksellers those who keep shops entirely for the sale of books; they believe that all booksellers should wear black aprons, refuse to sell a quire of writing paper, and that if a customer inquired for a copy of "The London Directory" or a "Whitaker's Almanack," he should be referred to the periodical dealers round the corner. They fully believe that the world has been standing still since Mr. William Bent commenced the Literary Advertiser, and hope for a revival of the Literary Advertiser, and nope for a revival of the days when Laureate's lays were issued in quarto. Like the books they worship, they are done up in sheep or bound in calf. Long may they flourish, they are worthy, honest souls, brimful of benevolence, and we shall ne'er see their like again.

CAMBRIDGE BIBLES. Our usually well informed contemporary, the Publishers' Circular, in speaking of printers' errors, makes a statement which takes us completely by surprise. In speaking of printers' errors it says, "Even reprints...do not escape: Mr. C. J. Clay, M.A., the printer to the university, testifying to almost innumerable printers' errors in new editions of the bible in spite of every care." If this be so we would recommend Mr. Clay to put his house in order, before the next revision of the terms of the Bible patent; one of the reasons for the last renewal being that in the hands of the three authorized printers, the text was so carefully reprinted that an error could scarcely creep in; at least, such was the impression respecting the Oxford Press, and that of the Queen's Printers. There must be some mistake, we think, with regard to the Cambridge Press.

MR. LILLY'S STOCK.—The stock of rare and curious books amassed by the late Mr. Joseph Lilly is to be sold by Mr. Sotheby and Co. in the course of the present month. A catalogue has been issued, containing particulars of 2,714 lots. Amongst the books are the first four editions of Shakspeare, some rare Bibles and Testaments, early editions of poets and dramatists, a few MSS., and a great number of volumes of all kinds, which will probably attract commissions for book-buyers in all parts of the world.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.—In three lines the City Press informs us that the will of Mr. James Imray, chart publisher of the Minories, has been proved under £35,000, and that of Mr. Mark Lemon, under £800; that is, that his library, household furniture, plate, and other personal property of every description, was sworn to be of less value than the amount named. It is sad to hear it, and still more sad to hear that an application is to be made to the Government for a pension to his family, but saddest of all that a man who was in receipt of from £1,500 to £2,000 a year, should have been so utterly reckless and improvident as to leave his family almost in a state of pauperism.

HYMNALS.—The following list of hymnals used in the churches of London and its suburbs, twelve miles round St. Paul's Cathedral, is taken from "Macheson's Guide" for 1871:—

Total number of Churches . 588 — 677
The Special Hymn Books used at fewer than six churches are—Cotterill's, Burgess and Money's, Burrows', Chope's, Gurney's, Ludkin's, Sir R. Palmer's, Stone's, Tract Society's, the English, Plymouth, Stockwell, Norwich, and other collections, which are specially printed for one congregation only. Tate and Brady's collection of Psalms, with its appendix of Hymns, which was invariably bound up with Prayer Books and Church Services, and is still occasionally to be found at the end of the volume, is only used in two churches in London at the present time.

HEAVY DAMAGES FOR LIBEL.—One of the chapters of Mr. Hain Friswell's volume of "Men of Letters Honestly Criticised" is devoted to Mr. George Augustus Sala, who is drawn in colours anything but angelic. That gentleman thereupon commenced an action against the unfortunate publishers, Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton, and obtained a verdict against them with £500 damages—an amount so excessive, and so dispropritionate to any damage that his character could have received, that we must hope that the amount will be reduced on appeal. The decision come to was a right cous one; viz., that in criticism no one has a right to assail the author's character, habits, or appearance: the book alone being fair subject for criticism.

SPANISH LITERATURE.—Not long ago we requested a Spanish correspondent to furnish some account of the state of literature in that capital; his reply was, "There is nothing to gossip about. We have no new books, our literature is of the past, bookselling has gone to sleep, and nothing can arouse the lethargy of the public." We have therefore been agreeably surprised by the reception of the first number of a new literary journal, Revista di Archivos, Bibliotecas y Museos, published by Mr. H. Lemming, Madrid. Its contents are meagre in the extreme, but the mere fact of publication is a sign of life. We wish it a long and vigorous existence.

NEW PEN-HOLDER.—Messrs. Letts and Co. have patented a new self-supplying penholder, which, by a very simple contrivance, is made to hold a supply of ink sufficient to write half a dozen quarto pages with one dip.

AMSTERDAM.—Mr. Frederick Müller of this city, whose knowledge of bibliography is second to none in the book-reading part of the Netherlands, has just secured, at an outlay of 1,685 francs, a choice little volume which but few of the initiated would know how to appreciate. Our informant thus describes it:—

ANGLING.—A very curious and totally unknown book on angling, in Dutch, printed in Antwerp about 1510, occurred lately in a small sale of some hundreds of books at Antwerp. The title (translated into English) is as follows :-

"This book teaches how to catch birds by hand, and how fish may be caught by hand, and in other manners; and also at what time of the year each fish is the best. Printed by Martin van der Goes." (With typographical mark of Gottfried Backe.) No date, but about 1510. 4to, 8 leaves with 9 woodcuts, 3 of them occurring twice. This book is one of the popular chap-books. It is divided into 25 chapters, with an appendix on the months when the best fish occur. Bound up with this were 3 other books of equal rarity, and likewise totally unknown, all in Dutch. I give here the titles in an English translation:—

I. On the singularities and precious things to be found in the lands of Pope Joan. Printed at Antwerp, Jan van D'oesburgh. No date. (About 1510.) 10 leaves, illustrated by 14 woodcuts, some of them repeated. This edition has escaped the knowledge of Mr. R. H. Major, when editing his book on Prestre John for the Hakluyt Society. II. (Albericus Vespuccius) Of the new world,

II. (Albericus Vespuccius) Of the new world, and the countries newly found for the King of Portugal, by the most experienced pilot of the world. Printed at Antwerp by Jan van D'oesburgh. No date. (About 1510.) 8 leaves, with 6 woodcuts, some of them occurring twice.

III. History of Jason and Medea. Printed at Antwerp by M. Nuyts. No date. (About 1540.) With the large mark of W. Vorsterman. 32 leaves; A I and D I, 2, 3, 4, wanting. With GUY, OF GUY'S HOSPITAL. -Thomas Guy, the founder of this noble institution, was a bookseller, and dealt largely in bibles. Mr. Butterworth, the eminent law publisher of Fleet Street, is now ngaged upon a memoir of Guy, and will be glad to receive particulars of any books bearing Guy's name on the title-page. TRADE CHANGES.-Mr. Holmes informs us that he has recently sold Mr. Martin's bookselling and stationery business, 3. Briggate, Leeds, to Mr. Amold, late of 95, High Street, Barnstaple; Mr. Amold's business, at Barnstaple, to Mr. Cook, formerly in business in the Edgware Road, and being that at Weston-super-Mare; and Mr. Hor-before that at Weston-super-Mare; and Mr. Hor-nocks' business, Ridgway Road, Wimbledon, to Mr. Turner, late of Woodford.

Messrs. Stevens and Haynes have removed to their new premises; a few years ago such a house-front would have been sufficient inducement for strangers to visit Bell Yard to look at it.

Messrs. Warburton and Dobson who have had the management of the Stationery branch of Mess. H. S. King and Co., late Smith, Elder, and Co.'s business in Cornhill, have established themselves as Mercantile and Export Stationers at 120, Fenchurch Street.

GLASGOW. - Mr. James Nimmo, who, for eight rears past, has carried on a most successful wholesee newspaper, periodical, and bookselling business in S. Enoch Square, has retired in favour of Mr. George Wilson, who, retaining the old staff of assistants, will carry on the trade as heretofore, but giving more attention to the book department. Mr. Nimmo, we believe, has now turned his attention to the manufacture of mill-boards, and has

SILK PICTURES.—Mr. Bollans, of Learning-ton, forwards a specimen of his new book marker, Repared for the approaching royal nuptials. contains portraits of the Princess Louise and the Marquis of Lorne, woven in silk, as perfect as The marquis's whiskers, and the princess's eyebrows are as clearly defined as in a pen and ink drawing. The perfection arrived at these silk weavings is truly marvellous.

New Map of America. - Messrs. W. and A. Johnston have just published an unusually clear and well-drawn wall map of the Physical Geogaphy of America, North and South, not only of gapy of America, North and South, not only the land, but of the ocean. The scale is sufficiently large to show variations of vegetation and other matters, which we look for in vain in maps

IS HE A BOOKSELLER?

To the Editor of "THE BOOKSELLER."

DEAR SIR, I have received a circular soliciting donations to relieve the suffering among the by this learned their assistants in Paris, occasioned by this lamentable war. I have to acquaint you hat although I knew of The Bookseller's subscription by the mail department wished to give had gone on, the small donation I wished to give had gone hough another source, My reason for sending so was that I observed that among your Comswas that I observed that among your consisted are several members of the Board of the soldies "Booksellers" Provident Institution.

Dooksellers Provident Institution.

Some few years since a body of those gentlemen edided that I was not a Rookseller! (Don't laugh!)

Was armed that although I don't laughly in books. was argued that, although I dealt largely in books, also kept a shop, chiefly for the sale of periodis, newspapers, and magazines, which, in their gment, disqualified me from being considered α

Bookseller. The logic of this I am content to leave in the hands of your impartial readers. naturally thought that any little assistance I might be able to render this time, they would not care about receiving from one who had in solemn conclave been voted not a Bookseller. Nor am I alone, as many others in the Trade, who have been similarly treated, decline to give their assistance, thinking it would not be received. My object in calling your attention to it now is to show that upon all important trade-matters, it is necessary to obtain the co-operation of the whole trade, which body can most certainly accomplish that which only a section of it cannot.

The question of rectifying that morbid evil which has afflicted our trade for some few years (I allude to that of underselling) collapsed entirely from want of cordial co-operation. I know of many cases in which booksellers declined to join the movement from the fact that it appeared to emanate from the members of the so-called Booksellers' Provident Institution, who, as in the present case, choose to call us Booksellers, apparently, when it serves their purpose, and to ignore us in all matters effecting the Institution. The world has lately had a very practical, though sad, lesson in what Unity can accomplish, and surely none can feel it more keenly than those people in whose behalf your generous exertions are now being

In conclusion, allow me to say that had all the branches of the Bookselling Trade of these three Kingdoms conjoined in this noble movement, your Committee might have been enabled to send such an amount to Paris that would not only have alleviated their sufferings, but would have lived in the annals of Bookselling as an act becoming a body so powerful as the English vendors of food for the mind. In order to show that I have not written this to serve as an excuse for buttoning up my pocket, and although I had previously given all that I intended, I enclose a cheque for two guineas, if you care about receiving so small an amount from one who is "not a bookseller."

Yours truly, HENRY WILLIAMS. 17, Warwick Lane, Paternoster Row, 11 Feb. 1871.

THE REAL SIMON PURE. To the Editor of "THE BOOKSELLER."

SIR, -- I am requested to put the Trade, and the public, so far as I can reach it, on their guard against an unauthorised assumption of a wellestablished nom de plume. several years written as the popular author of Miss Manning has for Mary Powell," and it is with much surprise and concern that I now find another lady, Miss Selous, writing under the pseudonym of "Kay Spen," also calls herself author of "Mary Powell."

My business is simply to state, and request you will give currency to the statement, that the writer known as "Kay Spen" is not the same with the author of "The Maiden and Married Life of MARY POWELL, afterwards Mistress Milton," "More's Household," &c.

I am, Sir, yours &c. ARTHUR HALL. 25, Paternoster Row, Feb. 25th, 1871.

UNDERSELLING.

To the Editor of "THE BOOKSELLER."

SIR,—I have read much that has been written on the subject of free trade in literature, and the ruinous discounts at present offered to retail book purchasers, without finding what appears to me the facts as regards the former or the remedy as regards the latter. I do not, however, wish to occupy your columns with my particular views on these subjects, but would respectfully offer to my fellow sufferers in the Trade the following suggestions as to means by which the redress of our grievances might be attained. 1st, Let the retail booksellers in every town in Great Britain and Ireland who wish to suppress the discount system, form an association in their respective towns, and confer as to the best means of attaining that desire in their locality. 2nd, Let such conferences be held simultaneously throughout the Kingdom. 3rd. Let a general conference be arranged, at which deputies from each association would attend to consider the subjects as they bear on each locality, and carry out the resolutions that may be agreed In these matters I feel that the retailers have themselves only to blame, and not the publishers, and as we assumed the power to put them wrong, we can as easily direct the power to put them right again. "Union is strength," and "Cease to do evil, and learn to do well," are good mottoes for our present crisis.

Being willing to take my share in the organization of these conferences, any letters on the subject requiring reply, may be addressed to, "Bookseller," The Athenxum, 22, Castle Place, Belfast; "from whence I have made arrangements to have all my letters forwarded; and I shall be happy to receive direct, or read in your columns next month, any more feasible suggestions for the attainment of the object in view.

A RETAIL BOOKSELLER.

OBITUARY.

Dec. 12.—At Speenhamland, Newbury, aged 71, Mr. William Hall, bookseller and stationer. Mr. Hall was born at Godstone, Surrey, Sept. 8, 1799, but received his early education at one of the Yorkshire boarding-schools so graphically described by Mr. Dickens. On leaving school, he was apprenticed to Mr. Gye, of Bath, after which he came to London, and worked at a printing office, having for a fellow-workman the late Mr. George Berger. In 1828 he, in conjunction with a relative, purchased the business of Mr. Kitcat, at Newbury, and the new firm of Hall and Marsh speedily became known as one of the most enterprising in the county of Berks—a county history, some books of local interest, and a newspaper being published by them. At this time Newbury was on the Great Western coach road, and was at the very height of prosperity; but the railway opened a few years after diverted the traffic, and, like many of his fellow townsmen, Mr. Hall felt the change by a falling off in his business. He, however, made many friends, and was much respected by all who knew him. He continued in business almost up to the last, assisted by his son, of the same name, who now succeeds him.

Jan. 19.—At Bordeaux, aged 56, Mr. Gustave Otte. The deceased, who passed several years of his life in this country, was, we believe, first in the foreign department of Messrs. Longmans, and, on leaving them, undertook the London agency of Messrs. Didot, who opened a house in Amen Corner, but subsequently removed to King William Street. On their closing this, Mr. Otte went to Paris, and entered the service of Mad. Berger Levrault and Co., of Strasbourg, having the management of their Paris House. At the commencement of the siege he was in the service of Messrs. Meyruis, and being of German birth was, with his family, compelled to leave the city. He was at this time in a very weak state of health, suffering from bronchial disease, and, upon his settling for a time at Arcachan, his complaint got worse, and he then removed to Bordeaux, where

Feb. 9.—At Reading, aged 61, Mr. Edward Blackwell, bookseller and stationer. The deceased was a native of Hawkhurst, Kent, and at the ordinary age was apprenticed to Mr. Smith, of Maidstone, after which he went to Mr. Nash, of Tunbridge Wells, with whom he remained till 1834, when he commenced business on his own account at Reading. Here his knowledge of the business, attention to his customers, and general intelligence soon collected an extensive circle of friends. He was elected one of the Town Council, and served the office of Mayor. When, a few years ago, an attempt was made to put a stop to the evils of underselling, he took an active part in the proceedings, and attended several meetings in London. Only a few weeks ago we announced his retirement from business in favour of his two sons, Edward John and Frederick, and it was hoped that he might have been spared for some years to enjoy the ease and comfort he had so worthily earned.

Feb. 10.—At Dartford, aged 82, Mr. Augustus Applegath, an eminent mechanist and inventor, to whom the world at large, and the printing trade in particular, are largely indebted. The deceased was the son of a captain in the East India Company's navy, and commenced his business career as a printer in Nelson Square, Blackfriars, one of his employers being Mr. Alderman Kelly, for whom he printed a Bible, which had a large sale in numbers. The best press in use at this time was that which went by the name of its improver, Earl Stanhope; but the growing demand for news prompted men of genius to look for a quicker means of supply than the hand press was capable of affording, for even with relays of three men to work and take off the sheets, not more than 500 or 600 copies an hour could be produced; consequently, the most widely popular papers had not a larger circulation than from 3,000 to 6,000 copies daily. This did not satisfy Mr. Walter, the chief proprietor of the Times, and he employed a German, named Koenig, to construct a machine to be set in motion by steam. Accordingly one-the first steam printing machine -was made, but with great secrecy; and the first paper ever so printed made its appearance 28th Nov., 1814, and thus proved the possibility of printing by means of cylinders. Koenig's machine was far from satisfactory, and Applegath, who, in conjunction with his talented brother-in-law, Cowper, had taken out patents for, and had constructed, several machines, was called in, and at once improved and simplified Koenig's work. The utmost number that could be printed was 1,800 an hour; this, however, was not sufficient; he therefore made a new one, which first worked 3,600, and eventually 5,000. With the supply, the demand for the Times had risen from its maximum of 7,000 to 28,000 in 1846, and 30,000 the year after. Mr. Applegath then made a vertical machine to print from 8,000 to 10,000 an hour, and this was in use till superseded by Hoe's American machine, which again has given place to the "Walter," which now prints the paper in one continuous roll. Mr. Applegath took out no fewer than eighteen patents for various purposes, including those for the printing of bank notes, and for printing silk; but like many inventors, although he enriched others, he many inventors, attnough he enriched others, he failed to secure a fortune for himself; it is, however, gratifying to be able to say that the present Mr. Walter, in recognition of his past services, for many years made him an annual allowance of two hundred pounds. We hope that his surviving brother, or some members of his family will give a more extended memoir of one who laboured so long and so well for the benefit of mankind.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

the The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into Engi, of ish, with Analyses and Introductions. By B. b. of Jowett, M.A. 4 vols. 8vo. (Oxford: Clarendon till Press.)-At length we have before us the long-100 expected work of the Master of Balliol; and the the result, it will readily be admitted, justifies the deep era! merest that has been manifested by the public. : of As to his scheme, Mr. Jowett agrees with Mr. forte in rejecting the theory of Schleirmacher and others who discover in the Dialogues a harmanium whole the scheme that the dialogues as harmanium whole the scheme that the scheme that the scheme whole the scheme that the s ď, ear to monious whole. He not only sees no unity of in design in the whole, but seems to doubt whether in here is perfect unity in any single dialogue. There s, of course, a common spirit in the writings of plus but that is all; the hypothesis of a general plus which is worked out in the successive diagues is, he thinks, "an afterthought of the critics who have attributed a system to writings belonging to an age when system had not as yet the possession of philosophy." In this view we caircly agree. Not only is it consistent with what is beautiful agree. what is known of Plato, but it has the advantage of gring to the editor the opportunity of taking each dialogue in detail, and treating it as a separate work. This, indeed, is the plan adopted. Instead of giving us a general survey of the Platonic writings, and an examination of the Platonic philosophy as if it possessed systematic unity, Mr. owet gives us each dialogue prefaced with an laroduction, in which he incorporates known facts relating to it, analyses it, and advances his own opinions on its scope and purport. By this method the student has the opportunity of refaring to the particular dialogue he wishes to consult, and to make himself familiar with the there of the editor thereon without the trouble of further reference. according to Mr. Jowett's own statement, is to the present Plato as "the Father of Idealism;" as The aim of the introductions, "opersent riato as "the Father of Idealism;" as one who was "no dreamer," but a great philosophical genius, "struggling with the unequal conditions of light and knowledge under which he is living;" who may be "illustrated by the willings of others, but must be interpreted by his one." With this aim we can expressible, but With this aim we can sympathize, but cannot allogether agree. We may add, paren-betically, that we believe Plato to be a writer who, more than any other Greek, is to be illustrated and the philos lated and interpreted by reference to the philosophical systems of contemporary and later times; and that good will come from measuring his pre-lessons by "the standard of utilitarianism." But it is not our place to quarrel with Mr. Jowett for his personal opinions, but to congratulate him and The resonant opinions, but to congratuate in work. The translation is, on the whole, admirably made. The English is clear and elegant, sufficiently close to be a true rendering of the original, and sufficently colloquial to convey the clear meaning to English ears which it conveyed to Greek. isolally, as towards the end of the "Phædrus," and here and there in the "Crito," the editor is

lward eased

We cannot refrain from noting, among minor faults, that Mr. Jowett should think it necessary to preface the vocative case with the exclamation of the Latin Grammar. There surely can be no reason why the O should be retained. If a Greek require his work of the Commons of the Commons of the Speaker of the House of Commons and the ment; "and we had hoped the Regius Professor of Greek in Oxford would have disposed of the O in his English translation. Without professing to have read the four volumes, we may, however, fairly say from what we have examined, that the work is, and will probably long remain, the best translation of Plato we possess. With several of the editor's views in his several introductions, not of literary matters, but of social and political, we cannot agree. To take the famous "Apology" as an example, we might infer that Mr. Jowett is unacquainted with the terms of the indictment against Socrates. To us there is no doubt the philosopher was put to death for political reasons, and at the instigation of his personal enemies. Besides, the charge of corrupting the youth of his country did not refer to the corruption of their minds, but to an offence which was capital then as now.

The text followed is that of Stallbaum. Jowett, in discussing the genuineness of the writings of Plato, does not admit, with Mr. Grote, all commonly attributed to the philosopher, nor, on the other hand, does he agree with those German critics who, chiefly on the ground of internal evidence, and laying stress on the variety of doctrine and style, reject nearly half of them. He has the wisdom to choose a middle course, and we conceive he is justified by his arguments. In an appendix we have the "Lesser Hippias," the "First Alcibiades," and the "Menexenus." The editor is of opinion that nine-tenths of all the writings which have ever been attributed to Plato are undoubtedly genuine. Of those he believes to be appendix he doubts. That the task of separating appendix ne doubts. I had the task of separating by an exact line the genuine works from the spurious is impossible, is now admitted. Each editor must judge for himself, and we think Mr. Jowett has judged wisely. Without comparing the work with Mr. Munro's "Lucretius," we might truly say, in conclusion, the present edition of the dialogues is honourable not only to Mr. Jowett's industry and critical sagacity, but the university wherein he is admired and holds so dis-

The Cycle of Life: A Book of Poems for Young and Old, Town and Country. With Illustrations by various eminent artists, engraved by Whymper. (Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge.)—There is nothing the most fastidious can object to in this collection of poems. Every reader may, probably, find a favourite poem omitted; but the selection has been admirably made, and there is something to satisfy every variety of appetite. As was to be expected, works not copyright have principally been resorted to for illustrative pieces; but, by the kindness of authors and publishers, whose names are given, characteristic poems of many living English poets are presented. The illustrations are all

Moble Thoughts in Noble Language. Edited by Henry Southgate. (Ward, Lock, and Tyler.)
—Mr. Southgate is the very emperor of extractors; he seizes an author, and in an evening's reading compels him to deliver what few original thoughts there are to be found in his writings. In a previous work, "Many Thoughts of Many Minds," we had a similar collection of extracts, but not, we think, equal to this. The selection has been made from nearly six hundred authors, ranging from St. Cyril to Mr. Morris. Poets, Statesmen, Moralists, Divines, Historians, and Novelists, have all yielded up their treasures to this indefatigable gatherer. It is hard to say to whom the volume will not be found useful.

Going to Markets and Grammar Schools, &c. By George Griffith. 2 vols., 8vo. (Freeman.)— Mr. Griffith is an educational reformer, and in two large volumes gives us a series of autobiographical records and sketches of forty years spent in the Midland counties, with occasional excursions to Hirland, Wales, and different parts of England. The author of "The Endowed Schools of England and Wales," as might be expected, devotes the greater portion of his work to educational subjects, and questions germane to them; but a variety of other topics is discussed, and the two volumes may not unfairly be described as the autobiography may not unuarly be described as the automorphy of a man who has passed an active and useful life. We have history, biography, descriptions of scenery and of places, anecdotes, sketches of strange characters, poems, letters to editors, articles which have appeared in newspapers, and remarks and observations on all important events as they occurred. The writer is very communicative and His own experiences are recorded very frank. without hesitation, and his dealings with other men-some of them being eminent-are not reserved. In the arrangement of the volume there is much to censure, and in several places we find the author, as well in commonplace facts as in literary allusions, to be inaccurate. The work, however, is exceedingly interesting. Mr. Griffith has the eye and the mind to see and understand what comes within his vision, and in recording his observations he has amassed facts which will be valuable to future historians of our social and educational progress. As a history of the forty years extending from 1830 to 1870, we could not refer to any single work which is at once so useful and entertaining. Mr. Griffith is a native of Wolverhampton, and the scene of his activity, Mr. Griffith is a native of especially with regard to reform in the manage-ment of endowed schools, has mostly been in what are termed the Midland counties; but educationalists in all parts of the land will find in his pages a large amount of information that may be made available. The preface consists of a history of endowed schools, from the year 1601, when an Act was passed usually known as the "Statute of Charitable Uses," down to "The Endowed Schools" of 1869, and "The Elementary Education Act" of the same year, and the provisions of the several statutes are briefly but succinctly explained.

Folk-Song and Folk-Speech of Lancashire.—By William E. A. Axon, F.R.S.L. (Manchester, Tubbs and Brook.)—This little book is "an attempt of the County Palatine," and to afford specimens of the style and phraseology of writers whose prose and verse is written in the Lancashire dia-It will be interesting to Lancashire men of all classes in society, and to philologists, who will find that, next to the Anglo-Saxon, the Danish and Celtic languages have contributed in the greatest degree to the local vocabulary ordinarily in use among the people of Lancashire. A glossary of words is given, which explains all the strange-looking words that occur in the extracts, and differ materially from conventional English. These extracts are taken from the writings of Dr. Byrom, John Collier, alias Tim Bobbin, Robert Walker, alias Tim Bobbin the Second, Samuel Bamford, Elijah Ridings the "Rachda Felley," Edwin Waugh, and Benjamin Brierley, Samuel Laycock, and other Lancashire literary worthies well known beyond the limits of their county in the present day. Brief biographical notices of some of the above-named writers in the Lancashire dialect are interwoven in the text, and the list of their works will prove useful to those who wish to study the peculiar English in which they write.

Honduras: Descriptive, Historical, and Statistical. By E. G. Squier, M. A. (Trübner.)—The materials which form this volume are extracted from Mr. Squier's admirable work, "The States of Central America," and are now reproduced by the authority of his Excellency Don Carlos Gutierrez, minister in Great Britain of the Republic of Honduras, with a view to make the regions described by Mr. Squier better known now that the progress of a great inter-oceanic highway through its territories have invested Honduras with new and special importance. For such a purpose no publication could be more opportune. Mr. Squier, who has revised the chapters which make the book, has given a complete monograph on Honduras. Its history, geology, physical geography, natural scenery, political arrangements, and a vast amount of information such as only a man who has lived long in the country and occupied a position of importance could furnish, are all given with clearness and sufficient details to enable a reader thoroughly to understand the subject. The great international work, which, we find, is under contract to be delivered over in efficient working order in 1872, will have material effect on the trade and in developing the resources of the Central American Republics, and the volume will therefore be very acceptable to the commercial community as well as to ordinary readers. A map, and an appendix containing a variety of statistical information, accompany the work.

Cassell's Book of Birds. From the Text of Dr. Brehm. By Thomas Rymer Jones, F.R.S. To be completed in four volumes. Vol. 1. (Cassell, Petter, and Galpin).—We have already spoken in high terms of this work, when only a portion of it was completed. Now that the first volume is before us we can conscientiously renew our praise. Under the care of Mr. Rymer Jones, to whose knowledge and attention we perceive ourselves greatly indebted, we have Dr. Brehm's valuable work in such a shape as to make it acceptable to ornithologists and people whose acquaintance with the subject is of the slightest description. The illustrations, both woodcut and lithographic, are artistic, and such as to give an admirable idea of the birds whose portraits are presented. Max and Maurice. A Juvenile History, in Seven Tricks. By William Busch. From the German by Charles T. Brooks, (Boston: Roberts A Juvenile History, in Brothers.)—" Max and Maurice" is the funniest book we have looked at for a long time. It consists of six droll stories of two boys whose tricks, illustrated by pencil as well as pen, will make the dullest laugh, and those who do not usually appreciate a joke enjoy the grotesque fun of the book. It is just such a narrative of jolly events as will make a man laugh alone, and a company of young people "split their sides." We learn how Max and Maurice, "boys we almost stand in fear of," pursue their rollicksome tricks unsubdued by any We follow them in their fear of retribution. wickedness, and almost applaud them. Their tricks are comic, and although they eventuate in disaster, we have not the heart to blame. they succeed in robbing a poor widow of her four fowls; how they revenged themselves upon Mr. Buck, the tailor; how they blew up a poor unoffending organist; how they made their uncle Fritz furious by introducing to his had a common the state of the st Fritz furious by introducing to his bed an army of noxious insects; how they endeavoured to humbug a baker, got mixed up in dough, were baked, but at last ate their way out of the bakery; how, finally, their tricks were ended by being placed (by mistake, of course) in a mill, ground, and got gobbled up by geese—all this is to be learned in the book.

First Steps in English Literature. By Arthar Gilman, M.A. (New York: Hurd and Houghton.)—Of the selection and arrangement of this work we have nothing to complain; in fact, as "first steps" to English literature, it is precountry. Instead of dividing our literature into sages, in which the transitions are hardly observble, Mr. Gilman has judiciously given us the penod of English literature when the language was immature, and the period when it reached its perfection, and became what we, at least, consider mature. Under each of these headings, there are divisions in which the several external influences are traced which modified and strengthened our language and literature, and the several ages are indicated with clearness. In a small compass we have a comprehensive view of the great field. The siges of growth are indicated, and the various addences which have caused the fruit of this growth to take now one form, now another, are As a text book of literature for junior classes, it is to be highly recommended. The plan is excellent, but, as we have hinted, there is a blemish which vitiates the whole. The author's criticisms on the authors he selects as types are, in innumerable instances, unfair. Passible for him to offend in this respect he has offended. Swift's works, he tells us, are "so marked by his infidelity, malignity, and filthiness, to be of pernicious tendency." Sterne wrote as to be of pernicious tendency. an odd and immoral novel, 'Tristram Shandy,'" he was impure and profane. Such criticisms were uncalled for; in future editions we hope to see this

The English Language, its Pronunciation, &c. By B. S. Nayler. (Melbourne, Evans, Brothers: London, Tribner.)—This is a clever work, evideatly the production of an eccentric man. contains much that is new and true, and can be recommended to all who make language their sud, whether grammarians, dictionary writers, or teacher of elecution. It is impossible to give an analysis of the volume, or describe its contents. he author's method is defective, and his manner s diffuse even his title-page occupies thirty-three lines—but his attempt to show the existence of rules regarding the language appears to us to have least successful. The treatise, too, entitled "Proanciation made Easy," which is accompanied by list containing several thousands of words, exhibits his thousands. his thorough acquaintance with the subject. Mr. Nayler admits that he had not time to condense or curail his materials, and, with some pathos, makes his advanced age the excuse for no longer deferring he publication of the results of half a century's Apprience as a teacher in language. Melbourne lould congratulate itself in possessing the author. Quer Customers. By Bartle O'Barry. Aspendale. By Harriet W. Preston. (Boston: Roberts Brothers.)—This is a story of the long tried and sympathetic friendship of two highminded women, whose adventures are mixed up with other characters so as to form something of the ordinary novel shape. There is some skill shown by the writer in characterization, and in the dialogue there is an attempt at more lofty writing, and more philosophical sentiment than is usually to be found in works of this class. It is, however, interesting, well written, and readable.

Nuga Lyrica. In Three Parts. By the Rev. E. Dudley Jackson, B.C.L. (Simpkin, Marshall, and Co.)—The first portion of this publication is devoted to odes political, and on topics of general interest. The second deals only with sacred song, and is called "Lays of Ancient Palestine;" amongst which we may point out that the lines with the heading "A Morning Call" might have been less suggestively named. The third part is taken up with tales in verse, all inculcating some moral lesson. Mr. Jackson writes with taste and ease. Many of the poems in this book were printed for private circulation, and obtained for their writer such distinguished approbation that he has added to their number, and now presents them to the public in the most dainty dress.

The House of Argyll, and the Collateral Branches the Clan Campbell. From the Year 420 to the resent Time. (Glasgow: Tweedy.)—The ap-Present Time. proaching marriage of the heir to the dukedom of Argyll with a princess of England has not unnaturally directed public attention to the house from which the bridegroom springs. however, whether the people of this country are so deeply interested in the Clan Campbell as to desire information on "all the extensive ramifications of the great family of which the Marquis of Lorne will be the future head and chief." If they should, they will find it in the volume before us. We have not only the pedigree of the house of Argyll itself, but of eight other houses, which may be termed the collateral branches. Under such circumstances we are treated to a great deal of nonsense. The early history is, in fact, a tissue of absurdity not worthy of discussion. That the sancient barons from whom the favoured young Scotsman springs were descended from Arthur, Prince of the Silures, whose heroic valour is "so much celebrated by the songs of Thaleissin," may be believed the songs of the Silures whose heroic valour is "so much celebrated by the songs of Thaleissin," may be believed by the grateful peasantry on the Duke of Argyll's estates, but to concoct and publish the mis-statements which form the early part of the volume before us is an insult to the intelligence of the public.

At Jasus Feet: A Series of Papers on Christian Doctrine, Life, and Work. By R. E. Morgan. (Morgan, Chase, and Scott.)—The short essays which compose this volume originally appeared in the Revival, a periodical which is now merged in the Christian. The titles of a few of the subjects will readily explain the nature of the work. "Accepted in the Beloved;" "Life Eternal;" "Martha and Mary;" "One Thing Needful;" "So Great Salvation;" "Sinful Flesh;" "The Servant and the Sun;" &c., &c.

A BOOK OF BEAUTY.—Those who really love beautiful things, and there are few persons that do not, will do well to make themselves acquainted with a work now publishing in shilling monthly parts by Messrs. Bell and Daldy, "Alpine Plants," edited by David Worster. Each part contains three plates exquisitely printed in colours true to Nature, accompanied by descriptive letterpress. The interest of the work is not confined to Alpine travellers; all lovers of Nature must be delighted with it.

The Woman in White. By Wilkie Collins. A new edition. (Smith, Elder, and Co.)-If not the first writer who made a sensational plot and the elaboration of sensational incidents the main features of interest in a work of fiction, Mr. Wilkie Collins is certainly the first who obtained fame and profit by such means. "The Woman in White" was the precursor of a new school of novelists. Its appearance was an era in fiction. This new edition of a well-known book has been carefully revised and corrected, and certain technical errors, which, without interfering with the interest of the narrative, were yet blemishes, have been removed. Mr. Collins, in his preface, rightly attributes the success of his work to the fact that he has told a story well; and all who have read the tale will agree with him. The "Woman in White," told by more than one pen, and the course of events traced by making the persons connected with them relate their own experience, is ever fascinating as a story, and this new and cheap edition will serve to give it wider circulation than it has yet attained.

Madeleine's Trial, and other Stories. By Madame Translated from the French by Annie Pressensé. Harwood. (Hodder and Stoughton.)-The eight tales comprised in this nicely printed and prettily bound volume are translated from a French work entitled "Scenes d'Enfance et de Jeunesse." The translator has changed the names of some of the stories, and has made a few alterations in points of detail, but with these exceptions the reader is put in possession of a faithful rendering of Madame Pressense's tales, which are decidedly superior to the generality of stories written expressly for children. Each story contains a suitable moral, and we may select for special mention those entitled "The Little Marquis; or, Pride and Punishment," "Mary's First Lesson in the Law of Love," and "Anna's Birthday; or, It is more Blessed to Give than to Receive." The volume forms a suitable gift book for a girl, or a prize book for the junior classes in a girls' school.

The Fisher Girl. By Björnstjerne Björnson. Translated from the Norwegian. By S. and E. Hjerleid. (Trübner.)—"The Fisher Girl" is a delightful companion to Herr Björnstjerne's "Ovind." It has the same simplicity of structure and treatment, and presents us with similar pictures of Scandinavian life as those to which we are introduced in the former volume. The little fisher girl's career is not checked by many startling adventures, and the tone is not very exciting in which it is told; but there is a charm in the narrative which cannot fail to fascinate the reader. In addition to the interest which attaches to the story as a record of the life of a peasant-girl with art tendencies, who eventually emerges as an actress at the metropolitan theatre, the volume has value as a sketch of Norwegian life drawn by a competent pencil. The translation has all the freshness of an original work.

On the Eve: A Tale. By Ivan S. Tourguéneff. Translated from the Russian by C. E. Turner. (Hodder and Stoughton.)—Tourguéneff, thanks to the labours of translators, is now well known to English readers. The descriptions in his novels of Russian scenery and Russian people have had the effect of making English people more familiar with the dominions of the Czar than any formal works on the history of Russia. He is undoubtedly the best known writer in the Russian language, and the new tale, which has every appearance of being carefully translated by Mr. Turner, has all the author's characteristic merits. The story is modern, and is full of interest.

To which are added Imaginary . Table Tulk. Conversations of Pope and Swift. By Leigh (Smith, Elder, and Co.)—It must be doubted if a new edition of this book is really called for. Leigh Hunt, who owes his fame not to the original works of his own pen, but to the fact that he was able to make himself known to men of genius, was never an original thinker. He wrote gracefully and with simplicity, and was able to say pretty things prettily; but nothing he has left us is likely to live. The "Table Talk" has reference to a variety of subjects on which the opinions of a man of original thought would be of value. There is, however, nothing in the volume which the world would not willingly let die. Some of the author's views, given with much flippancy, have already been disproved by time. His notions of Goethe, a man it was impossible for him to understand, he himself controverts in his preface; and there is scarcely an opinion which is altogether to be trusted. We might We might instance the paragraph entitled "Clerical Titles, in which there are three attempts at jokes, and more than three blunders. The paragraph consists of only thirty-three lines.

Hitherto: A Story of Yesterdays. By Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney. New edition. (Sampson Low and Co.)—"The Gayworthys," by Mrs. Whitney, was well received in this country, and "Hitherto," a work by the same author, which equals it in merit, deserves similar success. As a story of American life and expressions of American thought, it deserves the recognition which the issue of a second popular edition proves that it has secured. In its plot, incidents, description of scenery and characters, "Hitherto" is a work we can recommend to all English readers of fiction who like transcripts from real life artistically treated. The Forest House, and Catherine's Lovers. By MM. Erckmann-Chatrian. Translated by John Simons. (Sampson Low, Son, and Marston.)—These stories, both autobiographies, have the charm which belongs to all the productions of the same authors. The plot is not very elaborate in either; but the clear characterizations, the admirable paintings of scenery, and the care with which the incidents have been selected and represented, will make both stories acceptable to all English readers who have made themselves familiar with the same authors' more famous works.

the same authors' more famous works.

The Family of Sunny Brow. By J. B. (Durham: Andrews & Co.; London: Simpkin, Marshall, and Co.) - In writing this novelette, which is styled in alliterative language, "A tale of victorious virtue and vanquished vice," the intention of the author has not been "exclusively to amuse, but to "illustrate the great truth, that a firm and unswerving adherence to right principle will, in general, compass even its worldly ends more successfully than the most consummate arts of a dishonest and unscrupulous policy." The story in short is a homily, in the guise of fiction, on the good old adage "Honesty is the best policy." The story opens with the account of the unintender tional murder of a lady by an unlucky shot intended for her cousin, a clergyman, in whose gig she was proceeding homewards to the rectory on a visit, when the pair were stopped by some ruffians who had been lying in wait to rob the rector on his way from York. The clergyman's son, a boy of seven, was a witness of the murder and the maltreatment of his father; and the interest of the story centres on his efforts in after life to trace out the perpetrators of the outrage. The book takes its name from the village to which the clergyman subsequently removes with his family, and where the denouement of the tale is worked out.

The City of London Directory for 1871. (City Prass Office, Aldersgate Street.) "The City Directory" has special aims and special merits. As a book of reference for city men it has no rival, other directories give information which comprises much of what is here given; but the present work, specially designed for city men, contains only what is of service for them. In the best form for reference we have all the multifarious knowledge necessary for a commercial man. The volume comprises a "Conveyance Guide," which indicates all means of communication by river and sea for passengers and goods; a "Streets Guide," arranged in compact and convenient form; an "Alphabetical Guide," in which the name, addres, and trade of every person in the City of London are given; a "Trades' Guide," classified under the various trades or professions, with cross references; a "Public Companies' Directory;" a "Livery Companies' Guide;" and a "Corporation Directory," in which is detailed the name and address of every member of the corporation, and its principal officers. The whole forms a complete directory of the city of London, and its ar-rangements and details are so well presented, that they are intelligible to the most ordinary intelli-gence. As we have hinted, the "Livery Companies' Directory" is a special feature. We should like to quote the whole of the space devoted to the "Stationers' Company," which is full of interest, but must content ourselves with the following extract which may be useful to some of our readers:—"Fees Payable.—Upon taking up the freedom: by patrimony or servitude, 15s.; by purchase, £16 18s. 6d.—Upon admission to the livery, 151 11s.—Upon election to the Court, they must have served the office of warden and renterwaden, paying fees, in all, about £40." The volume is admirably and clearly printed, and well bound; and a distinctly printed map gives the panishes and wards of the city, with all the alterations that have been made up to February of this year.

Chambers's Journal, like good wine, improves as it gets older; the volume for 1870 is excellent, there being scarcely an article of an uninteresting character. The tales of the volume are "Gwendoline's Harvest," by the author of "Lost Sir Massingberd," and "Bred in the Bone," by an anonymous author.

The Evangelical Magazine.—The publishers say that the Lithographic Portraits having proved a failure, owing to the large number required to be worked off from the same stone, the managers have resolved to return to the Engraved Portraits after the May number.

The Paper Mills Directory for 1871 (Kent and Co.) is now an institution, and scarcely needs more than a mere mention. It is so useful to publishers as well as stationers, that it ought to form an item in every well-furnished counting house.

LITTLE FOLKS.—If any reader wishes to make his children happy, let him procure the new publication of Messrs. Cassell's, "Little Folks," and, without saying a word, place it in the way of his little family. He will see them take up the monthly part, retire into a corner, and there, quiet as mice, turn over its leaves, and study its pages. Immediately after, there arises a hum, and a lively, animated talk and discussion; even the smallest of the children takes part in it. The discussion is caused by the twenty-four large and the thirteen small pictures; presently one of the elder ones proposes to read a story, and then all is quiet till the has finished, and a request comes from one of the smaller ones to read about "Yellow Duke," or other funny folks. All this has occurred amongst our "Little Folks," who appear to find endless amusement in the work.

Debrett's Illustrated House of Commons and the Judicial Bench. 1871. Compiled and Edited by Robert Henry Mair. (Dean and Son.)—Every needful information respecting the legislators of the Lower House and the learned gentlemen who occupy the Judicial Bench will be found in Mr. Mair's useful compendium. The editor seems to have conscientiously devoted himself to his task. We have tested his work in numerous cases, and have found it to be invariably correct. The coats of arms of individuals and of corporations given increase the interest of the volume.

increase the interest of the volume.

Debrett's Peerage—Debrett's Baronetage, for 1871.
(Dean.)—These must now be regarded as the standard works upon the subject; and when we wish to know Who's who, if we find a statement in Debrett, we receive it in most implicit faith. Both volumes are too well known to need description.

Casseli's Illustrated History of the War.—Two parts of this work have appeared; the text is carefully and impartially written. Some of the woodcuts are good, some very poor. One feature, and a very commendable one, is that of the plans of battle-fields at the commencement and at the close of the day; thus, Sedan is given at 7 A.M. and at 2 P.M. We by this means see how the French were hemmed in.

The Clergy List for 1871 presents itself in the same handy form as heretofore. We have been in the habit of referring to it for many years, and with scarcely an exception have found it accurate and trustworthy—at least, as trustworthy as such a work can be made with the materials at the disposal of the Editor.

The School Board has made its appearance. The notion appears to be a good one. Amongst the contributors are Mr. Hepworth Dixon, Mr. Blanchard Jerrold, Mr. Edward Walford, Mr. J. M. Capes, and Lord Lyttelton. It is not fair to judge of a work by its first number, but on one point there can be no mistake—like the title-page of Fun, the School Board Chronicle is made to carry as many advertisements as could be collected, and these are inserted in all directions, so that the report of Mr. Hepworth Dixon's previously unreported speech is followed by Mr. Jay's dissertation on "mourning," and Potts' "ventilating system" somewhat mars "Our Intentions," as expressed on the same page.

The Churchman's Companion (Masters) enjoys a good circulation amongst the High, but not expressly High Church party; it contains tale, chapters of history, poetry, and a good deal of information upon Church matters. It has done good service for many years in fostering a love of ecclesiastical art, and in impressing theological opinions—subjects in which Church people were woefully deficient when this little periodical was first commenced.

Iona. By the Duke of Argyll. (Strahan.)—This is the second edition of the Duke's little book on Iona. It is well written, and the manner in which the author blends the life of St. Columba with descriptions of picturesque scenery is felicitous. Most readers on laying down the volume, will, we fancy, desire to pay a visit to the Hebrides, and see for themselves what the Duke of Argyll has so well described for their delectation.

Gout and Rheumatic Gout: A New Method of Cure. By John W. Foakes, M.D. (Philip and Son.)—Writing not to men of science, but addressing himself to sufferers from gout and rheumatic gout, the author gives an account of his own method of curing these distressing maladies, and prints cases of cures so extraordinary agive hope to all afflicted.

Co-operative Housekeeping. By Mrs. C. F. Peirce. (Edinburgh: John Ross and Co.)-Though we very much doubt that anything in the shape of co-operative housekeeping would find favour with either men or women in this country, we are bound to allow that this little volume, by an American lady, which she appropriately styles "romance in domestic economy," contains many sensible observations and suggestions that may afford useful hints to English maids and matrons. The book, which is written for American ladies, advocates co-operation among a certain number, greater or less, of housekeepers, who may form a society for the purpose, for the performance of the work now ordinarily done at home in the kitchen, the laundry, and the sewing-room. If this were done, the writer argues that it would relieve the ladies of the family from many harassing pursuits, enable them to do with one servant, and leave them more time to spend in the society of their friends and acquaintances. How far this would be desirable is an open question; but it seems tolerably certain that if the mistress of a household chooses to abdicate her true position and take to moneymaking, home affairs must either be neglected altogether, or performed by a substitute, and be only half done. The book will furnish hints to those ladies who are now agitating for political rights, but the principle of co-operation in housekeeping can never be widely adopted in this country. An Englishman's house will always remain his castle, and the feeling which prevails against any community of interest in household affairs would never tolerate a state of things that may be suitable for France and America.

Beton's Dictionary of Practical Recipes and Every-day Information. An entirely new Domestic Cyclopædia, arranged in alphabetical order, and usefully Illustrated. (Ward, Lock, and Tyler).—Without any introduction, and printed without any special plan, we have in this volume a vast mass of information on almost every conceivable subject connected with domestic economy, from instructions "How to Blow out a Candle," down to rules "How to Manage Infants." In alphabetical order, the housewife will find in the compiler an intelligent, and, we believe, a trust-worthy guide, philosopher, and friend.

The Law of Naturalization, as amended by the Naturalization Acts, 1870. By John Cutler, B.A. (Butterworths.) — Mr. Cutler's title-page fully explains his object and his work. In addition to the chief subject, which forms the body of the little book, the editor gives a brief sketch of the antecedent English law relative to the status or condition of subjects and aliens, with occasional reference to the kindred laws of foreign states. Any one who makeshimself master of Mr. Cutler's treatise will be familiar with the law of naturalization, and the sweeping changes therein which were made last session. An Appendix and an Index add to the value of the work.

The Elementary Education Act. 1870. With Introduction, Notes, and Index. By Hugh Owen, Jun. Fifth Edition. (Knight and Co.)—The Elementary Education Act, which forms the basis of our forthcoming system of National Education, is one of the most important measures which have passed the legislature, and its provisions affect the whole population. Mr. Owen's edition of the Act, in which he gives explanatory notes, will be found of value by every board of education in Great Britain. A fifth edition has proved its value.

Les Clubs de Londres. Par Jean Harley, 1413-1715. (Plackett and Moody.)—It is remarkable in a country like England, which is eminent for its sociable institutions, that it has been reserved for a Frenchman to write the most exhaustive and entertaining history of clubs. M. Harley, for many years a resident in London, with exceptional opportunities of investigating his subject, and with peculiar aptitude for chronicling his experiences, has produced a most lively little work, full of research and information. Some discursive papers have appeared on this subject in various magazines; but M. Harley has treated his theme archeologically, and with a more sustained and decided touch. He has in the brochure before us only brought the history of clubs political, social, and eccentric, down to the year 1715; but in this volume there is a wealth of anecdote and facts, at once interesting and historically important. We are glad to know that M. Harley is progressing with the second and more complete volume, which, when concluded, will be a valuable addi-tion to English social literature. This book deserves, or demands, translation into English, and it will be a useful text-book on a very national subject. We may congratulate M. Harley on his execution of a very pleasant and readable book.

Cassell's Household Guide: Being a Complete Encyclopædia of Domestic and Social Economy, and forming a Guide to every Department of Practical Life. Vol. 2. (Cassell.)—There is hardly a subject of household and domestic economy which is not treated in this work. Medicine, cookery, gardening, household amusements, domestic chemistry, and a variety of other matters form the text, and each of the parts into which the volume is divided has a heading, "Odds and Ends," under which a vast mass of useful facts which could not be otherwise arranged find place. There are numerous illustrations on wood and in colours.

Life of Sir Walter Scott, Bart. By the Rev. George Gilfillan. (Edinburgh: Oliphant and Co.)—The Rev. George Gilfillan, whose "Literary Portraits" gave him a certain amount of celebrity as a biographer, has in this life sought to produce something between the large work of Lockhart and the numerous slight biographies which abound. He admits that "he has not catered for gossip," and his book will be found to contain little, although there are not a few new facts sprinkled throughout. It aims rather at being "an accurate summary of the leading events in Scott's life, and a candid, full, and genial criticism on his principal works." As connected in time with that centenary celebration which is a hand, the book is in season. It is written in a good spirit, is free from the well-known defects of manner which characterized Mr. Gilfillan's previous works, and contains in short compass just such facts relating to "the great magician of the north" to make the volume popular with all kinds of readers.

Our National Resources, and How they are Wasted. An omitted Chapter in Political Economy. By William Hoyle. (Simpkin and Co.)—Mr. Hoyle attributes all our misery to the use of intoxicating drinks. He sees depression in trade; he finds there is a surplus of good workmen without work; and he attributes all the evis of civilization to alcohol. The burden of taxation, crime, pauperism, and demoralisation, that results from the liquor traffic are, he says, becoming every day more and more oppressive; and, he continues, "the time is fast hastening when, if we do not grapple with the evil, we shall sink beneath its weight, and take our place in the second or third rank among the nations of the earth." Unless we adopt speedy means to prevent it, we shall fall like Carthage, Rome, Spain," &c.

Treatise on the Physical Cause of the Death of Christ and its Relation to the Principles and Practice of Christianity. By William Stroud, M.D.-This is the second edition of Dr. Stroud's work, which differs from the former only in containing as an appendix a letter on the subject from that eminent physician Sir James Y. Simpson. The subject treated is involved in obscurity; but as the death of Christ is the most cardinal feature in the system of our religion, it is of prime importance. Never yet has the precise and immediate cause of this momentous event been thoroughly explored, and the attempt of the present writer to elucidate it must be received with becoming respect. Dr. Stroud assumes that neither the ordinary sufferings of crucifixion, nor the wounds inflicted by the soldier's spear, nor an unusual degree of weakness, nor the interposition of supernatural influence, was the immediate cause of the Saviour's death. His conclusion is that the erent was produced by "agony of mind producing rapture of the heart." He addresses himself to his subject with such reverence that no Christian reader will be shocked by his treatment, but will, on the contrary, derive gratification from the perusal of the treatise.

Anti-Janus: An Historico-Theological Criticism of the Work entitled "The Pope and the Council," by Junu. By Dr. Hergenröther, Professor of Canon Law, and of Ecclesiastical History, at the University of Wurzburg; and translated from the German by J. B. Robertson, Esq., Professor of Modern History and English Literature, at the Catholic University, Dublin; with an Introduction by him, giving a History of Gallicanism, from the reign of Louis XIV. down to the present time. (Dublin: W. B. Kelly. London: Burns, Oates, and Co. New York: Catholic Publishing Company.)—This very comprehensive title will convey a good notion of the book itself. It will be remembered that "The Pope and the Council" created a great sensation in ecclesiasticalcircles about the time the Œcumenical Council met; Papal Infallibility being boldly questioned and the work itself condemned by the authorities at Rome. Here we have all the arguments of "Janus" taken scriatim, and, if not refuted, at least discussed and challenged. The whole history of the controversy is told by the translator in a preface of forty-eight pages, and the text of the German tratice is amply annotated. Those who have read the work of "Janus," and those who, like the translator, consider it, "not only schismatical and heretical beautiful by the schimatical by the schim heretical, but in some respects impious," cannot ignore his powerfully-written reply—the two volumes being, indeed, important contributions to the polemical literature of the time.

The Rible open for Children. By Mary Bradford. (Lockwood and Co.)—The writer of this book has made a successful attempt to relate several of the principal narratives embodied in the Old and New Testaments, in simple language, and in an easy style, suited to the comprehension of young children, who are thereby led to gain a more intimate acquaintance with the principal events in Bible history than they would if they had read them for the first time in the Bible itself. The story of the Creation, the disobedience of our first parents, the Flood, and the history of Noah, Abraham, and all the most prominent characters in Holy Writ, the chief events in the life of our Saviour, and a few in the early history of the Church in the time of the Apostles, are narrated briefly but clearly; and to each story a brief conversation in the form of question and answer is appended on subjects that have been mentioned in the story itself.

The Life of Simon William Gabriel Bruté, D.D., first Bishop of Vincennes. With a Preface by Lady Herbert. (Burns, Oates, and Co.)—Lady Herbert has introduced us to a very estimable man. Father Bruté, afterwards Bishop of Vincennes, was a zealous and charitable son of the Church, and his Life, by Dr. Bayley, Bishop of Newark, will be read with pleasure by numbers who do not belong to the communion of the writer. Bishop Bruté was born at Rennes, the capital of Brittany, in 1779, and his career from that date till his death in his own diocese in America, in 1839, is recorded with loving regard by the biographer. His childhood in France, his recollections of the French Revolution, his life as a student of medicine, his missionary life in America, and his life as a prelate of his Church, form the several sections into which the little work is divided; and to this the noble editor has added some of the bishop's correspondence, from which, we think, a clearer insight into his nature than the biographical facts furnish will be derived.

Rome, the Church, and the Jews: An Exposition of the Book of Revelation. Showing the Marvellous Events indicated in Prophecy. By J. Williams. (Stevenson.)—Mr. Williams gives us his conclusion in this volume as to events which are indicated in prophecy, and which will seriously influence the world—particularly of those "which should commence A.D. 1871, and will affect, directly or indirectly, all the powers of Europe, England figuring prominently as a missionary agency." This extract from the author's own words will give the reader an idea of the aim and object of the book, which is written in the usual style of all such treatises.

Primeval Man Unveiled; or, The Anthropology of the Bible. (Hamilton, Adams, and Co.)—The anonymous author of this work may be regarded as the champion of the non-scientific, or rather unscientific view of the question he discusses. His arguments are not very clear, and the premises he advances are such as by the great majority of readers will be declined. In a previous work, printed in 1858, the author broached a theory on the physical constitution of angels. In this, the prominent place is given to an attempted solution of the problem of the person and history of Satan. There are several appendices, and numerous lithographic plates designed to illlustrate the writer's views.

The Argument, a priori, for the Being and the Attributes of the Absolute One, and the First Cause of all Things. By William Honyman Gillespie. Fifth Edition. (Houlston and Sons.)—That this tractate has gone into a fifth edition is proof of the public interest in the question discussed. As far as arguments a priori are concerned, Mr. Gillespie is very effective. But the class of people whom such arguments will not convince is a very large one. The new edition of his work, however, proves there is a sufficiently large audience for the author's reasoning.

Our Lady's Lament, and the Lamentation of S. Mary Magdalene. No. 1. Early English Religious Literature. Edited by C. E. Tame. (London: Washbourne.)—This book is well worthy the attention of Churchmen and Catholics, more especially at this season of Lent. As an aid to devotion it is most admirable. All who are striving to sosten and turn heavenwards the minds of this cold-hearted age will find much pleasure in perusing its calm, holy, and pious thoughts, the expressions of one long since gone to his rest.

The Churchman's Shilling Magazine, recent edited by the Rev. R. H. Baynes, of Covenwill be edited by Mr. C. Mackeson, a name known in connection with the churches of Los

The New Testament according to the Authorized Version, with Analysis, Notes, &c .- (Bagster and Sons).—At the time when we are awaiting a new authorized version of the Scriptures, the Messrs. Bagster issue a new edition of the New Testament according to the present version. They give no fewer than twenty-five paragraphs in the introduction, in explanation of the characteristics which form the features of the issue. Of these the chief seem to be the clearness of arrangement, simplicity of detail, and conscientious accuracy in the text. The figures indicating chapters and verses have been placed in the margin, and the heading of chapters have been omitted through-Each paragraph, too, stands distinct, and the leading thought or subject of the paragraph is clearly given in the margin, with a stu-dious avoidance of anything like putting a private Without any construction or interpretation. special originality, the volume, which is well printed, will not be unacceptable.

One Thousand Gems from the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher. Edited and Compiled by the Rev. G. (Hodder and Stoughton.) - This D. Evans. volume contains one thousand extracts from the published sermons, writings, and lectures of the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, one of the most popular preachers in New York, and the brother of Mrs. Beecher Stowe, the authoress of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." It is intended, in some measure, as a companion volume to "Life Thoughts" and "Home Truths," two series of extracts from Mr. Beecher's early works, which were published some years ago. It contains, as may be readily imagined from the great number of selected passages that have thus been brought together, illustrations upon themes as varied in character as they are numerous. An excellent index of the subject-headings of the extracts is given at the end, which is a great aid to the reader in looking out a passage on any particular subject. The frontispiece is a portrait of Mr. Beecher, nicely engraved on steel, and apparently copied from a photograph.

Mant's Ancient Hymns from the Roman Breviary. Fcap. 8vo. (Rivingtons.)—The late Bishop Mant did good service to the Church by his various publications, but by none more than in his translations of the Latin hymns. He showed that they were a legacy to the Church Catholic, and not merely to the Roman section of it. Most of these hymns are now incorporated in modern hymnals, although but few are given in the Bishop's words. Chandler, Neale, Irons, Williams, and a host of others have since followed in Dr. Mant's footsteps. Added to the volume are some original hymns.

The Life of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. By the Rev. John Fleetwood, D.D. (Virtue and (Virtue and Co.)-A new, cheap, and well-printed edition of this good old work which, up to the present time, has not been issued in a form sufficiently portable for ordinary use. The present edition, however, can be held in the hand with ease, and is printed in type large and bold enough to meet the requirements of those whose eyesight may begin to fail in a slight degree. It is almost needless to say that the events in the life of our Saviour, from his birth to his crucifixion, entombment, resurrection and ascension, are narrated in a proper sequence, d accompanied with appropriate comments and marks. A few illustrations are given, some of hich are from paintings by the old masters, that of the "Miraculous Draught of Fishes" being a by of one of the cartoons of Raphael, now in Couth Kensington Museum. It would add to South Kensington Museum. e interest of the engravings if the names of the unters of the originals were appended to them.

A Parallel History of France and England. Consisting of Outlines and Dates. By C. M. Yonge. (Macmillan.)—Here, in intelligible form, Miss Yonge has prepared for students a tabular history, by which they will be able to see at a glance what events were contemporary in those two countries which, as the author remarks, "have always been so closely intermingled for mutual evil or good." The several periods in the history of both nations, from the earliest time down to the proclamation of the Republic in France this year, are distinctly divided, and under each the principal events are given briefly and with much clearness. As a skeleton history for reference, it is highly useful.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

From Messrs. Bell and Daldy.—Three new volumes of the cheap re-issue of the Aldine Poets, being the works of Alexander Pope, with Life by Alexander Dyer, the best editor of old poetry that this age has seen.

From Mr. J. Bray, St. James' Street, Brighton:
—Advent Sermons. By Father Ignatius. A course of four sermons preached during Advent, 1870, at Brighton, by the Rev. Father Ignatius, on "The Judgment." We cease to wonder at the sensation caused by Father Ignatius's preaching after reading these sermons; they are as stirring and outspoken as anything ever uttered by Wesley or Whitefield, and utterly unlike the sermons we are ordinarily accustomed to hear on Sundays in modern churches and chapels. A spade is here called a spade, and a burglar is not euphonised into a midnight depredator. Modern Infidelity, three sermons, also preached at Brighton, by the same.

From Messrs. Bull, Simmons, and Co.—Eventide; or, The Love To-day and the Love for Aye. A novel, in three volumes. By Mrs. A. Locke.

From Messrs. Burns, Oates, and Cc.—Tales of Humour; a new and choice collection, mostly from the French, forming a nice companion to our best English collections. Braton Legends, also from the French, full of the strange fancies current in that strange part of France. Tales of Celebrated Men; an account of the youth and childhood of Gassendi Ribeiva Amyot, Watteau, Rubens, Guttenberg, and others.

The symbols referred to are those mysterious and prophetic persons mentioned in the Old Testament, Melchizedek, Shiloh, the Captain of the Lord's Host, the Great Shepherd, the Teacher of the Weary, the Refiner and the Healer, the Shekinah, and one or two New Testament designations; treated in Mr. Stanford's usual suggestive style, and evidencing a considerable summent of reading. The New Sunday School Time Book. Edited by James Sampson. Second edition. The Coming of the Bridegroom. By the late Dean Alford. E., in which are described the adventures of a family that emigrated to our New Dominion, and the contrast between their condition at home and in the new world is well described. Although religious matters are bound up with the adventures described, the little tale is sufficiently curious to interest readers who have no care for polemics. and the miseries entailed upon the people through the ambition of sovereigns. Stories of the Italian Reformers, from the French, by Mrs. Overend. Aunt Mabel's Prayer. By Mrs. Henderson. A Church of England Monthly Magazine.

HE age in which our lot is cast is the age of rapid rather than deep reading: the fact is perhaps mainly due to the stress and strain of modern business and travel. Reading with not readers means recreation, and hence the demand for healthful and not too laborious Christian likerstares means recreation, and nence the definition of the pulses of society, the likerstare is increasing year by year.

And yet in the deliberate judgment of those who are well able to feel the pulses of society, the ground is very far at present from being wholly occupied. There are thousands and tens of thousands of parents, among rich and poor, who have not yet found that abundance of current literature which they altogether sympathize. And this, it is believed, is the case especially in the reat, and with which they altogether sympathize. And this, it is believed, is the case especially in the bookbuff Family Circles of our own beloved Church. "Evening Hours" is established to supply this wall. Its principles will be considered to the Church of England. That Is principles will be in hearty accordance with the Articles and Liturgy of the Church of England, -Catholic, Protestant, Evangelical; ever appealing to the supreme authority of God's Word written.

Announcement to the Trade, Advertisers, and the Public.

N December 3rd, 1870, soon after the publication of my Christmas number, Messrs. Clowes and Messrs. Wrigley, who now hold the Copyright of my old Magazine, (Indian Society), finding that English Society was becoming a dangerous competitor, filed a Bill in Chancery to restrain me from publishing it or any Magazine calculated to injure theirs. caucity to restrain me from publishing it or any Magazine calculated to injure theirs. They sough as from the Court to stop me on two principal grounds—(1), Similarity of the works by colourable minimum, and an alleged intention to represent the one as a continuation of the other; (2), Breach of a dod covenant not to injure London Society, contained in a deed to which I was a party with Messrs. righty in the early days of the old Magazine—of which covenant more anon.

On the 17th of December the Motion came before Vice-Chancellor Malins, who, taking a constraint and kindly view of matters, suggested some arrangement, a mode to which neither side seemed adined to listen. Fer would have found great difficulty, he said, in doing anything on the score of the similarity if we had been independent traders, but he thought the covenant still material (so far as before him at that reliminary stage), and, putting both together, granted a prospective Injunction to take effect in projected, but required to alter the ordinary cover before bringing out the February number.

Fortified by this advice I carried the case to the Court of Appeal and before the Lords Justices on the 17th current, and succeeded. Lord Justice James remarked that under the "composite" view taken by the Vice-Chancellor, it speared as if there was not a case on any one ground, but as if two half-equities had been stuck legether to make a whole—one half on "similarity," and another half on "covenant." This their lordships held was not ground for an injunction. When a new Magazine like English Society is in litigation there must necessarily exist in the minds of the annual new Magazine like English Society is to the nature and force of the proceedings. when a new Magazine like English Society is in litigation there must necessarily exist in the limits of the general public and Advertisers a certain perplexity as to the nature and force of the proceedings, peralling more or less until the quarrel is finally settled. This has caused me to hold in reserve very apportant advertising and other personnels of the development of my Magazine this year, and it leads more or less until the quarrel is finally settled. This has caused me to hold in reserve very maporiant advertising and other measures for the development of my Magazine this year, and it leads as to take a farther step, which is the object of this Announcement. The two most important numbers of the year, on account of their very large circulation, are, "The Holiday Number," and "The of the regular numbers I shall publish in due tourse, but suspend the publication, the regular numbers this way. THE EASTER HOLIDAYS.—The office of THE BOOKSELLER will be closed from Thursday, April 6th, to Tuesday, April 11th. As scarcely any business is done on Easter Monday, it is probable that most of the wholesale booksellers will be closed on that day; and if the bill before parliament becomes law, both Easter and Whit Monday will in future be kept as close holidays, as also one day in August.

BARNSTAPLE — Mr. H. T. Cook, from London, has purchased the business of Mr. E. J. Arnold.

CORRECTIONS. - In the last BOOKSELLER the price of Mr. Proctor's work on "The Sun," published by Messrs. Longman, should have been given as 145, not 10x. 6d., as printed. Carleton's "Traits and Stories," published by Mr. Tegg, should have been 15x, not 10x; and Spencer's "Things New and Old," 12x, not 12x. 6d. Mr. F. S. Ellis bookseller and publisher of LUDGATE HILL.—The establishment of Mr. Fellowes is closed; a card on the door informs us that Mr. Fellowes will be found in London House Yard. The business is one of the oldest in London; the father of the present proprietor in 1827 succeeded Mr. Joseph Mawman, who died in that year. Mawman bought the business of the celebrated Dilly, and at first carried it on in the Poultry. The late Mr. Fellowes published many useful books, including the Encyclopædia Metropolitana, Rose's Biographical Dictionary, secropoitana, Kose's Biographical Dictionary, and the Works of Archbishop Whately, Dr. Amold, Bishop Hampden, and Bishop Blomfield. Mr. James Gilbert, of 18, Gracechurch Street, has taken into partnership Mr. W. B. Hawes, who for the partners who, for the past twenty-six years, has been with Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall, & Co. LONDON CATALOGUE OF PERIODICALS.—From summary we have made of Messrs. Longman and Co.'s Catalogue of Periodicals, the 30th here are published in London 364 monthly, 70 warterly 204 monthly, 70 warterly 204 monthly, 70 warterly 204 monthly, 70 warterly 204 monthly 204 mont narterly, 294 weekly, and other periodicals, bedes 41 Transactions of various Societies, making total of 769 periodical publications. During past year there have been 89 periodicals dis-ntinued, and 88 new ventures started. During

THE NEW LECTIONARY.-Had the Government wished to pass the bill authorizing a new Table of Lessons, last year, they could have done so without much trouble, but they showed no desire, and drove off the discussion of the bill till so late a period, that the grouse were ready to be shot, and members were unwilling to stay in town any longer. As a necessary result, the trade in church services, and to a great extent in prayer books also, fell off very considerably, and hundreds of men and women were either partially or entirely thrown out of work. thrown out of work. A meeting of working men and women was held at the Freemasons' Hall, on the evening of March 7th, and Mr. Thomas Hughes kindly presided. Many speeches were made, and it was resolved to send a deputation to the Home Secretary, to urge him to expedite the passage of a new bill. The bill, same as last year, has since been passed through the Lords and has reached the Commons, but has been shelved till after Easter, when there seems to be little doubt that it will pass. It is, however, probable that some alterations may be proposed even at the last moment, and that, in consequence, the stock of church services, printed in anticipation of the change, will be useless; it will therefore be unsafe to put a fresh book into stock till the bill has actually passed the House of Commons.

CAMBRIDGE BIBLES.—As we suspected, there was a mistake, and a very grave one too, in the statement made by our contemporary, the Publishers' Circular, respecting the correctness of Bibles printed at the Cambridge Press. What Mr. Clay, the printer, said was, that at Cambridge every effort was made to secure correctness, and that no error was allowed to pass, while, in the Bibles printed at private presses, and even under the revision of the Bible board in Scotland, some very serious errors had passed unnoticed. The fact is, that at the three authorized presses, such precautions are taken that an error is scarcely possible except from accident. The only occurrence of the kind that we have heard of for a long time happened from three or four letters getting knocked out of the corner of a page just as it was about to he stereotyped; the workman, instead of returning the page to the composing-room, put the letters in again himself, but in their wrong order, and thus altered the word; this, however, was not at Cambridge; the moment the error was discovered, the sheet was cancelled, and a fresh one printed. The authorized English Bibles are, in fact, all but immaculate, so far as typography is concerned.

EASTER CARDS.—Mr. S. B. Beal, of St. Paul's

Churchyard, has issued some appropriate presentation cards for Easter, emblematic of the season, containing texts of scripture printed within richly illuminated borders, mounted with some exceedingly good miniature photographs. It is remarkable that while Christmas cards of every description have been published, there have been none of Lent and Easter-seasons when more than at any other time devotional books, &c., are in request,

The Cheap Edition of Carlyle's Works commenced by Messrs. Chapman and Hall will place higher by Messrs. Chapman and train win place the great thinker's opinions in the hands of a large class of readers whose means debarred them hitherto from purchasing them. Book-buyers, so called, are generally of the more respectable classes, and are apt to suppose that all others who have books are like themselves and that whether buy books are like themselves, and that whether the book is published at 2s., 2s. 6d., or 3s. 6d. can really make little difference. But it is not so; there is a large number of persons to whom the purchase of a two-shilling volume means going without a meat dinner three or four days a week; therefore to place Carlyle's writings within their reach is a great boon.

LIBEL SUITS.—Lawyers have been reaping a rich harvest out of some suits for libel upon Madame Jenny Lind and her husband, Mr. Gold-An obscure American paper, out of sheer malice, and without any foundation whatever, promulgated the falsehood that husband and wise had lived very unhappily, and at length had separated, after the husband had squandered away all his wife's earnings. This paragraph was copied into Public Opinion, and, although an ample apology had been offered, the jury assessed the damages at £750. It was pleaded that there was no animus, and that the paper, although established many years, had conducted itself so well that no action had ever before been brought against it; but the plaintiff's counsel said this made the case worse, as more weight would therefore attach to the libel. This doctrine may be consolatory to Mr. Wyman, the printer, who has to pay the penalty. The second action was against Messrs. Spottiswoode and Co., printers of the American Register, a paper published in Paris before the siege, but published in London ever since. In this case there appears to have been no argument at all; but the jury assessed the damages at the same amount as in the previous case. The third suit was against Mr. Stiff; and as the damages were only laid at £500, the jury gave no more. We are afraid that if juries are so liberal, they will be frequently called upon to exercise their liberality, and that libel suits, like railway accidents, will increase in a similar manner. We in no wise justify the insertion of the paragraph in question; on the contrary, we think it wrong, without extenuating circumstances, and deserving of some penalty; but it is obvious that if, besides clearing one's character, a profit of two thousand pounds can be made, there are many persons who will have no objection to be libelled. In other words the punishment is altogether out of proportion to the offence.

BOOKS FOR REVIEW .- Nothing can be more annoying to a publisher than to find that the books he sends out for review soon find their way to the second-hand stalls, and that even on the very day of publication copies may be seen marked up at half-price. This is grossly unfair to the publishers; books so sent out, if sold at all, should not be sold for a reasonable time, certainly not till after the first demand for the book is over, and we think that the practice of all respectable journals is in accordance with this view. Some do not sell any books at all. The practice, however, exists, and publishers are not only annoyed but injured thereby. In order to mitigate the evil somewhat, some publishers stamp the title-page, or write in the book; but it seems doubtful whether any benefit is gained thereby, the copy so stamped will sell for a trifle less, while the better class of reviewers are annoyed at finding disfigured a book they wish to keep. It appears to us that the end publishers have in view would be gained by their having the leaves cut open with a reading knife; this would prevent the book from being sold as new, and would also be attended with the advantage of enabling the reviewer to go through the volume. At present, with some of the journals in question, strict orders are given not to cut open the leaves, consequently the glance given by the reviewer is very limited. The suggested experiment may be worth trying.

COPYRIGHT LAW.—In the recent case of Stanird v. Lee, it was distinctly affirmed that no iuse can be successfully carried on unless, before pinmencing the suit, the work in question, be it book, map, or plate, be properly entered at Staoners' Hall. Congregational LITERATURE.—The Independents, or Congregationalists, in their early nonconforming days, were famous for their learning; but the same can scarcely be said of their body now. Yet there are some men amongst them who are able to wield their pens with effect. Their literary organ, the Brilish Quarterly Review, maintains its ground, and the volume of essays published last year under the editorship of Dr. Reynolds was a volume of much promise. The same editor now proposes to issue, through Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton, the recognized publishers to the Independent body, a monthly series of papers, the subjects and authors being:

1. Baptismal Regeneration, by the Rev. Enoch Mellor, D.D., Halifax; 2. The Incarnation of God, by the Rev. W. L. Alexander, D.D., Edinburgh; 3. The Catholic Church, by the Rev. H. R. Reynolds, D.D., the Editor; 4. Art and Religion, by Josiah Gilbert, Esq.; 5. Universities and Dissenters, by Professor A. S. Wilkins, M. A.; 6. Creeds and Creed, by the Rev. Hy. Batchelor, Glasgow; 7. The Church of Christ and Congregationalism, by R. W. Dale, M.A., Birmingham. The price of each essay will be one shilling.

LEDGER INDEX.—Any bookseller who has numerous small accounts knows how difficult it is to find places for them in his ledger, and although he may allot a certain space to those whose names commence with B, C, M, S, T, or W, by some means or other he invariably allows too much space to one and too little to another, consequently, before the ledger is half filled, he is compelled to put B's into G, or S's into P. To rectify this, Mr. Sandell, an experienced accountant, has hit upon and published a plan, at once simple and useful, which will serve as an index to any one's ledger—so easily adapted, that few people who are acquainted with it will open an account in a new ledger till they have consulted Mr. Sandell's scheme. Copies of the Ready-made Ledger Index may be procured for any size ledger, or for any number of accounts.

COLOUR PRINTING. — Messrs. Ward, Lock, and Tyler have issued an effective, and at the same time tasteful, show-card of their publications, printed in five colours upon a black ground, apparently all printed at the same time at the ordinary letter press.

STOVE ORNAMENTS.—A few years ago the only recognized ornaments of the stove in summer were narrow willow shavings, and tissue paper cut out and crimped by hands more or less skilful. But of late, various ornaments have been introduced; and stationers at this time of year are busy in ordering stocks to tempt ladies who may be setting out their drawing-rooms for the spring and summer. One of the most active providers of ornaments is Mr. Mills, of Goswell Street, from whom we have received a number of specimens far surpassing our powers of description; but they are all tasteful and very pretty, and seem wonderfully cheap.

THE SACRISTY.—Under this title Mr. Hodges, of Frome, has commenced the publication of a quarterly journal of ecclesiastical art, archæology, and literature. Considering the number of persons interested in the subject, there ought to be room for such a work. The contents are varied and interesting, and consist of papers on Church Music, Christian Symbolical Zoology, Sketches of Foreign Churches, Liturgical Dances, and several articles on art. Altogether the number will be found attractive to the large class of people who regard churches as something more than mere places for preaching and preachers.

Paris Booksellers' Relief Fund. — This find is now closed; the amount collected is nearly 1,400, a sum sufficient to show our brethren in Pais with what sympathy we regarded their sufferings. The troubles which have re-commenced in Paris will probably prevent the business from being wound up for some weeks, no balance sheet can therefore be yet presented; subscribers may, however, be assured that no needless expenses have been incurred either here or in Paris. The following subscriptions have been received since our last;—

 PARIS.—As may naturally be supposed, the book trade during the siege was nearly annihilated. From the Bibliographic suspended publication from Sept. 10 to Dec. 3. From that date to Jan. 14 beared fortnickell in death of the part of Pered fortnightly in double numbers. During the trade in books and in printing, which had hitherto required a based or licenses was thrown hitherto required a brevet, or license, was thrown open, and the stamp duties on newspapers and other publications abolished. The issue for Dec. 10 contains a list of booksellers who subscribed towards the purchase of cannons; the total sub-libration being 4.175 francs, of which Messrs. Hachette subscribed 1,000. As in England, so in France D. France, Prophetic Almanacks were in demand at regardless of the failure of his predictions, issued fresh ones for 1871, but failed to notify the present revolution. sent revolution; nor was a Neveu de Nostrodamus better informed. There was also an Almanack dat hour conteils published, but, being Protestant, the sign data to influence the multitude. As the siege drew near its close, it may be noticed that the publication of religious books increased.

M. Jules Ferry was delegated to report upon the feasibility of establishing a library and reading-room in each of the arrondissements of Paris. Many new periodicals made their appearance, but few have survived. Amongst others we notice the Ballon-Poste, the Mitrailleuse, the Moblot, and a host of the reddest republican journals. The a host of the reddest republican journals. principal commission houses, finding their arrangements for the procuring and supply of books in the provinces entirely disarranged, issued a notice that they could be bound by no previous engagements, and that their customers must therefore accede to the apparently hard terms exacted until matters had settled down, and that meantime they would not permit any transfer of business from one house to another in consequence. valuable seasons of business had been lost—the supply of books for presents at the end of the year, and the supply of books for schools—both very large trades in Paris; but, immediately after the re-opening of the city, trade began to revive, the world at large wanted many books, and publishers smiled; retail business, however, was still wretchedly dull when the senseless revolution broke out, and closed the shops. Reading is suspended, no books are purchased, and even the schools are in many places closed. France, above all other things, now requires rest and quietness, in order to recover herself, but the insane conduct of the revolutionary party, coupled with the weakness, vacillation, and incompetency of the Government, will make the work of reconstruction long and laborious. One of the first efforts of any settled government will be directed to improve the state of education, especially in the provinces; but there must be a demand for information on the part of the people before any real good can be accomplished. The state of the press, free though it be, is disgraceful. All through France there is not a really good news-paper, like our Times, Standard, or Daily News. There are plenty of invested which word collided compines and also journals which vend political opinions, and eke out their space with novelettes; but a good newspaper is yet a thing of the future.

Mr. Hotten's long promised "Story of the London Parks"—Hyde Park, St. James's Park, the Green Park, and Mary-Bone Garden—is at length about to appear. The work will be in two vols., with numerous illustrations, and might be vols, with property well styled "An amusing description of London Polite Society, during all the changes of fashion which have taken place from the days of Elizabeth to Victoria."

London Society, for April, contains the first part of the reminiscences of Mr. J. R. Planché, a veteran litterateur and playwright, who commenced his business career as a bookseller's assistant. Mr. Planché's recollections run back to the commencement of the century, and he introduces the names of a large number of persons whose acquaintance he made from the King downwards. It is one of the most charmingly interesting bits of autobiography we have ever read.

Bret Harte, the new humourist, who has created so much excitement in American literary circles, has just collected his amusing poems, including the now famous "That Heathen Chinee." Mr. Hotten has arranged to publish the English edition, which will include "The Circassian Played Out," and other quaint pieces not given in the American issue. A new edition of "The Luck of Roaring Camp," is announced by the same publisher.

Camp," is announced by the same publishers desires to warn others against the tricks of a conjuror, who cleverly manages to get into credit with printers, and who swindles people into the belief that he is about to exhibit some wonderful tricks of legerdemain.

BOOKSELLERS' ACCOUNTS. - Messrs. Beavis and Jack, accountants, of Bride Court, have sent us some specimens of their system of account books for booksellers' use, so arranged that the trader may keep a record of all his transactions, and arrive at a knowledge of his position at any time. The system appears to be specially useful in those houses where professional accountants are called in, as by this means no error can escape, and any attempt at tampering with the books would be immediately detected.

CORRESPONDENCE.

GENUS IRRITABILE.

To the Editor of "THE BOOKSELLER."

SIR,—Every one on entering the Litterary arena must be prepared to encounter adverse critics.

But I must confess I was rather surprised while reading your notice of the "House of Argyll and Clan Campbell" to find aspersion not warented by the facts.

That "The early hisorty is a tissue of absurdity" may be your opinion and then you are justified in stateing it but it is height of injustice to discribe it as "a great deal of nonsense" seeing that it only occupies some half dozen pages out of 250,

Your charge of our "concocting misstatements" is alike malicious and groundless is not a single line concocted the names of the authors of the Old M.SS are given and you do not advance any argument to shew that ther is even one thing that can be called a mis statement.

After the many favourable notices the work has received from competent Gaelic scholars we can afford to smile at charges like these unsupported by the least attempt at Proof.

Yours Respectfully

THE EDITOR OF THE HISTERY OF THE HOUSE OF ARGYLL & CLAN CAMPBELL. 109 Renfrew Street, Glasgow, 13 March, 1871.

"THE REAL SIMON PURE." To the Editor of "THE BOOKSELLER."

SIR,-Permit me to point out that your real "Simon Pure" is a Lady in this case. may arise anywhere, and venial errors can readily be overlooked; but the publicity attained by trade advertisements in the present day will often carry a false statement, whether innocent or criminal, into places where the subsequent apology or explanation is not seen. Thus, the seed of error becoming planted, may sprout and grow, to produce fruit at some time in the unknown future, puzzling to posterity, and illusive as regards an author's real capabilities. This is the more to be deprecated in the case of anonymous or pseudony. mous writings; Defoe's claim to the authorship of "Robinson Crusoe" has been contested, because he did not place his name on the title-page; Addison's glorious hymns, printed in the Spectator of 150 years ago, are thus, on questionable authority, attributed to various other writers. An author's nom de plume is literally capital, a sort of trade mark, sometimes more effective than any real name; and its invasion, even by the most unintentional accident, is a deed to shrink from,

Grievous, therefore, it is to find another Lady in this position; thus disingenuously allowing a book to be engaged for on untenable terms; to be printed, bound, advertised, and published under such misapprehension. Nor is it creditable to find such a tissue of blunder, now explained away as merely a clerical error in the advertising.

I am, Sir, yours, &c., March 17, 1871.

PARIS BOOKSELLERS' RELIEF FUND.

To the Editor of "THE BOOKSELLER."

DEAR SIR,—The following extract from a letter recently received from Paris may possibly interest your readers :-

"I have heard many and warm expressions of gratitude from the booksellers of Paris for the handsome and timely help sent them by their London brethren. I saw some of the provisions distributed, and can assure you they gave the most perfect satisfaction both as to quantity, quality, and the mode of distribution, which was perfect. No waiting; no annoyance. T'herein offering a most favourable contrast to that of the great lot sent by the Londoners. Of the latter I heard many complaints."

Yours truly, Holborn Bars, 23 March, 1871.

THE PARCEL POST.

To the Editor of "THE BOOKSELLER."

SIR,-It appears by the Times' report of the debate in the House of Commons, on the 14th instant, that new postal regulations are about to be introduced, by which letters and parcels, whether open or closed, will be subject to the same postal charges, which will be as follows:—for one oz., 1d.; for two ozs., 1½d.; and ½d. for every additional two ozs. up to twelve ozs., which is to be the limit as to weight.

Newspapers will be conveyed as heretofore at ½d. each, weight limited to six ozs. But it appears that other literary matter will be subject to the new

It will be seen by a comparison of the old rates (previous to October last), with the present rates, and those looming in the distance, that the change will be highly injurious to those who employ the Post Office largely in supplying their customers.

Weights.	Old rates.	P	resent rates. d.	Proposed ra d.
I	1		1/2.	I
2	I		1/2	1 1/2
4	1		1	2
6	2		1 1/2	21/2
8	2		2	3
10	3		21/2	31/2
12	3		3	4

So that for magazines weighing under one oz. there will be an additional charge of $\frac{1}{2}d$; and on those weighing two ozs. or more, there will be an additional charge of Id. on every parcel, which, in many cases, will be equivalent to the suppression of the publication.

You have, yourself, had just cause to complain; thus, simply because your valuable trade periodical does not come under the fanciful definition of newspaper, you are required to pay 1 ½d. instead of ½d. postage for ordinary numbers. The injustice is to be aggravated, it appears, by imposing on you a further charge of 1d.

Publishers in the habit of delivering their works by post should make an united effort to resist this serious wrong to their business. SIGMA.

March 15.—At 35, Milner Square, Islington, aged 73, Mr. John Trevor Hankey. He was conwesleyan Methodists, the Wesleyan Conference Office, City Road, for nearly fifty years. served his apprenticeship to the printing business, in his native city, Chester, he came to London in 1819, and entered the service of the above establishment as a compositor, and continued in that capacity until 1824, when the printing branch of the business was relinquished. He again became a member of the establishment in 1827, as "collector." This position he filled until 1835, when he was appointed chief book-keeper. He retained this post until his decease. His unswerving integrity, untiring industry, and methodical exact-ness in the sulfilment of his duties will long be remembered by his numerous friends.

March 17.—At St. Andrews, Scotland, aged 68, Dr. Robert Chambers, of the eminent publishing firm of W. and R. Chambers, Edinburgh and March 21.—At Blackheath, aged 50, Mr. David Noble Chambers, youngest brother of the above, and member of the same firm.

For the following memoir of Dr. Chambers, and the house with which he has from the first been identified, we are mainly indebted to the Sotiman of March 18. Robert Chambers was born in the town of Peebles, in 1802 - years later than his brother William. – two Position of the father, James Chambers, was that of a respectable middle-class citizen of a small provincial town; and the boys received the usual education of the Scottish parish school. to an unforeseen reverse of circumstances, the family removed to Edinburgh, and the two boys were thrown in early years on their own resources. Robert attended the High School for some time, where he acquired a knowledge of Latin, so that in after life he could read and enjoy Horace, with whose turn of mind he had many points of sympathy. But at the age of sixteen, having scraped together his mother's books and all his own, in value about two pounds, he opened a humble stall or shop in Leith Walk. His brother William, after serving an apprenticeship to a Mr. Sutherland, also commenced business close by. Of this period, Robert himself, in a letter to Hugh Miller, written in 1854, gives the following almost painfully inter-

I passedthrough some years of the direst hardship, i passedthrough some years of the direst narusury, not the least evil being a state of feeling quite unatural in youth—a stern and burning defiance of a social world in which we were harshly and coldly treated by former friends. I have sometimes thought of describing the state world, as of describing my bitter painful youth to the world, as something in which it might read a lesson; but the something in which it might read a resource retrospect is still too distressing. I screen it from the mental eye. The one grand fact it has impressed is the very small amount of brotherly assistance there is for the unformate in this world. Till I proved that I could help inyself no friend came to me. Uncles, cousins, &c., in good positions in life—some of them stoops of kirks, by-the-by-not one offered, or seemed inclined to give, the smallest assistance. The consequent defying, self-relying spirit in which, at sixteen, I set out as a bookseller with only my own small collection of books as a stock-not worth more shart concerton or books as a stock—not worth more than two pounds. I believe—led to my being quickly independent of all aid; but it has not been all a gain, for I am now sensible that my spirit of self-reliance too often manifested itself in an unsociable, unamisable light, while you recollections of thouset pourty. able light, while my recollections of 'honest poverty may have made me too eager to attain and secure worldly prosperity.

Passing through some hard but not unamusing struggles, things began to look brighter. With a strong literary bias, delicate in taste, observant of character, and with a keen sense of the humorous, Robert undertook the editing of a small periodical called the Kaleidoscope, which William, who had added printing to his business, set up in type and printed off himself. This was Robert Chambers's first experiment as an author. Only a few of the pieces were written by William, or rather not written at all, but composed in type without the intervention of manuscript. The last number of the work appeared December 29th, 1821.

At this period, the world was rejoicing in the issue of the Waverley Novels, which seemed to well from a copious and never-ending spring. Robert Chambers was from Tweedside, and was occasionally visited by persons from that quarter who could aid him in identifying the originals of some of Scott's characters, he bethought himself of writing a novel likely to be popular, "Illustrations of the Author of Waverley," consisting of descriptive sketches of the supposed originals of the novelist. The book was a success, perhaps not so much in a pecuniary sense as in helping to bring a young and modest author into notice. Some few people of cultivated tastes began to see there was good literary aptitude in the writer of the "Illusgood interary apitude in the writer of the Andretrations," which only required proper development. So far encouraged, he projected and wrote, when only twenty years of age, his well known "Traditions of Edinburgh," William being, of course, the printer; the first edition, executed at case and press with his own hands, being now exceedingly scarce. It bears the date 1823.

In a preface to an edition of the work issued in 1869, Mr. Robert Chambers explains some of the circumstances in which it was written, and how he was so fortunate as to become acquainted with Sir Walter Scott and Mr. Charles Kirkpatrick Sharpe, from both of whom he was favoured with anecdotes of a bygone time in Edinburgh, which served greatly to ensure the popularity of the "Tradi-tions." As regards Sir Walter and the young author, there was a fellow-feeling in connection with the Vale of Tweed, which, independently of mutual antiquarian tastes, led to a lasting friendship. In Sir Walter's latter years, while still able to attend in the Parliament House, Mr. Robert Chambers had the gratification of taking frequent walks with him through the Old Town, and hearing stories regarding old houses and their former inhabitants. On one of those occasions, when inhabitants. On one of those occasions, when solicited to do so, he pointed out the site of the house in which he was born, at the head of the College Wynd. The popularity of the tradition may be said to have raised Robert Chambers to a superior platform. It struck a chord which superior platform. It struck a chord which vibrated through society, and struck it exactly in the nick of time. Had it been postponed to some years later, much of the material for the work could not have been collected; for the generation was passing away who remembered Edinburgh as it existed ere the New Town had drawn away its old notabilities.

From this period, the books from the pen of Mr. R. Chambers came out in rapid succession.

the occasion of the great fires in November, 1824, he wrote an account of the "Fires in Edinburgh," which had a large sale, the profits being assigned to the charitable fund raised for behoof of the to the charitable lund raised for behoof of the poorer class of sufferers. In 1825, he wrote his "Walks in Edinburgh," which used to be a popular book of its kind. In 1826, he followed up this work by producing the "Popular Rhymes of Scotland." In 1827, after extensive excursions on foot, he wrote his "Pictures of Scotland," which were thereof be causal editions. Enlisted in which went through several editions. the corps of writers for Constable's Miscellany, he wrote successively five volumes, embodying the "Histories of the Scottish Rebellions;" of which that concerning the affair of 1745, while true to facts, partakes of the charm of a romance. Then came two volumes of a "Life of James I." Next Next appeared three volumes of "Scottish Ballads and Songs," and four volumes of his "Biographical Dictionary of Distinguished Scotsmen." Besides writing these various works and giving some attention to his ordinary business, Mr. Robert Chambers acted for a time as editor of the Edinburgh Advertiser-a newspaper of old repute, belonging to Donaldson, the founder of the hospital which bears his name.

Meanwhile, William, the elder brother, was toiling on his own way—never, it may be sup-posed, imagining for a moment that he would one day be Lord Provost of Edinburgh. After some minor essays at authorcraft, he wrote the "Book of Scotland;" and then, in conjunction with his brother, produced the "Gazetteer of Scotland," a work involving immense labour. The two men had, as it were, been preparing matters for a grand literary coup. The chance came early in 1832-an era when, amidst political distractions, there was a universal upheaving in favour of popular instruction. At this critical juncture, William projected Chambers's Edinburgh Journal, the first number of which appeared on the 4th February, 1832—six weeks before the appearance of the Penny Magazine, and which had a prodigious success. Robert soon after became a partner with his brother, and from the first was an efficient contributor, his delightful essays, pathetic and humorous, fixing the work in popular esteem.

Our space admits only of a brief list of his writings not already noticed. Among these were of the British Empire," "History of Scotland," and a "Cyclopædia of English Literature," (the last a small volume afterwards expanded, under last a small volume atterwards expanded, under his direction, to a work in two large volumes); "The Domestic Annals of Scotland," 3 vols.; "Ancient Sea Margins," I vol.; a carefully; edited edition of the "Works of Robert Burns," 4 vols.; and the "Book of Days," 2 vols. tappeared in 1864. To do proper justice to the work which involved research appage the the work, which involved research among the literary and artistic stores of the British Museum, it was necessary for Mr. Chambers to reside for some years in London. The success which attended the work was dearly bought. The tasking labour of constant research and writing, associated labour of constant research with some domestic as it was unfortunately with some domestic "That book," he has calamities, was too much. I mat oook, ne nas been heard to say, "was my death-blow." He returned to Scotland with his nervous system irretrievably shattered. Literary labour was with him at an end. It was time. Hard brain-work, with little interval of repose, over a period of more than forty years, during which he had one way and another produced well on to a hundred volumes abounding in original thought, was attended with the consequences which are too well known in the world of literature; exemption from all further mental strain was indispensable. On his return to Scotland, he took up his residence at St. Andrews—a place which, besides its social attractions, afforded scope for golf, of which, for the sake of exercise, he was an amateur. In compliment to his literary and scientific attainments, he was, in January, 1863, honoured by the University of St. Andrews with the degree of LL.D. Dr. Chambers was a fellow of the Royal Society of Edinburgh, and a number of other learned societies.

In our estimate of the work accomplished by Mr. Chambers in his day and generation, we must include, in addition to the products of his own pen, his share in the numerous undertakings of the firm. How successful those undertakings have been, in a mercantile point of view, is well known, and Mr. Chambers was a prosperous man. But, along with the material reward, he is entitled to a full share of credit for whatever good W. and R. Chambers have done in the way of the general diffusion of a taste for reading and information; and few will be disposed to say that that good has been little.

It was not till about his twenty-seventh year that he married Miss Anne Kirkwood, of Edinburgh, a lady whose sociable and genial qualities accorded well with his own, and whose musical accomplishments constantly supplied him, after his daily labours, with the recreation most acceptable to so intense a lover of melody and song. He frequently accompanied her on the flute, of They were which he was exceedingly fond. separated by her death on 29th September, 1863. Eleven children were the fruit of this marriage three sons and eight daughters, all of whom, except two of the latter, survive to deplore their second bereavement. He has also left about thirty grandchildren. Four years ago, he took to himself another helpmate, Mrs. Mary Anne Frith, of St. Andrews, widow of Robert Frith, Esq. She also was a distinguished musician; and by her cheerfulness and devotion did much to alleviate the infirmities of his declining years. But he had the misfortune to become a widower once more on the 18th January, 1870.

Mr. David Chambers was born 5th November, 1820, and after the usual schooling was for some time placed with a chemist and druggist, but soon after removed to take his place in the establishment of his brothers, and, on their opening a branch establishment in Glasgow, he was placed in charge of it. After a while a change of business arrangements rendered it necessary to open a house of their own in London; he came up to manage it, and was taken into partnership. Unlike his brothers, he had little taste for literature, but was richly endowed with kindliness and tender feeling. He was ever ready to listen to and alleviate cases of distress, and few deserving persons ever appealed to him in vain. He took an active part in the management of the Caledonian Asylum and other Scottish Charities, and was for some years a member of the Common Council of the City of London. About eighteen months ago he was left a widower with four children. The suddenness of the blow affected his health and spirits, and he never thoroughly rallied. At the time of his brother's death he had been some days confined to his house; but the news of that sad event had such an effect upon his deranged system that it caused the rupture of a blood vessel in the liver, and his death three days later.

March 28.—At 37, Soho Square, aged 58, Mr. Edward Twentyman, of the firm of Dulau and Co., foreign booksellers. An honest, warm-hearted man, much beloved and respected while living, and deeply regretted now that he is no more.

DISE

BREHM'S BOOK OF BIRDS

FIRST VOLUME OF

FROM THE TEXT OF DR. BREHM.

By THOMAS RYMER JONES, F.R.S., Professor of Natural History and Comparative Anatomy in King's College, London.

With upwards of 400 Engravings on Wood, and numerous Full-page Plates printed in Colours, from Original Designs by F. W. Keyl.

Vol. I., crown 4to, cloth plain, 7s. 6d.; extra cloth, gilt, 10s. 6d.

The "EDUCATIONAL TIMES" says :-

"This interesting work, in which the structure and habits of the feathered tribes are described with a freshness, fidelity, and zest, which none but a true naturalist, like Dr. Brehm, who has followed the birds he describes to their native haunts, and not derived his knowledge of them from stuffed specimens in a museum, could display."

The "EDINBURGH DAILY REVIEW" says :-

"All who love birds will welcome this work, the possessor of which becomes, as it were, the owner of an extensive aviary."

The "MANCHESTER GUARDIAN" says :-

"If the three volumes, which are to follow, equal in richness of illustration the one in hand before us, the whole work will form a splendid cyclopædia of ornithological information."

"BELL'S WEEKLY MESSENGER" says :--

"This, when completed, will become the most important work upon ornithology for general use and circulation that has ever been published."

"No better editor than Mr. T. Rymer Jones could possibly have been employed, and the text of Brehm, upon which the explanations of the vast variety of the feathered family is founded, is acknowledged to be one of the very best extant."

The "EXAMINER" says :--

"Some books are so good that the reviewer can only praise them in a sentence or two. The volume before us calls for nothing but praise, while its contents are so minute and various that it is impossible to epitomize them."

KARL VOGT says -

"I must own to having felt a pang of jealousy as I read Brehm's handsome volume, profusely illustrated with splendid woodcuts. If only I might have written it! But I repel all envious thoughts as I read, consider, and compare, and never lay down the book without having derived benefit. The woodcuts deserve all praise; most of them being drawn from life-not, as often the case, from stuffed specimens."

A. PETERMANN, in "GEOGRAPHISCHE MITTHEILUNGEN," declares that:-

"Neither the French, English, or any other nation, has produced a work to compare with Brehm's Brehm's 'Thierleben' is a general benefit to the people. The greatest honour is due to author, artist, and publisher."

"WIECK'S GEWERBEZEITUNG" says :--

"We beg to refer to this ornament of German literature, and can promise to all who take up the book a great pleasure. Brehm's extraordinary style unfolds itself here in all its pristine beauty, and while we are reading with deep pleasure, we may be confident that all he relates is most firmly based on scientific inquiry."

FRIENDS: SCHOOLBOY

A Story of Whitminster Grammar School.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

Westminster Review.

"'My Schoolboy Friends' is a most interesting book. It has many attractive qualities, which are sure to win for it a wide and lasting popularity among the best sort of readers. Boys, for whom it is especially written, will thoroughly enjoy it. The pluck, forwardness, buoyancy, honesty, fun, mischief, so characteristic of healthy boys, are found here, shaded by the meanness, folly, and premature wickedness which ever cross the path of even the juvenile pictures. But there is no attempt to draw a spotless character to play the character of hero. Best and worst are alike boys, and their varied and varying natures are the most significan proofs of their faithfulness to life. The author reports accurately what, under the circumstances boys are likely to do and with evident anisoment. under the circumstances, boys are likely to do; and, with evident enjoyment, he chronicles the exu-the self-water of books of this class. As such, we welcome him, feeling certain that he will prove a benefactor to the younger public, who are too much led away at present by the insane, unhealthy, and heightened stories of daring crime and sin belonging to the Boys of England school of literature. To this poisonous cheap drug, Mr. Hope's stories are a sure and safe antidote, for while his characters and incidents are real, they are described in a style graphic, pleasing, interesting, and amusing. For the good work he is doing, Mr. Hope has, therefore, our hearty thanks and recommendation.

SCHOOL LIFE. TORIES OF

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The Athenseum.

"That Mr. Hope should give us a book interesting, to a certain extent amusing, and generally natural, no one who has read 'A Book about Dominies' will for an instant doubt. The stories have a hearty not healthy to be a stories have a hearty and healthy to be a stories who and healthy tone, and are entirely free from the maudlin sentimentality with which many ladies, who, knowing little or nothing about schoolboys, take it upon themselves to write stories for them, often interlard their pages."

Edinburgh Courant.

"Mr. Hope, although a young writer, has already acquired a high reputation as being perhaps the best living interpreter of the feelings of modern schoolboys, and of the relations that subsist between them and their masters. In the two books already published, the 'Book about Dominies' and the 'Book about Boos', he may be said to hear the substance of what he himself Book about Boys,' he may be said to have given us the fundamental principles of what he himself would call the science of boyology. As an expounder of that science, we look upon him as superior even to the accomplished and genial author of 'Tom Brown's Schooldays.'"

Second Edition, elegantly bound in cloth and gold, and profusely Illustrated, price 3s. 6d.

TORIES ABOU

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The Carlisle Patriot.

"Mr. Hope has established a reputation by his healthy, vivacious, and entertaining books about and for boys. We envy the pure fame of a writer who has become the favourite of the rising generation, whom, while he enchants, he instructs in nobleness, truthfulness, and bravery of life and conduct. This book, which contains a dozen delightful tales, is beautifully got up, and will make a most acceptable Christmas or New Year's gift."

The Daily Review. ""Stories about Boys,' by A. R. Hope, is admirable, because it is written by one who thinks like a boy and speaks like a boy. Without being tainted with the slang of the schools, the language is of that plain, blunt, straightforward kind, especially in dialogue, which boys of manly spirit are in the habit of using.

It is one of the best boys' books published this season, and while there is no lack of exciting interest, the tendency is to foster a lave of whatever is honest, and true, and virtuous, and of good report. The book is tastefully bound in gilt boards, and well furnished with engravings." engravings.

The Ayr Observer.

"Mr. Hope has attained to the high and enviable position of being one of the best producers of iterature for boys that our time has produced, and the book which he published some few months ago, detailing school life at Whitminster, has, we know, been read both by big and little boys with most appreciating interest all over the country."

In a modest preface he expresses a belief that such a book may be made as amusing as many novels in Mr. Mudie's Library. 'The Book about Dominies' is a hundred times more amusing and interesting than nine out of ten of such novels."

"This is a book which we strongly recommend to those who are anxious about the education of their bys. It is a capital book for any one to read. The style is, in general, sprightly, and the views of adapted to a mixed multitude of parents and guardians. We wish that some of our novelists would especially study his essay upon the 'Novels give, too, a word of praise to his essay 'On going to the Theatre.' SHAKESPEARE says—"Any man that can write may answer a letter," but how often do writers find that a word embarrasses for the moment. Cobbett's BLOTTING-CASE DICTIONARY has been produced to obviate this difficulty. In addition to containing the whole of the words to be found in any Dictionary, it is the only one containing Present and Past Participles (those bugbears of epistolary correspondence), while it also contains some Seven Hundred Foreign Words, besides those of modern creation which the last feverar have added to our tongue. It is produced in Three Sizes, Foolscap, Letter, and Note, and can be added to any blotter or deck. Price 3d. each; per Post, Id, extra.

TRADE AND LITERARY GOSSIP.

Mr. FRIEDRICH BRUCKMANN, the eminent art publisher of Munich, has at length opened a direct branch establishment in London, at 6 and 7. Tottenham Court Road, where a full supply of all his publications will be kept in stock. Mr. all his publications will be kept in stock. Gustave Fielder will have the management of it. Mr. Bruckmann is proprietor of the magnificent cartoons of Kaulbach, including the Göthe and Schiller galleries, and has recently issued a series of half-length portraits of eminent musicians, full ife size. These are confessedly chefs-d'œuvres of photographic art, and have never yet been approached in this country.

Mr. Thomas Laurie, Educational Publisher, Edinburgh, has opened an office at 30, New Bridge Street, Blackfriars, London, for the sale of his publications. Mr. Francis Laurie, lately of the firm of Marshall and Laurie, is starting an Educational Depository in Melbourne, Australia, and thus extending to the colonies a name intimately associated with education in both England

LEEDS.—Mr. T. Barmby, who for the last twelve years has been with Mrs. Mann of this town, has commenced business as a wholesale bookseller and stationer, at 162, Briggate. wish Mr. Barmby all success, as in few places of the size and importance of Leeds is there more need of an active intelligent man who will promote the sale of books.

AMSTERDAM.—Mr. Fred. Muller announces a Sale of Works of Art, Engravings, MSS., some of them illuminated, and a very large assemblage of Portraits, many of them very rare, forming the collections of MM. Calisch and De Riemer. The days of Sale are May 30 to June 3.

SYDNEY.—If any evidence were required respecting the material progress of this city, it would be found in Sands Directory for 1871, which has instrument to be supported volume. just come to hand, an octavo well printed volume of six hundred and fifty pages. Judging from the large portion devoted to the business directory, is must be a thriving place. Every trade and in-dustry is represented. There are even pomadic makers, bird fanciers, chiropodists, makers, curiosity dealers, phrenologists, ticket writers, and type founders. The booksellers, we notice, are thirty-four in number. fession we miss is the ratcatcher,—possibly cats

BOOKS FOR REVIEW.—A publisher informs us that a few months ago he, on Saturday, sent out some review copies of an 8vo volume, which on the following Monday he subscribed; and that when he reached the Strand, a bookseller to whom he offered the volume showed him a copy which he had purchased on Saturday evening. Not a single leaf had been cut open; it was stamped "presented by the publishers," and, as the bookseller said, therefore could not have been stolen; and being results and being results. stolen; and, being uncut, produced a higher price than if it had been cut open. Stamping books is, therefore, an useless disfigurement. will be better to cut them open, so that needy critics" may have no pecuniary interest in not eading the books they profess to review.

POSTAGE STAMPS AS CURRENCY. - Not later than the first month after the inauguration of a Red Republic in England, but we hope a little earlier, some improvement may be expected to take place in the appointment of Government Officials, and that their fitness for their posts may be taken into consideration. At present, it appears to be considered that the less a man knows of his duties, the better he is likely to perform Such an opinion, at any rate, appears to have influenced Mr. Gladstone in his treatment of the Post Office. The Marquis of Hartington knew nothing, but when he had learnt a little, and was just able to discern the difference between halfpenny and penny queen's heads, he was removed to make room for another who had to commence the educational process de nove. Monsell, the new square man in a round hole, proposes several alterations, but overlooks the real necessities of the public. He leaves un-touched the present unfair anomaly which carries the Athenaum or the Times for a halfpenny, and subjects the BOOKSELLER to a charge of twice or three times that amount. And he fails to see that the public require a small and portable currency—a currency which, for want of better, the postage stamp supplied. When we wish to send five shillings, or so, to a poor acquaintance, or in payment of a small purchase, we don't like the trouble of sending to procure an order, and let all about us know that we have done so; nor do we like to pay the expense of it, but we send stamps; and so universal has this practice become, that not a day passes without some reaching us. In our own case, we contrive to use nearly all that come to hand; but, had we any wish to do so, could dispose of them at a neighbouring Post Office. Now this privilege is to be done away with, and stamps will no longer be saleable. What we require is a series of small currency what we require is a series of small currency notes, such as may easily be placed in letters; these may be of the value of sixpence, one shilling, and upwards, and pass from hand to hand at full value, or be cashed at any post office at a small percentage. They would be in general request, and might be made to produce even a greater revenue than the new scheme of the Post Office Orders. We are sure that the present Postmaster General will not do anything so simple and useful as this, but some future one may.

THE NEW LECTIONARY.—The "New Table
of Lessons Bill" has advanced one step in the House of Commons, but has yet to pass through the ordeal of a Committee, so that, although the principle is admitted, the scheme may yet be considerably altered before it becomes law. It will therefore be an unwise thing for any of the trade to put a single Prayer Book or Church Service into stock until the bill has passed its third reading. We are sorry to see that one of the first measures of the Free Church of Ireland is to make its ritual differ from that of the Church of England. The Bible question remains as it did, and many years will pass ere the time-honoured English translation becomes obsolete. It is, however, open to improvements, and these, when properly considered, may after a time be incorporated.

DAME EUROPA'S SCHOOL Of this little pamphlet 190,000 copies have been sold. created a literature of its own, and in our monthly bibliography we have been compelled to devote a special heading to the subject. The author (the bibliography we nave been competed that special heading to the subject. The author (the Rev. H. W. Pullen) has now at press a novel, in one volume, of which Messrs. Brown and Co., of Salisbury, and Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall and Co., London, will be the publishers.

THE LAW OF LIBEL.--The fact that some most respectable printers have recently been mulct in heavy penalties for the insertion of libellous matter of which they did not even know the existence, and who learned the fact for the first time when they received the intimation of proceedings having been commenced, has created an amount of uneasiness, not altogether disproportioned to the gravity of the case. As the law now stands, we believe that any newsyendor selling a copy of a paper containing a libel, subjects himself to-well, we hardly like to say a law-suit—but to a lawyer's letter, and the usual payments in order to stay proceedings. But a graver source of danger is feared. Many country papers are partly printed in London. The same inside matter appears in a hundred or more provincial papers, and the libellous matter would appear in all. We do not for one moment suppose that any of the parties supplying these "insides" would willingly permit any paragraph of an offen-sive nature to appear; but such matters escape notice, and it is only when the formal-looking letter arrives that the danger is seen. Meantime, the offence has been given in a hundred different quarters, and as many actions threatened; actions, which, if successful, would bring ruin This is a state of upon innocent parties. things which ought not to exist, and those who make use of "insides" will do well to endeavour to get the law altered, or only deal with such purveyors of news as are able to guarantee them against all consequences.

WHAT IS LIBEL.—The publisher of a well-known almanack at the end of last year received three letters from an attorney, threatening an action for "a false and malicious libel," the said libel consisting of nothing more than the figure 3 instead of 5 appearing in the salary of his client. This will scarcely appear credible, but it is true, and the three letters are now upon our table.

DISHONESTY IN ADVERTISING .- "Our Thousand Pounds Reward" is the title of a pamphlet written and printed by Mr. W. R. Evans, 8, Bouverie Street, Fleet Street, for the purpose of exposing the tricks, contrivances, dodges, and other ingenious devices adopted by a tailor's son, who, according to the writer of the pamphlet, has, under various names, for years past obtained a comfortable living by laying traps for advertisers and others. Sometimes this gentleman figures as a needy poet, and writes begging letters to the nobility; sometimes as an advertising agent, newspaper publisher, editor, and proprietor; sometimes as the seller of nostrums for dyeing hair, growing moustaches, gaining a fortune, or obtaining health, wealth, and happiness; but whether as a poet, publisher, quack, or foreign noblemanwhether as James Hitchman, Hamilton and Co., Percy Montgomery, Miss Alexander, Mr. Long man, or Viscount de Montgomery, always with one purpose, that—say the office of the Mendicity Society-of obtaining money from the credulous by false and fraudulent pretences. This pamphlet is a real curiosity of literature.

THE HUNTERIAN CLUB.—Under this title a new publishing Society has been established in Glasgow. The works proposed are mostly early English, and include Breton, Lodge, Dekker, and Rowland. We wish the promoters all success in their undertaking.

A CORRECTION.—Messrs. Oliphant and Co. inform us that the prices of the following books were incorrectly stated in THE BOOKSELLER of March: they should have been—"The German Drummer Boy," 2s.; "Magic Spectacles," 1s. 6d.; and "The Wish and the Way," 5s.

GENTLEMANLY ENGLISH.—The second report of the Ballad Society has just been issued. It is written by Mr. F. J. Furnivall, an enthusiastic "Early English" scholar, who has most ungrudgingly given his time and labour to promote and foster the study of our early writers. It, however, appears that in his gropings amongst the rude and early professors of the tongue, he has acquired something of the vigorous style they employed, and makes use of inflexions of the language somewhat unusual with gentlemen of the latter part of the nineteenth century. In speaking of some members who had withdrawn their names from the list of subscribers to the Ballad Society, he says :- "Owing to the heavy outlay necessarily incurred in copying and indexing all the Roxburghe ballads, besides indexing the Bagford, Pepys, Rawlinson, Wood, and Douce collections, members have had to be content, for the last two years, with only one Part a year of Mr. William Chappell's edition of the Roxburghe Ballads. This small issue has had the advantage of working off from the Society a few persons who were not able to understand that they had been assumed to be gentlemen who had joined an association of gentlemen contributing to reproduce a part of the earlier literature of their country. These persons could only take the lowest trade view of the Society's work, waited to see what its year's issue was to be, then lookt at that, said 'it's too small for a guinea,' and refused to continue their Membership. We are well rid of A comparison of the list of subsuch folk." scribers for 1871 with that for 1870 will show the names of those few persons who were presumptuous enough to attempt to associate with gentlemen. As the report is issued by the Society, we must consider Mr. Furnivall's effusion to represent the opinions of the subscribers.

opinions of the subscribers.

A NEW BIBLIOTHECA ANGLO POETICA.—The late Mr. Leigh Sotheby projected, and for many years worked upon, the materials for a New Bibliotheca Anglo Poetica. He had collected notices of many thousand books and authors, and these we believe are still treasured up by his widow, who, we hope, will be induced to place them in the hands of some competent person with a view to their publication. No pecuniary profit can be looked for, but it would be a graceful act to place before the public the results of so many years' labour. Bibliography does not pay, but there are many both in England and in America who can appreciate it, and who are willing to accord all due honour to the bibliographer.

SCOTTISH SAINTS.—The Bishop of Brechin, Dr. Forbes, is about to supply a want—a history of Scottish Saints. At present we do not remember any such separate work, although we have lives of English, Welsh, and of Irish Saints. Butler, our great English authority, is deficient in his respect; nor is the great work of the Bollandists more satisfactory, and Ribadneira almost ignores them. We shall therefore look out with interest for this new and welcome addition to our hagiology.

DRAWING COPY BOOKS.—Messrs. Marcus Ward and Co. have supplemented the pencil drawing copybooks of Mr. Vere Foster, by a series of "Water Colour Drawing Books," consisting of wild flowers, garden flowers, and landscapes fully coloured. Each copybook contains two copies, and thus, at the low price of three-pence, young persons are in possession of that which is, of all things, the greatest incentive to learn the art of drawing—colour. Benjamin West was not so fortunate as youngsters in the present day; he commenced his painting career by making use of his mother's blue-bag.

THE SPEAKER'S COMMENTARY.—The first volume of this long-promised work is now ready for publication by Mr. Murray. It contains that portion, which of all others has been most aniously looked for, the Pentateuch. Authors engaged upon it are the Bishop of Ely, the Revs. F. C. Cook, S. Clark, T. E. Espin, and J. F. Thrupp.

DENTON'S COMMENTARIES.—Mr. Denton has now completed his laborious series of commentanes upon the Epistles and Gospels, by the publichion of the second volume on the Epistles; and it is, perhaps, not claiming too high a place for the work to say that it is a fitting companion to, and is in every way worthy to rank alongside of the Catena Aurea of St. Thomas Aquinas, a work which has been held in great estimation by all branches of the Church, and of which a new edition of the English translation was published at Oxford but a few months ago. Mr. Denton's work is 600 at 100 and 100 are for work is formed upon the same plan, and, as far as it goes, may be considered supplementary to the work of Aquinas; writers of all ages have been studied, and the pithiest and wisest remarks cilled: even writers outside the pale of the Church Catholic have lent their aid. To those who are all already acquainted with the plan of the work, we may mention that this is not a commentary in the usually received sense of the word—it is not like Scott or Henry, but is a collection of opinions upon the passages under notice—just gring the sense of the different authors in the lewest possible words. Thus, opening a page at random, we find the names of Piconio, Chrysostom, Gorranus Th. Acuing Theodoret Jerome. tom, Gorranus, Th. COLOUR PRINTING.
To the Editor of "THE BOOKSELLER." Dear Sir,-We notice in your impression of April 3, a commendatory notice of the show card, "printed in five colours upon a black ground," recently issued by Messrs. Ward, Lock, and Tyler, and which concludes thus, "apparently printed at the same time as the ordinary letterpress."

This is not strictly so, the card referred to having been produced by us under our patent (of which we enclose particulars), by which as many as twelve colours can be obtained at one operation.

A CAUTION.
To the Editor of "THE BOOKSELLER."

SIR,—About a month ago, a man with a plausible air called on me, showing some specimens of Penny Guides to various country places. He said he intended bringing out one for this district (Notting Hill). He was anxious to arrange about it, and for that purpose offered me the agency for the sale, quoting the terms. card he took with a view to insert its contents as an advertisement, and asked for the names of some advertisers in the neighbourhood on whom he might call. The work would be delivered, he stated, in about a fortnight.

The result, as far as I know at present, has the result, as lar as I know at present has been that he used my name and took an Order for advertising (18s.) from a tradesman in the High Street, Notting Hill, who foolishly parted with 6s. on account, for which the man gave a strength of the man gave as the strength of the man gave as the strength of the man gave as the strength of the strength pencilled receipt on a printed form, and left the I have searched the Post Office enclosed card. HEAVY LIBEL DAMAGES.

To the Editor of "THE BOOKSELLER."

SIR,-In the "Jenny Lind" cases referred to by you in the last BOOKSELLER, the hardship is all the greater, in that the printers so severely mulct did not originate the libel, but had innocently inserted an extract from another paper.

Hereaster, if such large profits are made, we may find a needy celebre getting up a few spicy home-made attacks on Self and Co., for insertion in a friendly paper, to be held harmless in so doing; upon the chance of being copied as genuine paragraphs by other papers better able to pay the piper.

BUSINESS TRANSFERS.

To the Editor of "THE BOOKSELLER."

SIR,—May I offer a few words of advice to Booksellers desirous to dispose of their businesses?

1000le

At first sight it seems very fair that a business should be valued according to the amount of annual cash increase shown by a balance of debits and credits, but I believe some of our valuers herein greatly err; and with, perhaps, irreparably lamentable consequences. If there he no precise stock account kept, mere cash balances do not show either the increase or rate of increase; nor is a case of overstocking one for more than but a very slight depreciation in total value; for a divisible and distributable stock is not like land or houses, obliged to remain just where they are; stationary, indeed, need not be stationery. large stock, too, unremuneratively extended, may have been the great cause of a large ultimately amply compensative connection, and thus have been a capital foundation. And, therefore, should transfer become a duty, it ought to be stipulated that stock be fairly and perfectly valued in every particular before any deduction is made, and the quality and worth of the connection should also be fairly estimated.

If only one valuer is employed, the utmost care should be exercised in preliminary stipulations. No trader should be tied from appeal in case of error or fraud. I have known such tie in preliminaries as a hangman makes one to avoid any trouble from subsequent struggling; and a stock, that to value thoroughly had been the work of weeks, was "valued" in a day or two; and the person thus tied and bound to abide by the "valuation" was not even allowed a copy of particulars, or even to know that there really was one, or to learn any item whatever but the sum-total "equivalent" of transfer.

I know not the amount of misery produced by such a system, but I believe it is much greater than the trade have any idea of; and you may do great service by allowing these warning words to meet the eyes of those whom unforeseen casualties may compel to part with a business which some stranger, strongly recommended as valuer, may deem very sadly overstocked. A SUFFERER.

OBITUARY.

Feb. 3.—At Brisbane, Queensland, Mr. William Gowans, bookseller and stationer, late of the firm of Messrs. M. Ogle and Sons, Royal Exchange

Square, Glasgow.

April 11. - At his residence, 17, Portman Street, Oxford Street, aged 62, Mr. James Burns. of the firm of Burns, Oates, and Co., publishers. The deceased was born on the 8th November, 1808, at the Manse of Dun, near Montrose, of which parish his father had been minister nearly twenty years. After the usual schooling, he was sent for two years to the University of Glasgow, and afterwards apprenticed to Mr. John Ogilvy, of the Trongate, in that city. About the year 1831 he came to London, and entered the service of Messrs. Whittaker and Co., Ave Maria Lane, where he remained but two years. He then commenced business on his own account in Duke Street, Man. chester Square, where, by his intelligence and assiduity, he soon attracted a considerable number of customers, many of them being, like himself, attendants at Margaret Street Episcopal Chapel (now the church of All Saints), then under the pastorate of the Rev. William Dodsworth. At this time there was a great awakening in religious matters. Many earnest men, turning in disgust from high and dry Church of Englandism, tried to find what and dry Church of Englandism, the to link what they wanted in Evangelicalism, but failing there, turned with longing eyes to more primitive models. Heace the Oxford Movement, and the "Tracts for the Times," with their mixed train of gool and evil results. Mr. Burns became an active partisan of the new school; his theological knowledge, his excellent taste as a bookseller, and his influential manner, rendered him an active, useful, and trusted ally. Rivingtons were too old fashioned, Parker was then only at Oxford, the other booksellers were too broad, too apathetic, too evangelical, or too cautious, and Burns sprang up as the right man at the right time. A country-man of his, named Douglas, one of Rivingtons' people, had started just before in the same line, but being a bad man of business, had failed, and Burns thereupon left Duke Street for Portman Street, and took the shop vacated by Douglas. Here he gathered about him some of the most in-Accte he gameled about him some of the most influential members of the Church—Dr. Pusey, Dr. Newman, the Rev. Canon Gresley, Rev. F. E. Paget, Archdeacon Manning, the present Bishop of Winchester, and many others. He commenced the "Church of England Magazine," the "Magazine for the Young," and published many volumes of a devotional kind; but one line he made specially his own viz. well illustrated volumes of face cially his own, viz., well illustrated volumes of fiction, some of them being translations from Fouque and other German writers. These were all and other German writers. brought out with an amount of taste then unusual. His Magnus Opus was a volume entitled "Poems and Pictures," published at two guineas. No expense was spared in the way of ornamentation; artists, wood-engravers, printers, vied with each other in its production. It was the first of the socalled illustrated Christmas books; and as a work of art has never been surpassed. somewhat musical, he turned his attention to the production of a book of Common Prayer, with musical notes; also to some other books of a similar nature. Whatever he did, he did with his might; he was no lagger by the way; and as all his publications were eagerly purchased by large numbers of the younger clergy, he was greatly encouraged by the success of his undertakings. They were, perhaps, in one sense, too successful, and helped to do what many of their projectors never intended; they undermined the faith of their readers and prepared them for another communion. Many left the Church of England for that of Rome; and Mr. Burns himself adopted the same step in 1846. Of his sincerity there can be no doubt; it nearly destroyed the business he had been so long rearing, and scat-tered the connection he had been at such pains to In affright, Dr. Pusey, Archdeacon Manning, and many others, withdrew their books. The great organ of the party, the "Christian Remembrancer," was transferred to Mozley's, Manning's sermons went to Pickering, Pusey's books to Parker, and finally, the business itself, or the greater portion, was transferred to Masters. A new business had now to be formed, a business different to the preceding. Here, again, Mr. Burns' great energy came into play. The Roman Burns' great energy came into play. Catholics are not great readers, but have much to do with tapers, vestments, incense, organs, pictures, beads, and other devotional appliances. The warehouse in Portman Street was thereupon transformed into a great ecclesiastical emporium, books, although never neglected, forming only a minor portion of the business. Up to the last, however, Mr. Burns never ceased to take an interest in them, and contemplated writing a sketch of his own connection with the theological and artistic literature of the day, a task which it is to be regretted his pressing engagements pre-vented his carrying out. The business will, we believe, be continued by his surviving partner under the same name as hitherto. April 12.—At Guernsey, Mr. Benjamin Steill,

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

The Descent of Man and Selection in Relation to er. By Charles Darwin, M.A., &c. (John Morray.)—Mr. Darwin's "Origin of Species" is, perhaps, the most valuable contribution to scientific literature which has appeared for many rears. This was frankly admitted at the time the work was first published, even by those who dissented from the theories therein broached. And it must be admitted that Mr. Darwin, in one or more of his theories, was vague and seemed mable to substantiate his hypothesis by direct eridence. On some important points he avowed that he withheld the great mass of supporting facts he had accumulated, and presented his readers with only a mere abstract. He now presents the world with what was formerly omitted; and, in the work before us, in clear, logical, and deeply interesting form, his further views on the origin and nature of man, and on the vast importance of sexual influence in moulding the animal world. The materials which form the two volumes have hitherto been withheld, with a view not to imperil the reception of his general doctrine of natural selection. Now that all such fear has of natural selection. passed, he masses the vast army of facts he has collected, marshals them in scientific order, and then holdly asks the reader to endorse the conclusion to which the evidence leads-viz., that man, notwithstanding his present superiority to them, bears, in his bodily frame, indelible traces of being identical in origin with the lower animals. Having first discussed the evidence for the descent of man from some lower form, showing his close relation in structure to other vertebrata, his liability to receive such animal disease, as glanders, the internal and external parasites which belong to him being of the same families and genera as those of the lower animals, and elaborately exhibiting his possession of rudimentary structures characteristic of lower forms, he proceeds to compare the mental powers of man with those of the lower animals, and demonstrates that the latter possess the radiments of them all. Even the moral sense, the origin of which has always been a vexed question with philosophers, he shows to have arisen from the social instincts combined with an active With commendable clearness, and the candour which belongs only to a man who feels himself in a secure position, he then treats of the manner of development of man from some lower form, his bodily structure and mental faculties, and the action upon him of natural selection; the affinities to certain lower animals, by which the line of his genealogy can be traced; and the nature and probable origin of the several races of the family to which he belongs, receive due consideration. To account for variety of races, he introduces the theory of the agency of sexual selection, which, in the second part of the book, he fall. he fully explains and illustrates. The fact that there is an invariable struggle among the males for the females—a struggle either by actual fighting or by rivalry in voice or personal beauty—and that the females exercise choice in rejecting one suitor and choosing another, forms the basis of the theory, and the pages the theory; and through nearly five hundred pages abundant and deeply interesting facts are brought logether in support of it. It is impossible to give here even a scanty outline of Mr. Darwin's theories. theories, or an example of his mode of reasoning and inference. Each reader who is interested in one of the newest and most fascinating subjects of study that can be presented to him, will find in the two volumes subjects of beneficial thought. He may differ from Mr. Darwin in the conclusion at which he arrives. His vanity may decline to believe that man, usually accounted only a little lower than the angels, is, in his origin, only a little higher organically than the brutes; but he cannot fail to admire the persevering and laborious studies of one who has worked so long in a new field of research, and who, if he has not found what he believes himself to be possessed of, has unearthed treasures of inestimable value. The unearthed treasures of inestimable value. illustrations are all appropriate, and really aid the reader in comprehending the text.

Descriptive Catalogue of Materials Relating to the History of Great Britain and Ireland to the End of the Reign of Henry VII. By Sir Thomas Duffus Hardy, D.C.L., &c., Deputy Keeper of the Public Records. Vol. 3, from A.D. 1200 to A.D. 1327.—There was fear at one time that Sir Thomas Hardy would not complete the great work he had commenced. He himself has more than once hinted that other hands would, in all probability, be called upon to complete what he had begun; and, considering the magnitude of the undertaking, we must confess we should feel no surprise were we to have heard that the author had resigned his task to others. Luckily, there is now ground for hope that he who schemed and laid down the lines, will put the finishing stroke to the work. The present, which is the third volume of the catalogue, brings us down to the year 1327; and the remaining volume, which will complete the work, is far advanced in preparation, and may be soon expected to be in the hands of the public. Sir Thomas's preface to this instalment is certainly equal in value and importance to either of his previous prefaces, and, in some respects, surpasses them all in interest. The account we have of the compilation of chronicles in monasteries has the merit of being not only trustworthy, but is written in such an attractive way as to make it intelligible even to that class of readers to which the title "Catalogue of Materials, &c." would be repulsive. In the Scriptorium, or writing-room, one of which was attached to every monastery of any magnitude, was accomplished during the middle ages all the work now performed by type-founders, steam-engines, com-positors, ink-makers, bookbinders, publishers, and booksellers. Here, in a commodious apartment, studiously adapted to the purpose for which it was intended, sat the monks, each engaged in the work for which he was specially qualified. Boys and novices were employed on letter writing and matters which required expedition. The elder monks were occupied in making copies of old books, and fair transcripts of such chronicles and treatises as needed rigid accuracy rather than despatch. One, generally the chief artist of the establishment, was specially selected to insert the rubrics and design ornamental capitals and other embellishments. Over all was the "Armarius," who had the superintendance of all the writing and transcribing, whether within the scriptorium or out of it. "His duty was to provide parchment, ink, and all things necessary; such as pens, penknife, chalk, pumice-stone for rubbing the parchment, knives for cutting the parchment, awls to mark the lines for the scribe, a ruler and plummet, and a weight to keep down the vellum."
The rules for the observance of order in this mediæval workshop are extremely curious. solute silence prevailed; and when a book was required the applicant made the accustomed sign. If a missal was wanted, he made a movement as if turning over the leaves of a book, and gave the sign of a cross; if the gospels, the sign of the cross on the forehead; if a tract, he was to lay the hand on the abdomen, and apply the other "When a pagan work was hand to the mouth. required, the general sign was to be made, and then to scratch the ear with the hand, after the manner of a dog, because infidels are not unjustly compared with such creatures." And so they laboured day by day, transcribing missals and other service books, or copying the classics, the Latin Fathers, and books of scholastic learning, or compiling national or monastic history, or writing lives of the benefactors of the House. The whole question of the production of books in the middle ages is thoroughly discussed by Sir Thomas Hardy, who sketches the producers, describes the materials employed in the production, and enters into the examination of the work when produced. All this he does, not merely to give information to his readers on a subject likely to interest them all, but with the special view of illustrating and strengthening a position he holds with regard to the most important historian of the period under review, Matthew Paris. On the death of Wendover, Matthew Paris succeeded to the office of Historiographer of St. Albans, and wrote certain treatises, all of which are attributed to him by There are numerous other general consent. works, however, ascribed to him by certain scholars, and he is said to have made fair copies of his own works as well as of those of other persons. By logical and elaborate argument, Sir Thomas Hardy disposes of those views, and in a masterly manner discriminates the works which properly belong to Matthew Paris from those which belong to other historians, in such a way as must convince those who follow his reasoning that his views on the subject are unassailable. It is an important point in archæological scholarship, and has, we think, been most appropriately discussed in the present volume. But in reading Sir Thomas Hardy's introduction, we must not forget the contents. The plan and system adopted are those current in the previous volumes. All those MS. works known to exist, bearing on English History from the year 1200 to the year 1327, are enumerated and described, and the importance of each is indicated, and the beginning and end printed for the sake of easy reference. The account given on page 329 of such of the Public Records as are available for historical purposes during the reign of Edward the 1st, are extremely useful, and will be available for students, now and hereafter, of the history of other reigns. research and labour involved in such a work need not be referred to here, further than to enable us to congratulate the author and the public on the result. There are tables of contents, indices, and appendices; and, in the hope of settling the vexed question as to the handwriting of Matthew Paris, he has given specimens in facsimile of the several manuscripts which are said to have been penned by his own hand. Nothing has been omitted to make the volume complete.

Allibone's Dictionary of English Literature. A Critical Dictionary of English Literature and British and American Authors, Living and Deceased, from the Earliest Accounts to the latter half of the Nineteenth Century; containing over Forty-six Thousand Articles (authors) with forty Indexes of Subjects, Vol. III. By S. Austin Allibone. (London: Trübner and Co.)—We know not whether to congratulate or condole with Dr. Allibone upon the completion of his arduous labours. Perhaps we may do both; for while we heartily congratulate him upon the admirable manner in which he carried out his design, we cannot but think that, with the cessation of his pleasant task, a certain sense of disappointment must be felt by the author, resulting from the disruption of a favourite study. The first volume having been published no fewer than twelve years ago, it necessarily follows that many names, since familiar to the reading public, are, in consequence of the alphabetical arrangement, unavoidably omitted; while, from the necessity of confining the work to three volumes-noble and portly though they be—the later biographies are less ample than the earlier memoirs. Thus in volumes ample than the earlier memoirs. Thus in volumes I. and II., in the department of Fiction alone, we look in vain for notices of Edward Bradley (Cuthbert Bede), George Eliot (Miss Evans), Miss Emily Faithfull, Thomas Hughes, Henry Kingsley, and many others. These names will probably be added in an appendix, or in a new edition. On the other hand, the third volume contains a multitude of names, many of them belonging to writers but very little known, but still properly introduced into a biographical dictionary of English and American authors. Their very number, however, in some cases prevents Dr. Allibone giving the more prominent the space their works deserve. In this respect, the first and third volumes contrast remarkably; in the one case, too much was sometimes printed in the way of critical remark; in the other, too little is occasionally to be found con-cerning well-known writers. For instance, we have in the article St. John, a remark that "five members of this family are recorded in this dictionary; James Augustus and his three sons, Bayle, Horace, and Percy, and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Horace St. John;" when, in fact, there are notices of seven members, Dr. Allibone being evidently unaware that Spencer, author of "Life in the Forests of the Far East," and Vane Ireton, author of "Undercurrents," are sons of the veteran Augustus. It must be admitted, however, that biographical works are, from their very nature, more or less inexact; and that, as regards living men, the facts related become year after year of less actual value. Thus, adverse criticisms on an author's early books, are of comparatively slight importance if his after works meet with general public acceptance; although, as in the case of Wordsworth or of Scott, we may read in order to smile at the wisdom of the critics. But all shortcomings apart, Dr. Allibone's work is one of great, real, and permanent interest. He has industriously sought information in all quarters, and we are pleased to find that the BOOKSELLER has furnished him with numerous facts not elsewhere easily attainable. He seldom ventures upon personal opinion about writers or their works; though in one instance—that of Mr. G. W. M. Reynolds, whom he appears to regard as a very ill-used man—he has been most egregiously misled by his authority, whoever it may be. * On the whole, however, the information contained in the case where the terms of the contained in the tion contained in these volumes may be taken to be as nearly trustworthy as possible, and decidedly more so than in many volumes of like character and greater pretensions. An admirable index—or, to speak more correctly—a series of forty indexes, is appended to the third volume; and as a sort of apology for its fulness in this respect, Dr. Allibone presents us with an anecdote:—"The index-maker must not, however, carry his desire to be exhaustive and literal to an extent which caused an avaricious and vigilant compiler to base the entry, 'Best, Mr. Justice, his great mind,' upon a statement in the text that Mr.

• In the BOOKSELLER for July, 1868, will be found a list of the writings attributed to Mr. Reynolds. This list, Mr. Reynolds' friend, in a letter to Dr. Allibone, says is incorrect, several works attributed to Mr. Reynolds not having been written by him. Issice Best said he had a great mind to commit he winess." The work is so indispensable to all nen of culture that we cannot do better than speat the old Bookseller's recommendation, "no culturan's library is complete without it." It is the most laborious library work of fair with the state of the state the most laborious literary work of our time.

The longitresses of Scotland. By Sarah Tytler and J. L. Watson. Two vols. (Strahan.)—A charming book, full of reminiscences, not only of Sonia's songstresses, but of her poets and principal am for more than two hundred years. Beginning rith comparatively brief memoirs of Lady Grisel Eaillie (1665-1746), author of "Werena my Heart Light," and Jean Adam (1710-1765), author of that famous ditty "There's Nae Luck about the liouse," we have, next, a long, interesting, and delightful biography of Mrs. Cockburn, who ired in the best Edinburgh society for eighty two ren-from 1712 to 1794; or as she, in a letter to a friend, quaintly puts it, a hundred and twentyseen years—"a virgin, 17; a wife, 22; a mother, 49; a widow, 39—127;" and in her own person became a connecting link between the Edinburgh of Allan Ramsay and Burns and the Edinburgh of Scott; lovingly intimate or cordially friendly with the Keiths, the Dicks, the Dalrymples; with David Hume, Lord Kaimes, Mrs. Siddons, Lord Balcarres, and Lady Anne Lindsay. Alison Cockburn was a good and frequent letter-writer, and, as Sir Walter Scott has told us, "she maintined an extensive correspondence, which, if it continue to exist, must contain many things highly curious and interesting." Some of those letters are now published for the first time. her most regular correspondents was Mr. Chalmers, a solicitor, who moved in better society than he was born in, and became popular from his obliging disposition, his vanity, and his good-natured apacity for bearing any amount of banter. Nume-Tolls are the anecdotes of him that were formerly current. Here is one: Being at a masquerade curent. Here is one: Being at a masquerade in London, some waggish countryman of his own chalked on his coat the words "Little Bobby Chalmers from Edinburgh;" and the English Scallemen present carried forward the joke by soing up to the stranger, shaking him by the hand, and inquiring kindly after all friends in Add Reckie. Bobby, unaware that he carried his visiting card on his back, was immensely faltered, and believed that the fame of his extrafattered, and believed that the fame of his extraordinary merits had preceded him to the great metropolis! Mrs. Cockburn's biographers are areful, however, to state that she was too generous to be tickled by the weakness of her friends, and altribute her friendship for Chalmers to the het that he was a kinsman of her early lover, John Aikman, whom she survived sixty-three years, but never forgot. Mrs. Cockburn's best-known ong, though certainly national, is undisfigured by Scotticisms, which, after all, as may be seen by the glossary attached to these volumes, are mostly vulgarisms, and no more good Scotch than cockney and provincial slang are good English. Following in the same volume are notices of Jean Joint of the same volume are notices of John Elliot, (1727-1805) to whom is attributed the authorship of the song, "I've Heard them Lilting;" next an English lady from Cumberland, Miss Speaker Plantic (1727-1724) author of Miss Susanna Blamire (1747-1794) author of Dick Swiveller's favourite song, "And She shall Wall." Walk in Silk Attire," and several other popular lallads; Jean Glover (1758-1801) best known as the writer of the song which in English begins O'er the Moor among the Heather; Miss Elizabeth Hamilton (1758-1816) who wrote hat capital ballad, often imitated and paraphrased, "My Ain Fireside." The second volume conains but three memoirs:—Lady Anne Barnard, 1750-1825) "daughter of a hundred earls," and better known as Lady Anne Lindsay, author of that exquisitely pathetic ballad "Auld Robin Gray," known only in England by its first and better part; the second having what seems a sort of anti-climax, in which old Gray, on his deathbed, confesses to have stolen the cow that caused all the grief, and the widowed Jeannie marries not first love: Baroness Carolina Naime (1766–1845) writer of "The Lairdo' Cockpen," "The Rowan Tree," "Charlie is my Darling," and other less popular ballads; and Joanna Baillie, who was born in 1762. and died as lately as 1851. The all the grief, and the widowed Jeannie marries her best known of her Scottish songs—at least in England—is "Poverty Parts Good Company;" perhaps because it contains the smallest intermixture of Scotch. A peculiarity noticeable in nearly all the ballads in these volumes is the absence of that political or "national" element, so conspicuous in the songs of Burns and others of Scotia's male song writers: possibly the dislike to, and jealousy of, England has been more fully felt by Scotland's sons than by her daughters; but whether that be so or not, it is a pleasing evidence that be so or not, it is a pleasing evidence that the solutions that the solu dence of the wearing away of old prejudices, that the Jacobite ballads, once wont to create bitter heartburnings and keep alive useless rivalries, are now remembered only for the beauty of their poetry, and sung simply for the charm of their unmatched melody.

The Works of George Berkeley, D.D., formerly

Bishop of Cloyne; including many of his writings hitherto unpublished. With Prefaces, Annotations, his Life and Letters, and an Account of his Philosophy, by Alexander Campbell Fraser, M.A., Professor of Logic and Metaphysics in the University of Edinburgh. In 4 vols. (Oxford: Clarendon Press. London: Macmillan & Co.) Previous to the appearance of this work, English literature possessed no complete edition of Bishop Berkeley's works, and no authoritative account of his life: though there certainly seemed to be a need for both, if, as Mr. Praser says, Berkeley, "one of the greatest philosophers of this nation," has "suffered more than, perhaps, any other great modern philosopher from misunderstanding, possible consequence of his living "through the possible consequence on his living "through the most prosaic and least metaphysical age since the revival of letters," he being "the greatest metaphysician of his own age." With a view to place the life and writings of Berkeley in their proper position, Mr. Fraser has thoroughly revised and arranged the text of the works already published, collected such of the Bishop's hitherto unpublished writings as he considered likely to illustrate his opinions and character, or provide an adequate conception of his philosophical method; and, by means of bibliographical and analytical prefaces and occasional annotations, "in which the author may be compared with himself and studied in his relations to the circumstances under which he wrote," to assist the reader in comprehending the scope of his works and the nature of his opinions. In pursuance of this plan Mr. Fraser has subjected his author's works to a division into three distinct groups—the "Pure Philosophical," the "Applied Philosophical," and the Miscellaneous. Some of the last, we are told, contain a pretty distinct metaphysical ingredient:—"I am inclined," says Mr. Fraser, "to believe that the present state of German speculation is not unfavourable to a more ample and appreciative consideration of Berkeley than he has hitherto received in the occasional allusions made by the philosophers and historians of philosophy of the chief speculative nation of Europe. Since the first volume of this edition was printed, an annotated translation into German of Berkeley's 'Principles of Human Knowledge,' has been supplied by Dr. Friedrich Ueberweg, the learned historian of philosophy, and Kant's successor in the chair at Konigsberg. This translation has, I understand, circulated widely in that country, and has been partly the occasion of re-cent discussions on Berkeley's Philosophy in some of the German periodicals." Mr. Fraser thinks that Berkeley's remarkable relations to America, and the adoption of distinctive parts of his philosophy, should secure for him a hearing on that continent, "whose advancement since he lived in it, has almost realized the dream even of his bene-volent imagination. Without, in the slightest degree, entering upon a discussion of the metaphysical questions initiated by Bishop Berkeley, carried forward by Coleridge and Hamilton, and touched upon by later writers, we may indulge in the hope expressed by Mr. Fraser, that the re-appearance of his works in the modern philosophical world, "under the auspices of the great university with which death has associated him, may be the occasion of a candid consideration of this good philosopher's explanation of human existence, and a fresh impulse to philosophy in Europe and America." Certainly of its class this is one of the most important works recently published.

Select English Works of John Wyclif. Edited from original MSS., by Thomas Arnold, M.A., of University College, Oxford, (Oxford: Clarendon Press. London: Macmillan).—The works of the great English Reformer are here, for the first time, given in such form as will be under-stood by the great majority of English readers. In 1850, the delegates of the Oxford Press produced a fine edition of Wyclif's Bible; and in 1866 they determined, at the instance of the late Canon Shirley, "a good man, and ripe scholar," to issue a selection of Wyclif's sermons and other writings. Dr. Shirley, who had, years before, proposed to found a Wyclif Society, then determined to write a general introduction to the Reformer's works, leaving others to edit and arrange the various MSS. existing in the Bodleian and other libraries, with the view of settling their chronology, and fixing the exact theological position of Wyclif in reference both to his own and later times. The early death of Dr. Shirley, who had previously compiled a catalogue of Wyclif's works, prevented the design from being carried out, and the responsibility of preparing these volumes for the press fell, therefore, upon Mr. Arnold, who, with the aid of other scholars, has laboured for five years upon their production, with, it must be confessed, less success than could be desired. As a grammarian, Mr. Arnold makes no great figure; for in his introduction, in which is given an elaborate account of the methods pursued in collecting Wyclif's writings, he commits several grave verbal errors. For instance, he tells us that "Wyclif wrote in Latin and English; but his Latin works are by far the most numerous and the most voluminous of the two:" various misprints are also observable in the three volumes. Wyclif's orthography has been partially followed; the Saxon th and gh (p and z) have been retained throughout, but the v has in most cases been substituted for the u, and the i for the j, the text being divided into paragraphs, punctuated, and supplied, when necessary, with capital letters. Mr. Arnold has proved himself an industrious editor; for he has, in whole or in part, collated the numerous MSS. in the British seum, Trinity College, Dublin, and other colections with the Bodleian Codex, upon which Vyclif's sermons and other writings are based; and, as one result of his researches, he tells us that he has only found one English MS. by yclif—a short tract known as the Lincolniensis in the Bodleian library, which was not included in Dr. Shirley's catalogue. Of the works themselves it is not necessary to say much; for a correct estimate of Wyclif's place among men of letters was long ago pronounced by Dr. Shirley himself. The Reformer's English writings, he said, were interesting to the people of England, as the first appeal for the Reformation; precious, for the history of the language; and not without intrinsic interest; but if we look in Wyclif's sermons and tracts for eloquence, powerful appeals to the passions, noble thoughts, nobly expressed, grand periods or antithetical phraseology, we look in vain. Instead, we shall find plain, straightforward statements of facts and inferences, with not a few fierce and bitter attacks upon monks, friars, and other religious communities, as they existed five hundred years ago; with, doubtless, many passages important to polemical writers in elucidating the doctrines of the English Church. The first of these volumes contains J. Wyclif's Sermons on the Gospels for Sundays and Festivals; the second, the sermons for the Ferial (holiday) Gospels, and for the Sunday Epistles; and the third, a selection of homilies and tracts—many of the homilies consisting of only a few lines—intended, Mr. Arnold suggests, as the mere framework or skeleton of longer discourses; the evidence of some, at least, of them really having been written by the Reformer himself, resting mainly upon a passage in one of his Latin works, De Veritate Scriptura. "To form," says the editor, "a just estimate of the doctrinal and moral contents of Wyclif's sermons, to realize and express the exact position which the writer, about whom much wordy declamation has gone forth during the last three centuries, occupied in face of the religious thought and life at his time, this is a task for a theologian; and I am no theologian, but merely a literary editor. But," he continues, "I may be allowed to point out that an opportunity is now first afforded to the general reader of ascertaining Wyclif's opinions; not from four or five scattered sermons or tracts (some of which, the learned editor, Dr. Todd, by clothing them in black letter, has left nearly as undecipherable to general readers as if they were still in MS.), not from pamphlets, such as those so largely analyzed by Lewis, Le-Bas, and Dr. Vaughan, of which a large proportion are of highly doubtful authenticity; but from a large collection of sermons, which, if any of Wyclif's English works are so, may be deemed thoroughly genuine." Appended to the third volume is a glossary and index; and at the conclusion of his introduction Mr. Arnold acknowledges his indebtedness to Rev. W. F. Cornish and Mr. W. Sorrell, to whom was entrusted the transcription of the MSS.; Professor Stubbs, the Rev. H. O. Cox, the Bodley librarian, the late and present librarians of Cambridge University, Mr. Bond, of the British Museum, and other scholars, who readily rendered him aid in clearing away difficulties, and otherwise assisting in the preparation of the present edition.

The First Printed New Testament. Translated by William Tyndale, Photo-lithographed from the Unique Fragment now in the Grenville Collection, British Museum. Edited by Edward Arber. (Arber.)—This is one of the fac-simile texts issued by Mr. Arber, and to which he has given the care and loving labour he expends on all the productions which bear his name. It is not inaptly described by the editor as the photographic likeness of a priceless gem in English literature. It is "the unique fragment of that first and fontal edition of the English New Testament, to which Mr. Anderson refers as the veritable origin of all those millions of English Scriptures now being read in so many different and distant quarters of the globe—parts utterly unknown to our immortal Translator when he sent the sheets to press-parts then untrodden by any Englishman—parts then undiscovered." The text is as near as possible that of the original. The lines and letters, however, which are broken or faded, have in the facamile been made perfect, and the whole is printed black and sharp. But the Fragment has afterwards been read with the original, and absolute accuracy has been obtained. Such a work as this would be prized by all students of our early literature, merely for its own sake. But in addition to the photo-lithographed text, we have a preface containing a mass of information touching the art of typography, and its professors in the sixteenth century; and the career of Tyndale as a religious reformer. The evidence connected with the first two editions of the English New Testament-viz. in quarto and in octavo, and the typographical and literary evidence connected with the present fragment, are subjects discussed with much ability, and with a thorough knowledge of the malters treated. Whether the quarto was translated from the original Greek is a point of great interest, and this Mr. Arber decides in the affirm mative. We are bound to say that the facts and references upon which he founds his deductions are so clear as to be almost indisputable. Illustrated Natural History of British Butterflies.

By Edward Newman, F. L. S. (Tweedie). What is the difference between a butterfly and a moth? At first sight, there is a great family likeness between them. They both undergo a similar series of transformations—from eggs to caterpillars, from caterpillars to chrysales or grubs, and hence to ringed insects; and, though in some foreign species the difference between them is exceedingly sight, the butterfly always remains a butterfly, and the moth a moth; just as, despite any Darwinian theory of "natural selection," the hare remains a hare, and the rabbit a rabbit. chief distinctions between the butterfly and the moth are these:—The butterfly is nipped in at the waist like a fine lady, while the moth is stoutest and roundest in the middle; the butterfly fles by day and rests at night with its wings raised one against the other; the moth flies by night, and rests in the daytime with its wings extended, or folded about its body; the antennæ or feelers of the butterfly are knobbed at their extremities, and, whatever the position of the insect, are stretched out in front of, or above, its head; while the feelers of the moth are fine and hairlike, end in points, and when the creature is at rest, are folded under its wings out of sight and of harm's way; moreover, the butterfly, living in the sunshine, has large eyes, and bright-tinted plumage; while the moth, flying in the evening or at night, has small eyes and dun-coloured livery, so that when it rests upon a tree or a wall, livery, so that, when it rests upon a tree or a wall, it is hardly distinguishable from the bark of the one or the bricks of the other. Both insects are exceedingly beautiful and interesting from an ento-mological point of view; and both, if allowed to increase and multiply without restriction, become destructive pests in the garden and orchard. Fortunately, the balance of insect life is kept in check by many birds, as well as by many careful gardeners. In this interesting volume butterflies are, of course, regarded from the entomological standpoint, and very pleasantly does Mr. Newman discourse upon his chosen theme, giving his readers trustworthy information as to the aspect, characteristics characteristics, times of appearance, history, and localities of all the true British butterflies; together with with portraits of more than two hundred and fifty varieties, carefully drawn and engraved on wood, and only needing colour to make them perfect representations of the living insect. In addition, he explains how they may be caught, killed, preserved, and fitted for the cabinet. Those who have a taste for collecting these dainty genii of the flowers will do well to peruse Mr. Newman's popular and not too technically-written treatise.

The War Correspondence of the "Daily News." July to December, 1870. (Macmillan.)

The War Correspondence of the "Daily News." From the Capture of Orleans by the Germans to the Peace. (Macmillan.)

Journal of the Siege of Paris. By the Hon. Captain Bingham. (Smith and Elder.)

Never before, in our time, has any war excited such intense interest or such wide-spread sympathy or partizanship-been so thoroughly discussed, or so elaborately and capably recorded as that between Germany and France. When the great Napoleon marched his armies through Spain and Portugal, through Russia, Germany, and Belgium, the world had to rely for its information mainly on the reports of generals and commanders, and on the inaccurate and prejudiced accounts of partizan townspeople. Throughout the struggle which was concluded by the now historical peace of Versailles, we had, on the contrary, a legion of professional "war-correspondents," men with great facility of description, strong sense, bravery, and perseverance; and whose business it was to recount, faithfully and without bias, all that passed in and about the head-quarters of the various armies to which they were, for the time being, attached, or the city or fortress in which they were located. How they fulfilled their onerous duties is known by all; how one brave man-an officer in our own army-was struck down and was buried in a foreign grave; and later, how another never failed in heart during all the horrors and privations of the siege of Paris, and whose quaint, cheerful, intelligent letters were read with interest and admiration by thousands, both in England and America. Nor do we forget the appearance of a long telegram one morning, announcing in detail the surrender of Metz with 170,000 picked French soldiers, such an army as a truly great general could have done anything with. That autumn morning there were many who, lost in wonder at the vastness and tremendous import of the event, could yet pay their tribute of praise to the man who sent the news.

In the two volumes published by Messrs. Macmillan the whole story of the war is told. Though the books before us consist only of selections from the vivid and spirited correspondence of the Daily News, yet they contain all that is necessary in the way of facts and data, besides a great deal of shrewd comment and logical reasoning. The first volume treats of the origin and commencement of the war, and tells the story of the campaign from Saarbruck to the recapture of Orleans by the Germans; while the second takes up the narrative from this point to the capitulation of Paris, and the peace of Versailles. Both are illustrated with maps of the battle-fields, which will be found of great assistance to the reader.

Captain Bingham's Journal commences on September 18, when the close investment may be said to have commenced, and ends on January 29, when the German triumph was complete. It is a good readable diary of the siege, and gives in terse, well-chosen language, the writer's views on the stirring events which were passing around him. He has considerable power of language, and occasionally displays some humour.

Mayor, M.A. (Deighton, Bell, and Co.)—There is much truth in Mr. Mayor's remark that from first to last Latin should be taught out of its great writers. "The aim should be," he says, "not to lard the learner's composition with recondite phrases, but to give him early a sufficient vocabulary of common words to interest him in his work and make him hopeful of success." It is on this plan he has composed this little volume of "Exercises on Latin Accidence." The examples are taken from a great variety of authors-" especially from such as show best in quotations: Publius Syrus (not Publilius Syrus, as it is printed here), the so-called Cato, and Seneca furnish a large proportion of the whole; several of the Fathers, as Tertullian, Augustin, Ambrose, Bernard; Thomas à Kempis also; and still later Latinists— Erasmus, Grotius, Strada, will be recognized here and there; mediæval adages and maxims of law have not been neglected." As a means of enlarging a learner's vocabulary and teaching him the grammar and construction of the language these Exercises will be found of great use.

Cyclical Deluges: An Explication of the Chief Geological Phenomenon of the Globe by Proofs of Periodical Changes of the Earth's Axis. By William Bassett Walker. (W. J. Johnson.)— Mr. Walker has aimed, and with indisputable success, at imparting in this volume the latest and most advanced knowledge regarding the chief geological phenomenon of the globe. He gives us physical facts and mathematical deductions in support of the views advanced; and, although the opinions he sets forth may not find general acceptance, their expression will not fail, he hopes, to indicate a field of fresh inquiry, and elicit new modes of thought which shall reconcile some of the geological puzzles which constitute our present accepted system of geology with those phenomena that reason may assure us are indubitable facts. In the four parts into which the work is divided the author's system is fully developed and the theory of cyclical deluges ably advocated.

Drawings for Machinists and Engineers, &c. By Ellis A. Davidson. (Cassell.)—This manual is intended to serve as a text-book for those to whom mechanics are either a labour or a delight. It is a lesson-book for working engineers, professing nothing more than elementary instruction in certain branches of drawing connected with the craft. The machinist who has mastered its contents will find himself in possession of some-thing more than mere outside knowledge.

Flementary Natural Philosophy. Being a Course of Nine Lectures. By J. Clifton Ward, F.G.S. (Trübner and Co.)—Mr. Ward designs his book for the young. It is, therefore, purely elementary, and, as lectures, the material has been used by him with success before youthful audiences. There are nine lectures in all, and in a brief preface the author gives instructions as to their use. The former was about a girl; this is about a boy. The young lady was rich, and became poor, and triumphed. The hero of the present volume was poor, became rich, and did not lose himself. Young people who have read any former tale by Mdlle. Gourand, as translated and modified by Daryl Holme, will read this also with pleasure.

SHIPPERS OF BOOKS, PAPER, AND STATIONERS' SUNDRIES.

IN THE BOOKSELLER for May, 1869, we stated that "in February, 1862, a list was given of SHIPPERS OF BOOKS TO AUSTRALIA, the EAST INDIES, and OTHER COLONIES and FOREIGN PARTS, with the statement that 'The following list has been sent to us; it is represented as a tolerably complete list of the houses which ship Books and Stationery to subscribers in almost the same condition as it came into our hands.' Judging from the number of applications for the Number of THE BOOKSELLER containing the list, which was spedily out of print, we presume that it was found useful; and, therefore, with the same caution as before, we print the following, which has been corrected to the present time."

Having obtained a newly revised list, we again present it to our readers, and trust that

SAMPSON LOW & CO.'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

GIRLS' BOOKS.

The price of each Volume will be Four Shillings. The first of the two following Books is nearly ready, and the second is in active preparation, and will be ready for publication during this month.

I. LITTLE SUNSHINE'S HOLIDAY. A Picture from Life. By the Author of

"LITTLE SUNSHINE" travelled, for the first time in her life, all the way from London to Scotland, in a "puff-puff," and then by river and canal to the heart of the Highlands. The wonderful things she saw and did are recorded in this volume by the well known hand whose name heads the series. The heroine being just three years old, her mountain, lake, and rail adventures naturally address themselves to the youngest of the young ladies for whom the series is intended, but the many wise hints which the volume contains will not be lost upon mammas.

2. OUR COUSIN FROM INDIA. By GEORGIANA M. CRAIK.

This second Volume of the Series addresses itself to girls of larger growth and more mature experience than the pre-ceding. Both for fun and pathos it is a very attractive story, and is calculated to provoke both tears and laughter.

FRIENDS: SCHOOLBOY A Story of Whitminster Grammar School.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

Westminster Review.

Westminster Review.

""My Schoolboy Friends' is a most interesting book. It has many attractive qualities, which are sure to win for it a wide and lasting popularity among the best sort of readers. Boys, for whom it is especially written, will thoroughly enjoy it. The pluck, forwardness, buoyancy, honesty, fun, mischief, so characteristic of healthy boys, are found here, shaded by the meanness, folly, and premature wickedness which ever cross the path of even the juvenile pictures. But there is no attempt to draw a spotless character to play the character of hero. Best and worst are alike boys, and their varied and varying natures are the most significan proofs of their faithfulness to life. The author reports accurately what, under the circumstances, boys are likely to do; and, with evident enjoyment, he chronicles the exuberant, joysome commonplaces. . . . In short, the author combines the power of vivid reminiscence of his own early days with the keen observation of a frank and good schoolmaster, and eminently demonstrates his fitness to become the authoritative writer of books of this class. As such, we welcome him, feeling certain that he will prove a benefactor to the younger public, who are too much led away him, feeling certain that he will prove a benefactor to the younger public, who are too much led away at present by the insane, unhealthy, and heightened stories of daring crime and sin belonging to the Boys of England school of literature. To this poisonous cheap drug, Mr. Hope's stories are a sure and safe antidote, for while his characters and incidents are real, they are described in a style graphic, pleasing, interesting, and amusing. For the good work he is doing, Mr. Hope has, therefore, our hearty thanks and recommendation."

SCHOOL TORIES

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The Athenseum.

"That Mr. Hope should give us a book interesting, to a certain extent amusing, and generally natural, no one who has read 'A Book about Dominies' will for an instant doubt. The stories have a hearty and healthy tone, and are entirely free from the maudlin sentimentality with which many ladies, who, knowing little or nothing about schoolboys, take it upon themselves to write stories for them, often interland their ranges." interlard their pages."

Edinburgh Courant.

"Mr. Hope, although a young writer, has already acquired a high reputation as being perhaps the best living interpreter of the feelings of modern schoolboys, and of the relations that subsist between them and their masters. In the two books already published, the 'Book about Dominies' and the 'Book about Boys,' he may be said to have given us the fundamental principles of what he himself would call the science of boyology. As an expounder of that science, we look upon him as superior even to the accomplished and genial author of 'Tom Brown's Schooldays.'"

Second Edition, elegantly bound in cloth and gold, and profusely Illustrated, price 3s. 6d.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The Carlisle Patriot.

"Mr. Hope has established a reputation by his healthy, vivacious, and entertaining books about and for boys. We envy the pure fame of a writer who has become the favourite of the rising generation, whom, while he enchants, he instructs in nobleness, truthfulness, and bravery of life and conduct. This book, which contains a dozen delightful tales, is beautifully got up, and will make a most acceptable Christmas or New Year's gift."

The Daily Review. "'Stories about Boys,' by A. R. Hope, is admirable, because it is written by one who thinks like a boy and speaks like a boy. Without being tainted with the slang of the schools, the language is of boy and special she a soft with the stang of the sensor, and which boys of manly spirit are in the habit of using.

It is one of the best boys' books published this season, and while there is no lack of exciting interest, the tendency is to foster a love of whatever is honest, and true, and virtue and virtu tuous, and of good report. The book is tastefully bound in gilt boards, and well furnished with engravings."

The Ayr Observer.

"Mr. Hope has attained to the high and enviable position of being one or the best producers of literature for boys that our time has produced, and the book which he published some few months ago, detailing school life at Whitminster, has, we know, been read both by big and little boys with most appreciating interest all over the country."

BOOK ABOUTDOMINIES.

BY ASCOTT R. HOPE.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The Spectator.

"This is a manly, earnest book. The author describes in a series of essays the life and work of a schoolmaster; and as he has lived that life, and done that work from deliberate choice, his story is "A Book about Dominies' is an extremely clever and amusing series of sketches by one who darribes himself as of the profession. . . . In a modest preface he expresses a belief that such a book may be made as amusing as many novels in Mr. Mudie's Library. 'The Book about Dominies' is a hundred time. is a hundred times more amusing and interesting than nine out of ten of such novels."

"This is a book which we strongly recommend to those who are anxious about the education of their boys. It is a capital book for any one to read. The style is, in general, sprightly, and the views of the writer, though perhaps too 'broad' to suit certain 'schools' of thinkers and believers, is well adapted to a mixed multitude of parents and guardians. We regard 'A Book about Dominies' as pre-eminently a book of the season; it is a book in which parents and guardians of boys will find pre-minently a book of the season; it is a book in which parents and guardians of boys will find

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"This volume is full of knowledge, both useful and entertaining, in the truest sense of the words; and it is impossible to put it down without a feeling of personal kindliness towards the author. If our readers think we have praised too much and criticised too little, we can only say, there is something about the book which disarms one's critical faculty, and appeal to them to judge for themselves. We should like to see it in the hands of every parent and schoolmaster in England."

"This is really a delightful work, and one which we hope will find its way into the hands of every parent and every boy in the kingdom."

"We should like to see this book, together with a new one which we are promised, and which will be sure to be worth reading, not only in the hands of every teacher, but on the shelves of every school

TEXTS

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Mr. Hope is a very sensible man, and speaks what is well worth listening to for its good practical common-sense. We wish that some of our novelists would especially study his essay upon the 'Novels of the Period.'

His criticism on the literature of the subject is full of home truths. Let us sive, too, a word of praise to his essay 'On going to the Theatre.' In the main we thoroughly agree with him. W, at all events, shall not be suspected of any design of forbidding cakes and ale, but we writched bad acting and the vulgarity of most of our actors and actresses. Mr. Hope's book deserves a place in every lending library both in town and country. It is especially distinguished by its healthy tone, and should be put into the hands of all young people."

"The two former works, 'A Book about Dominies,' and 'A Book about Boys,' which Mr. Hope has published, have made his name favourably known. . . . There is, indeed, an earnestness in all that he writes, which will procure him friends wherever he finds readers, and will make many pause and consider how for they are fee from his censure." pause and consider how far they are free from his censure."

The Publishers were led to undertake this Series from a conviction of the inadequacy of any similar Maps, previously issued, to represent fairly the Geographical knowledge of the present day, and their controlled the present day and their con-

Maps, previously issued, to represent tainly the Geographical knowledge of the present day, and their consequent failure to supply the wants of the educational community.

A really good Map is a geographical document of the highest value. Its qualities as such cannot be too forcibly impressed on the mind of Teacher and Learner alike. It must be looked on, not as a mere thing of lines and colours, but as the embodiment of vital truths, affecting the condition of mankind in all ages. And it is only a really good Map—one in which the great features of natural Geography are brought prominently into view—that can justly be so regarded. The truths that are taught by the aid of such a Map, pointed out the communication of the Leaguest embodied within the area to diligent and appreto the comprehension of the Learner as embodied within it, and to be educed thence by diligent and appreciative study, will remain in after life as landmarks in the record of mental progress.

The Publishers of the present Series are content to rest their claims to notice upon their merits alone, and they confidently invite the inspection of Teachers and all persons interested in Education, who desire to possess a set of really good Maps.

PSALMIST.

A Collection of 350 Tunes, with Chorales, Sanctuses, & Chants, For Congregational Use.

N the preparation of THE CHRISTIAN PSALMIST the Committee have, at great labour and expense, consulted a large number of Tune Books at present in use in this country and on both continents, and have thus gathered from sources American, Russian, Spanish, German, Italian, &c., Gems of Music which they confidently anticipate will be heartily welcomed by all those who attach any importance to an improved Congregational Psalmody.

It has, moreover, been their earnest endeavour to produce a book with a good variety of style, which will bear the scrutiny of the best musicians, and therefore in its preparation they obtained the services of JAMES TURLE, Esq., Organist of Westminster Abbey, E. J. HOPKINS, Esq., Organist of the Temple, and JAMES COWARD, Esq., Organist of the Crystal Palace, who have written entirely new harmonies for a large number of the Tunes.

The Committee are also much indebted to RALPH HORNER, Esq., of the Conservatorium, Leipsic, for his valuable professional assistance, and for many new and adapted pieces. Price 2s. 6d. limp cloth; 3s. cloth boards, red edges; and 4s. 6d. extra boards, gilt edges.

TRADE AND LITERARY GOSSIP.

Mr. Henry S. King, who, for fifteen years, was partner in the firm of Smith, Elder, and Co., and who, on the dissolution of that firm, retained the bookselling business, has now re-commenced business, nas now re-commenced publishing at 65, Cornhill. The books announced for immediate publication are:—"The Nile without a Dragoman," by Frederic Eden; "A Journal kept in France and Italy," with some Account of the Revolution of 1848, by the late Nassau W. Senior; "The European in India," with a Medical Guide for Anglo-Indians, by E. the Royal Academy," by an Art Critic; and a new volume of Sermons by the Rev. Stopford A. Brooke, whose book, "Freedom in the Church of England," six sermons suggested by the Vovsey independ in Voysey judgment, have just appeared. He has also in the press a new novel, entitled "Half a Dozen Daughters," by J. Masterman, Author of "A Fatal Error;" and "Her Title of Honour," a novel by Holme Lee.

NEVER TOO LATE .- Mr. Henry G. Bohn has again entered the field as a purchaser of remainders, and has issued a Catalogue containing three books. In the prefatory part he says: "The remaining slock of the following valuable books having become the property of the advertiser, he offers them for the present at the annexed reduced prices. He at the same time takes occasion to publishing, or purchasing remainders, but until he has succeeded in disposing of his still extensive sock (as represented in his mornt Trade Catastock (as represented in his recent Trade Catalogue), he intends to make occasional purchases by way of profitably employing his establishment. As soon as Mr. Bohn has disposed of this stock we hope that he will sit down and write an account of some of the books he has sold, and something of the authors he has known, and of the book-buyers with whom he has had to do.

In consequence of the premises on Ludgate Morgan, Chase, and Scott are removing to No.

MANCHESTER. - Mr. David Kelly has retired from business, and is succeeded by Mr. Thomas Day (brother to Mr. Day, of Oxford), who for the last six years has had the management of Mr. E. Slater's branch business, 129, Market

The Archbishop then adds, "I mk your association should take care to circulate ough the Trade this information."

THE LADY SCOTT SWINDLE.—About twelve months ago, frequenters of Paternoster Row were surprised to see that the premises in Stationers' Hall Court, vacated by Messrs. Wm. Allan and Co., had been taken by a firm trading under the name of "Hamilton and Co., Publishers, &c." At first it was thought that Messrs. Hamilton, Adams, and Co. had taken the place, intending to transfer their publishing department there, but this was at once negatived. As few persons but postmen were seen to go in or out, and as no one in the bookselling trade was acquainted with any publication bearing the imprint of Hamilton and Co., Stationers' Hall Court, suspicion was aroused that all was not quite correct. This suspicion was increased by finding advertisements issued from the back door of the house in the name of Miss Alexander, who, dating from No. 7, Amen Corner, offered to make people beautiful for ever, improve their complexions, and make their hair grow luxuriantly, thirteen stamps only being required. The firm next came under our notice in connection with a pamphlet referred to in last month's BOOKSELLER, in a paragraph headed "Dishonesty in Advertising." In this pamphlet we have the antecedents of Mr. James Hitchman, who, under the names of Longman, Hamilton, and Montgomery, has been carrying on a disreputable trade. The next we hear of this worthy is from several country booksellers, who were favoured with neatly addressed orders, written in a nice, lady-like hand, on fine thick small note paper, bearing an earl's coronet, with the same stamped in coloured relief on the envelope. The notes, all alike in the wording, were written by two persons. They ran thus:

"Lady Scott, at the recommendation of a friend, would like enclosed book to be obtained for her as soon as pos-sible. On her return from town, in a few days, she will call and pay for it.

"Thursday."

The "enclosed book" referred to, was the prospectus of:

London: Hamilton & Co., Stationers' Hall Court, And all Booksellers.

We immediately warned the chief wholesale houses of the intended fraud, and they all agreed not to supply the book, of which many copies had that morning been ordered. Some booksellers had ordered direct from "Hamilton and Co., and are able by this time to judge for themselves as to the value of the bargain. One of the booksellers favoured with an order says :

"Having a slight suspicion that I might not be the only one whom Lady Scott had selected as the recipient of her bounty, I called on the only other bookseller in the place, and found he had been favoured with a precisely similar communication. I then stated the case to the publishers, and asked for the addresses of Lady Scott and Vernon de Montgomery. They said they did not know her's, and could not give his without a breach of confidence. They also enclosed a newly-printed slip, which had, they said, been accidentally omitted from the cover I received, insinuating that Lady Scott's note was not an original, but a copy, intended to show the sort of orders given for the book. They also said that I might see it was a trade list, and that they did not understand my letter. I hope my reply was intelligible: 'That the plan had failed here; but that there were, no doubt, plenty of fools in the world!

Although it was scarcely necessary to do so, except for the purpose of saving the trouble of writing, Messrs. Hamilton, Adams, and Co. have printed and circulated the following notice :-

"HAMILTON, ADAMS, & Co. find it necessary to inform their Friends and Correspondents in Town and Country that they have no connection whatever with the parties calling themselves 'HAMILTON & Co., Stationers' Hall Court.' The immense trouble and correspondence brought upon them by a Circular enclosing a fictitious order for a book called 'Sunshine and Shadow,' 10s. 6d., oblige them to take this step.

"London, 32, Paternoster Row, May 24th, 1871." Henceforth we hope the trade will hear nothing more of "Hamilton, A., and Co., Pub-LISHERS, &C., of Stationers' Hall Court, London,

THE REVISED BIBLE.—The Oxford and Cambridge Universities have united in the purchase of the copyright of the revised version of the Bible now in progress.

Mr. GRAY informs us that he has recently sold the business of Mr. W. G. Dunn, of Clevedon, to Mr. W. Masland, and that Mr. Barnicott, of Taunton, after thirty years' successful trade, is about to be joined in partnership by his third son,

Mr. Reginald Barnicott.
Mr. Holmes has recently sold Mr. Lyddon's business, 116, Camden Road, to Mr. Broadbridge; Mr. Thorpe's business, 239, Old Kent Road, to Mrs. Pierson; Mr. Calcutt's business at Tooting (formerly Lock's), to Mr. Funge; Mr. Wells printing business at Holloway, to Mr. Cannon, of Wood Green; Mr. Divers' business, Notting Hill, to Mr. Attwood, late of Brighton; Mr. Locke, Lyme Regis (carried on by him for more than thirty years), to Mr. Field, late of Bristol.

BERLIN.-Mr. Albert Cohn, and Mr. Collin, who, since the death of Mr. Asher, have carried on business as Asher and Co., have dissolved partnership; Mr. Cohn retaining the old business, which will be carried on under the same name as before. Mr. Collin, who retires, has purchased the business of Frau Agnes Guttentag, in the same city, and will trade under the name of J. Guttentag.

PARIS.—The insane and wicked Communist revolution is at length suppressed, but at a cost frightful to contemplate. Probably not fewer than fifty thousand lives have been lost, while the damage done to property is incalculable. must now be permitted to indulge in the hope that a settled government will be formed, and that immediate steps will be taken to educate the people. Had the insurgents been in the habit of reading and reasoning, they would never have been guilty of the excesses and atrocities they were. In England or in Scotland we think such a state of things would be impossible, but who will say what might happen in Ireland if the mob could get the upper hand for a week? There is in Ireland the same want of information, the same want of reasoning power, and the same want of restraint which we have observed in the French, that we fear an outhave observed in the French, break in that country could only be suppressed in a similar sanguinary manner. The true remedy is the spread of sound knowledge respecting men and things, a vigorous and well-conducted press, and an increased love for books and reading.

THE LATE MR. LILLY.—The second portion of the late Mr. Joseph Lilly's stock will be sold by Messrs. Sotheby, from the 19th of June to the 8th of July. The catalogue just issued contains 5,457 items, many of them of great rarity.

The stock while especially rich in early English poetry, and history, yet contains a large number of works connected with the fine arts, classics, and natural history.

AMERICA.—Mr. John Nimmo, from Edinburgh, Mr. Taylor, from Messrs. Rivingtons, and Mr. Hodder, of the firm of Hodder & Stoughton, are now visiting the United States and Canada.

BOSTON. - The American Literary Gazette informs us that a new publishing company has been established in this city, its speciality being books of empirical philosophy. The secretary is a lady. Mr. J. T. Fields will retire from the editorship of the Atlantic Monthly on July 1, and will be succeeded by Mr. W. D. Howells. Mr. Fields purposes entering the lecture field, and telling the public what he knows about distinguished authors.

ONZE EEUW. - Unfortunately, we don't read Dutch, and were therefore much puzzled to see "Onze Eeuw" as the title of a work which reached us by post from Amsterdam, and wondered what it could mean. Fortunately, a letter from the editor accompanied it, and it turns out to be the Netherlandish equivalent for "Our Century," a fortnightly review of literature, history, and politics, edited by Mr. H. Tiedeman, an accomplished scholar, who will be happy to notice any English books of merit which may be sent to him through Messrs. Hamilton, Adams, and Co., under cover to Mr. Kirbergr, Amsterdam.

Messrs. Smith, Elder, & Co., inform us that they have in the press a new poem by Mr. Robert Browning, entitled "Balaustion's Adventure." Also a novel illustrating the leading characteristics of the men and morals of the Second Empire, The title of the new novel by official and social. the author of "Six Months Hence," is "Behind the Veil.

SOMETHING LIKE POPULARITY. — The Sinner's Friend, a little work by the late Mr. Hall, of Maidstone, father of the Rev. Newman Hall, has just reached its 413th edition, or 1,850,000th thousand! It has also been frequently reprinted in the United States, and has been translated into twenty-nine foreign languages.

DAME EUROPA.—This lady has opened a school-book establishment at New York, under the management of Mr. Francis B. Felt, who has put out an edition of the celebrated pam-phlet, with thirty-eight capital illustrations by Thomas Nast, who has caught up the true spirit of the author. Some of the pictures are capital. We do not remember to have seen Mr. Nast's name before, but may at length congratulate America upon the production of an artist who is equal to any one in this country. Nothing could be better than the cut on p. 24, John Bull in the arms of Gladstone and Lowe, and that of the psalm-singing, studious, and peaceable boy at p. 13-MONOGRAMS.—Mr. G. H. Hart, of 72, Ludgate Hill, has published a series of about 700 wellexecuted monograms, suitable for insertion in library books.

AWFUL IGNORANCE IN SCOTLAND.—The Duke of Argyll, who knows all about things in heaven and on earth, and also about some other parts, declares that, when a boy in Scotland, he never heard of Whit Monday as a holiday. day. He also said, that in that benighted part of the world, the natives celebrated Whit Sunday on any day in the week, even on a Friday, if it happened to be the 15th of May.

Messrs. Rivington have added to their Cabinet Series of Theological Works, The Sayings of the Great Forty Days, i.e., the time between Our Lord's Resurrection and His Ascension, by Dr. Moberly, Bishop of Salisbury, a work which has reached its fourth edition.

CUT OR UNCUT.-The Nation, of New York, in noticing the recommendation offered in our pages that books sent out for review should be cut open, refers to "the unsettled, vexed question between the manufacturers of books and the readers of them, as to whether the leaves should be cut or not." This question never troubles reading men in this country, and as readers are pretty much alike all over the world, we think the question cannot have vexed reading men in America. Readers like the work of cutting open a book, and all possessors of large libraries are agreed that one of the pleasantest operations connected with the purchase of a new book is that of cutting Those who merely purchase books as articles of furniture, those who only purchase them for the sake of their outsides, enjoy no pleasure of the kind; but a lover of books will hug his newly acquired treasure, and sitting down in his easy chair, will proceed leisurely with the job, and after spending an hour or so over the work, will have acquired a good knowledge of the contents of the volume, and having mastered its general contents, will have prepared himself to read the work through, and in reading to understand. But buyers of books buy many volumes for the purpose of reference, they cut them open as described, and never take them up again till occasion arises for the reference; but in cutting up the volume they have mastered its general scope and intent, and its subject matter will have impressed itself upon their memories. With cut edges the case is different: the books, as soon as purchased, are put upon the shelves to await a more convenient time which herer arrives, and they remain unread. With reading man the convenient time which here arrives, and they remain unread. reading men there is but one opinion respecting "Cut or Uncut," and with furniture-buyers there is also but one opinion, but the two classes of buyers do not hold the same opinion.

BOWDLERISM RUN MAD.—Messrs. Low, Son, and Co., publish a prettily-printed and neatlybound series of volumes, which they term the Bayard." Mr. Hain Friswell is, we believe, the general editor. On the whole, the selection of authors is a good one, but nearly all the volumes would be better without the prefaces and editorial Libours. The latest addition, The Story of My Unde Toby, is the worst of the whole. The pre-Uncle Toby, is the worst of the whole. face is in bad taste; but the editor, Mr. Percy Fitzgerald, has, what he calls it, "Bowlerised" (iii) the text. He has taken out those peculiar Shandeian passages which, to all readers of Sterne, lent performed his work clumsily. In the preface he refers to Sterne as an immoral and indecent write and state of the state of writer, and although he has excised the history of clockwinding, and the love passages between Trim and the Maid, the cunning artifices of Widow Wadman, and the taurine deficiencies with which the work concludes, he, like an unskillul dentist, has left in those prurient fangs which are suggestive of painful rottenness, and will tend to set inquiring readers to hunt up and collect the loppings. and collect the loppings. Prefixed to the title is a motto from Coleridge; the sage says: "I think highly of Sterne—that is, the first part of Tristman Chandle". This part Mr. Percy Fitz-This part Mr. Percy Fitzgerald has omitted!

BRITISH MUSEUM.—Mr. R. Cowtan, who for the past thirty years has been connected with this Institution, is about to publish a volume of "Memories of the Library of the British Museum, 1835 to 1871." It is intended not so much for the use of bibliographers and scholars as to tell the reading public, in a pleasant manner, how the books in the finest and largest library in the world were got together, and something about them.

STEVENS'S COVENTRY TEXTILOGRAPHS.—Mr. Stevens, of Coventry, has long been recognised as facile princeps in the production of what may be termed silken literature, that nothing need be said in praise of his looms. We may therefore content ourselves by acknowledging the receipt of a parcel of his new productions, consisting of a variety of book-markers, some with poetry and music. Among these are, "The Old Arm Chair," "The Last Rose of Summer," "Home, Sweet Home," and "Many Happy Returns of the Day," The others are "The Beatitudes," "To My Cousin," "Dinah Consoling Hetty in Prison," and a Shakspearian Memento. Then we have some elegantly embroidered jewellery; those in black and white appear to be peculiarly appropriate for mourning purposes. Lastly, we have some neat whist-markers. In all the specimens the work is admirably executed.

MUSINGS OVER THE CHRISTIAN YEAR.—We have taken up this volume so many times, and have spent so much time over it, intending to notice it at some length, that we give up the job in despair, and simply recommend it to all lovers of the "Christian Year," to which it forms so apt a companion; indeed, it is not a book to be criticised, nor one to be read through at a sitting, but, like the "Christian Year," mused over. The prefatory matter consists of affectionate recollections of Mr. Keble, by Miss Yonge, and by another friend, Miss Wilbraham, with a few contributions from others. The Musings themselves, being frequently thoughts inspired by conversations with the author of the "Christian Year," are in entire harmony with that volume.

THE AMERICAN CATALOGUE FOR 1870.—
The catalogue of American books published in 1870 is a formidable affair, and is contained in a volume of about 600 pages. First, there is the catalogue proper, the list containing a large sprinkling of names by no means unfamiliar to English eyes. Following this we have:—1. a classified list of American works. 2. A list of the chief books published in England during the year—the titles being copied from the monthly lists in the BOOKSELLER. 3. A variety of lists useful to the trade. 4. An account of some living and some deceased members of the trade, with portraits; also, a variety of short articles extracted from various sources, all bearing upon literary trade subjects. And lastly, catalogues, both trade and retail, of a large number of publishing-houses throughout the States; nearly all the chief houses, and many of the smaller ones being represented.

CHARLES LAMB. -In Germany, it is said that Shakspeare is better understood and appreciated than in England. Be that as it may, there is evidence that in America some of our most intensely English authors have met with appreciative admirers, who, in the justness of their criticisms, are far before ourselves. It was in the United States that De Quincey's writings were first collected; it is there alone that we find a collected edition of Maginn; Praed, Hood, and Prof. Wilson there first found congenial editors; Lamb's Eliana was there collected; and in the current edition of the Atlantic Monthly we find a review of the latest edition of Charles Lamb, such as few Englishmen could have written. article is a critique upon the editor, supposed to be Mr. Carew Hazlitt. It shows some of his faults, both of priggishness and ignorance, and exhibits so complete a perception of the gentle Elia's character, that we cannot help wishing that the writer, Mr. J. E. Balson, would himself become Lamb's editor.

SATAN.—The autobiography of this much-abused individual is about to be given to the world under the auspices of a gentleman who appears to have been long acquainted with him. The recollections of the subject of the memoir go very far back, dating ab ovo; therefore, long antecedent to his connexion with the Bible, where it appears that Dr. Beard first made his acquaintance.

GOOD STOCK.-Mr. Mudie advertises that he has on sale more than 200,000 volumes of surplus copies, and 20,000 volumes of books in ornamental bindings.

DRAWING COPIES .- We are glad to see signs of more attention being given to drawing than was the fashion a few years ago, and hope the time is not far distant when every schoolboy will be able to make a sketch of any object he wishes to describe. In the last BOOKSELLER we noticed with commendation the Drawing Copies of Messrs. Marcus Ward and Co. We have now to acknowledge the receipt of the Second Grade Freehand Test Papers, by Mr. J. C. Thompson, from Mr. John Heywood, Manchester, twelve drawings on 8vo cards, one half the drawing in outline, the other half filled in. The designs are good, and we think Mr. Thompson's plan good also.

DICKENS'S WORKS. - Messrs. Chapman and Hall, who are now sole proprietors of the works of Charles Dickens, are about to re-issue them in weekly penny numbers, illustrated, commencing July 1, with "Oliver Twist."

TELEGRAPHY.—We called attention lately to a meeting of the paper trade, held in opposition to the post cards, which are becoming so extensively useful, and which cost the country thirty thousand pounds a year. We imagine a far more serious paper question is involved in the Post-Office acquisition of the telegraphs. Already the number of messages has reached something like a quarter of a million weekly; and when we bear in mind that the Post-Office provides not only the paper and envelopes for the actual letter we receive, but a corresponding sheet of paper for the necessary instructions to send it, the monopoly of the post card would appear likely to have found a worthy rival. Mr. Scudamore's Report on the Telegraph System of the United Kingdom, which has recently been presented to the House of Commons, contains much that is generally interesting and but very little known. It appears that prior to the transfer to the Government the code of signals used by the different telegraph com-panies varied, and of course interposed a temporary difficulty at the Post-Office, which has since been solved by the adoption of what is called the Morse Alphabet, which is fast becoming the tele-graphic language of the world. The instruments graphic language of the world. The instruments in use to speak or write this language are of three The needle instrument with its clock-like face, the vibration of the needle to the right or left indicating certain letters; the bell instru-ment, which makes two sounds, corresponding with the two motions of the needle; and the ink writer, which makes two marks, a "dot" or a "dash," on a band of paper. Thus the Morse Alphabet, which, it will be seen, is composed of two kinds of signals only, can be readily despatched by either instrument. Considering the great im-portance to society of telegraphic science, and the growing appreciation of the immense service it renders, it is very remarkable that so little thought should have been successfully bestowed on simplifying and perfecting the mechanical means transmitting and recording signals. The needle and bell instruments have hitherto The needle messages with far greater rapidity than has been possible by what is known as the Morse Recording Apparatus, but the advantage of a system which is self-recording recommends itself to all, inasmuch as without some record it is impossible to trace an error to its source, either at the sending or receiving station. The great object therefore to be attained is a system which shall so utilise the electric currents, that the dots and dashes shall be instantly printed or embossed in a correct manner. The Morse instrument takes three times as long to form a dash as a dot, and the formation of either dot or dash depends entirely upon the skill of the operator, so that cer-tainty is not ensured. Herring's Telegraphic Recording Instrument seems likely to correct these It is worked with two keys instead of defects. one, and by this means either a dot or a dash is accurately stamped on the band of paper. By the present Post-Office system a dash can only be formed while the operator counts three, but by Mr. Herring's system both dot and dash are printed instantly, and thus considerable time is saved. Mr. Herring's patent also arranges for printing the dashes vertically instead of horizontally, and thus messages sent by his instrument take up little more than a fourth of the usual Mr. Scudamore makes reference in his space. report to the errors which constantly arise from the difficulty of determining which marks are meant for dots, and which for dashes, under the present system. Sometimes he says a dot gets substituted for a dash, or vice versa, and materially alters the message. One instance he quotes of a firm in London who telegraphed, "Send rails ten foot lengths." The signals for t and c are a dash and a dot, but the instrument sent two dots, which form the signal for i, so that the message was delivered thus—"Send rails in foot lengths." Errors of this kind would be impossible by Mr. Herring's invention of separate keys and styles for each mark, and we hope in the public interest that the merits of his scheme may be promptly examined into, and if found to realize all that is predicted, that it may at once be adopted.

CLARKE'S ANTE-NICENE LIBRARY, Vol. XIX. The Seven Books of Arnobius Adversus Gentes, and Vol. XX., The Writings of Gregory Thaumaturgus : Dionysius of Alexandria, and Archelaus. Arnobius now for the first time appears in an English form, and although his writings are not of great value for what they teach respecting Christian doctrine, they reveal the terrible things to which Christianity was opposed; the heathen rites and ceremonies, the filth of the Greek and Roman Mythology, and the wickedness of the Pagan practices—these are lashed with no sparing Of the fate of Arnobius nothing is known, but it cannot be supposed that one who spoke so loudly against Paganism escaped the fate of most other early professors.

The writings of St. Gregory Thaumaturgus, unlike those of Arnobius, are of immense value to all who love the study of historic theology. In the very first chapter we have what appears to be the germ of the Nicene Creed. This Creed, as expressed by Gregory, must be infallible, for, being in some doubt, he sought for advice, and St. John the Evangelist and the Blessed Virgin Mary descended from heaven and put him right. We recommend one item in St. Gregory's life to the notice of Dr. Beard; for the Saint was the first, as far as we know, who wrote a note to the devil and got an answer. St. Gregory is patron of the church building societies, for he it was who first erected a temple for Christian worship. As some of our young bookselling friends may be troubled in searching catalogues for the works of Gregory Thaumaturgus, we may mention that being Bishop of Neocesarea, the name of that city is attached as the saint's surname on the title of his works. Like St. Gregory, St. Dionysius was one of Origen's pupils; he was deeply learned in all Christian doctrines as taught in the Alexandrian shool, and although his writings are mostly fragmental, they seem to show what was believed in the middle of the third century. Following this, are the Remains of Archelaus, Bishop of Cascar, in Mesopotamia. Of the author but little is known, and the date of the writing is uncertain. Here the volume should end, but following the preceding we have that of which no mention is made on the title-page, viz., a valuable collection of Spiac documents, attributed to the first three; centralistic tays lated by the Rev. B. P. Pratten, extending to 168 pages.

AN OLD FAVOURITE. -Mr. Tegg has re-issued "The Adventures of Bampfylde Moore Carew, king of the Beggars," in a cheap form. Fifty rears ago, this was one of the most popular of books, and with "The Sorrows of Werther" and "Hervey's Meditations," formed one of the select library of books indulged in by those who ventured beyond the Bible, "Pilgrim's Progress," and the "Whole Duty of Man." Of late it has been neglected; yet, apart from its story, it is of interest on account of the insight it gives us into the domestic habits of people in the early part of the eighteenth century. The main facts of the narrative are, we believe, true; the accessories certainly are, and no book with which we are acquainted gives anything like so clear a description of vagaout life, either here or in the "plantations."

Our cousins across the Atlantic are scarcely so well acquainted with the work as they should be. There is little doubt that the American scenes described are perfectly true.

New Series of Guide Books.—The Graphotyping Company announce a new series of shilling guide books, each with a map and twelve tinted and other engravings. The managers have purchased the copyrights of many of the best local guides, and having revised and improved, are about to reissue them. They have sent us some pecimens of the new illustrations in which, by the substitution of the electrotype for the stereotyping process, much more satisfactory results have been altained. The list contains guides to all the chief places of resort in the three kingdoms.

The Spot Stroke. By J. Bennett. Edited by "Cavendish." (De la Rue).—Billiard players will find in this pamphlet an amplification of the directions given for this particuliar hazard, by Mr. E. White, in his "Practical Billiards," published by Miller, of Albemarle Street, in 1807. White's book which has long been out of print, and must not be confounded with a modern compilation of the same name-was mainly a translation of a French treatise, issued in 1801, in which first appeared the often-quoted, but only partially correct axiom, that in striking a billiard ball across the table with the cue, "the angle of reflexion must be uniformly equal to the angle of incidence."

OBITUARY.

April 27.—At his residence, 19, Woodbridge Street, Clerkenwell, aged 56, Mr. William Smith, Print Colourer.

May 4.—At his residence, Enfield Highway, aged 63, Mr. William Dumbleton, of the firm of Dumbleton and Billing, Packers to the Trade, Ave Maria Lane.

May 5.—At his residence, Bexley Heath, aged 52, Mr. Samuel Chase, of the firm of Morgan, Chase, and Scott, publishers. The deceased was originally a draper at Bath, in which city he formed the acquaintance of Mr. Morgan, at that time with Messrs. Binns and Goodwin, and afterwards with the late David Bogue, of Fleet Street. About twelve years ago, the two friends com-menced business as printers. This, after a while, they gave up for publishing, and removed to Amen Corner, but finding their business increase, they removed to Ludgate Hill. Being of an ardent religious turn of mind, Mr. Chase threw himself with great vigour into the production and dissemination of religious literature, and became identified with the Revival movement. A monthly magazine styled the Revival was started, but this has since been merged in the Christian, a publication which has a large and influential circulation. Mr. Chase's death was sudden, but he had lived sufficiently long to form a very large circle of friends, who, to the number of nearly three hundred for the sufficient of the sufficient dred, followed him to the grave.

May 13.—At his residence, Greenhithe, aged 40, John Tillotson, author and editor. About twenty years ago Mr. Tillotson entered upon his first regular literary duties as assistant on the staff of the "Working Man's Friend," then published by the late Mr. John Cassell, at 335, Strand. Soon proving himself a clever and industrious compiler, he was successively employed upon the "Popular Educator," the "Family Paper," the "Quiver," and other of Mr. Cassell's publications. Subsequently he compiled several children's books for Mr. Allman, and for Messrs. Darton and Hodge; Mr. Allman, and for Messrs. Darton and Hodge; and then joined the literary staff organized by Mr. S. O. Beeton, who was at that time actively engaged in the production of the "Englishwoman's Domestic Magazine," and other periodicals. Mr. Tillotson was the "Odd Boy" of the "Boy's Own Magazine," the principal compiler of "Beeton's Bible Dictionary," and a prolific contributor to the Christmas Annuals, Almanacks, Biographical Dictionaries, &c., with which Mr. Beeton's name is so well known. On the trans-Beeton's name is so well known. On the transference of Mr. Beeton's publications to Messrs. Ward, Lock, and Tyler, his services were exclusively engaged, and, as Mr. Beeton gracefully acknowledges, "scarcely any of the enterprises which have been attempted by me in paper and print since I first knew him, have been begun or continued without my having received from him advice, encouragement, and assistance." He wrote a most interesting historical romance called "One of the Beggars," and was the author of several books for boys; but his chief work was "Pales-tine: Its Holy Sites and Sacred Story," the last proofs of which he revised a week or so before his death, but which he never saw as a complete bound volume. Though Mr. Tillotson laboured under the disability of personal deformity, from an acci-dent which befell him in childhood, he possessed a singularly cheerful, genial, and amiable disposition, and so many really great and noble qualities— was so manfully persevering and so courageously independent-that he made hosts of friends. writer, his style was pleasantly musical, and though entirely self-educated, he had a good knowledge of ancient and modern literature, and a remarkable acquaintance with Scripture history.

May 13.—In the Charterhouse, aged 68, Mr. George May, formerly of Evesham, Bookseller and Stationer.

May 22.—At Wood Green, aged 32, Mr. Henry S. Simpson, Proprietor of the Hornet.

May 27.—At Champion Hill, aged 55, Sir Joseph Causton, of Eastcheap, Stationer, Alderman and Sheriff of London.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

Tom Pippin's Wedding. A novel, by the author of "The Fight at Dame Europa's School." (London: Simpkin and Marshall; Salisbury: Brown and Co.)—Possibly, had Mr. Pullen not written his pamphlet, he would have found some little difficulty in finding a publisher for his novel. But here we have the novel, and we must confess that its perusal has caused us more genuine amusement than we have derived from any fiction, not professedly comic, for many a long day. matter of plot it is certainly not remarkable, but as an exposition of opinion it is—well, to put it mildly, let us say peculiar. The story itself is soon told. The Rev. Mr. Goggs, an evangelical preacher and a brute, who bullies his wife and thrashes his children, declines, from conscientious motives, to take in a letter on a Sunday; which, when he reads it on the Monday following, he discovers to be a summons to the death-bed of his rich old uncle. He goes hastily—in a cart with a dissenting minister who keeps a tavern—to the railway station, and then, to save the fare, rides over to his uncle's house with the undertaker. But he arrives too late. His uncle, incensed at his neglect, has died without altering his will, which leaves all his vast possessions to Harry Northcote, the only child of a navy captain on half-pay. Disappointed and saddened, Mr. Goggs throws up his living in favour of an endowed school, to which he is elected master. Here he is able to give his brutality full swing, and he brocks the boys about in good earnest. But he finds a worthy opponent in Tom Pippin, heir to Lord Appletree, an old, ugly, greedy, and ignorant peer. Incited by Pippin, the boys rebel, set a fierce dog on Goggs, who retreats ignomini-ously to a pig's-sty; and commit other atrocities, common, if we may believe Mr. Pullen, to all public schools. Lord Appletree, meanwhile, marries his cook, in order to spite Tom Pippin, because, being in love with a beautiful girl, he declines to marry Lady Maria, the dwarfed, deformed, and ugly daughter of the Duke of Dumplingshire, and so unite the properties. The cook brings an heir to Lord Appletree, who is frantic with delight, and again proposes to Pippin to marry the dwarf. Tom, who owes fifty thousand pounds, raised from money-lenders on the expectation of succeeding to his uncle's title and estate, at last consents, but basely runs away from the church, and leaves the poor little lady to weep. Lord Appletree's baby-heir is stolen out of its cradle at the castle by the moneylender, who forthwith takes it to the one policeman of the village; and that worthy official immediately consents, for a consideration, to hide the babe, and, under pretence of searching for its abductor, to take it and his own wife abroad. Finally, the babe is discovered at Lucerne, by Tom; and Lord Appletree, in consideration of that great service, pays Tom's debts, and brings him again into favour. But the poor mis-shapen dwarf dies broken-hearted, and so, we presume, leaves the faithless fellow to marry his first love. Mr. Goggs is turned out of the school, and falls into great poverty, his own obstinacy and illtemper alone preventing him from receiving twenty thousand pounds, which young Northcote, with unparalleled generosity, had determined on giving him; and so all ends happily! Thus much for the plot: for the opinions, it is impossible for us to give more than the merest taste of them. Mr. Pullen considers all schools (except those at Salisbury, as he especially informs us in a footnote) to be mere starvation-traps and boy-farms, where the scholars "are at the mercy of a brute who hates them," and of a woman who starves them; though neither the brutality nor the starvation prevents the boys from indulging in playground fights and bedroom frolics. Mr. Pullen has also a poor opinion of the young ladies of the period; for he tells us that they are "by no means nice;" that "there are many things about them that will not bear looking into at all;" that "their had bear looking into at all;" that "their laundresses scarcely divide their fair share of profits with their dressmakers;" and that "it would be well if half the time spent each morning in the elaborate disfigurement of the backs of their heads had been employed in the refreshing appli-cation of soap and water."! Of the ruling class he says, "For one really good-looking aristocrat, you meet with half a dozen whose appearance is, to say the least of it, so absolutely common-place, that if you did not see all the world making way for them, hat in hand, you would scarcely suppose them to be gentlemen." In his best days "Lord Appletree might have driven an omnibus without seeming one bit above his work; and now that he was old and wrinkled, you would have thought it the most natural thing in the world if he had accosted you at the corner of Farringdon Street with a broom!" And as to manner, the author is quite original. He introduces an acting charade, thirty pages long, and gives a reason for so doing "not because it has the slightest merits of its own, but because it will help to fill up my book." For the same reason, we presume, he places a copy of verses, on subjects altogether foreign to the story, between each chapter: the quality of which verses may be judged from a single stanza from a poem called "Early Morning":—

"While matrons snooze a-bed, a-bed, By sluggish dreams benighted, "Tis then that lovers' words are said, And lovers' vows are plighted."

Without doubt this is, if not the most remarkable, certainly the most original novel of the day.

Little Men: Life at Plumfield with Yo's Boys. By Louisa M. Alcott. (Low, Son, and Marston.)

"'Dear Jo," wrote an old protégé of Mr. and Mrs. Bhaer's, "here is a case after your own heart. This poor lad is an orphan, sick and friendless. He has been a street musician... Give him a I think there is something in him. trial." Readers of "Little Women" will re-member Jo and his model school at Plumfield, where poor children are taught, not only how to read and to write, but how to amuse and humanize themselves. In this establishment, where each boy has a little garden of his own, a share in a menagerie of small pets, and various privileges not to be found in ordinary schools, poor Nat Elake soon makes himself quite at home; and in the course of time becomes a great favourite with Aunt Jo and her family of odd boys. Very delightful and very natural is the way in which the social characteristics of these boys is described. We see them at school, at church, in the garden, in the fields-learning, praying, working, playing but always improving from rude, uncared-for waifs into useful and respectable members of society. The object of the book is evidently not so much to show what is, but what might be, done in school-reformatories, orphan asylums, &c.; and though written especially for American readers, all the suggestions are applicable to parents, guardians, and teachers on this side the Atlantic; and if they would just try the experiment supposed to be carried out successfully at Plumfield, they might, after a while, exclaim with motherly Mrs jo-"Dear me! if men and women would only trust, understand, and help one another as my children do, what a capital place the world would be!" For—as Miss Alcott prettily puts it—"love is a flower that grows in any soil, works its sweet miracles undaunted by autumn frost or winter snow, blooming fair and fragrant all the year, and blessing those who give and those who receive."

"Little Men" is a book that may well be recommended for adoption by our recently-formed School Boards, as one of the very few stories about children that children can really understand and admire, and that adults can read with both Little Sunshine's Holiday. By the author of John Halifax, Gentleman." (Low, Son, and Marston.)—It is questionable whether children ike to read about children. The principle adopted in the cheap periodicals, of introducing the arisforacy into tales circulating in the poorest and less aristocratic of reading circles would, on the contrary, seem most likely to please, from very force of contrast and novelty. some of contrast and novelty. But as a book about children, for the perusal of adults, "Little Sunshine" is admirable. No mother but will recognize in the child's portrait some of the winning ways and pleasant characteristics of her own little ones, and no person who is fond of children but will acknowledge that the portrait is vivid and life-like. "Little Sunshine" is a rather pretty child with a shock of yellow hair, which she is proud of showing as "my curls." And she has a number of wonderfully attractive ways, not among the least of which is hard fatherly assessment among the least of which is her fretfully passion-ite style of saying "I will," and her thoroughly effective manner of coming round again with the expression, "Sunny is quite good now." She is taken by her adopted mother and father into Scotand does during the month make up the entire sum and substance of the book, the charm of which can only be discovered on perusal; for it consists entirely in the writer's manner, and cannot be described. But we may say that it is attempted by Frölich, who is by no means so haven in delivering other people's means so happy in delineating other people's children as he is in picturing his own; and with a portrait of "Little Sunshine" and her two friends from about the sunshine of frontispiece if not the whole truth is the and rignette title. This story, which is stated to be a true account, if not the whole truth, is the first of a series of "girls' books" to be written, edited, or translated by the author of "John India," by Georgiana M. Craik, to be followed by others, from the pens of Madame de Witt, Agnes Harrison, and Frances Martin.

Policeman Y: His Ballads on War and the Milingtary. With Illustrations by John Edward Soden. (J. C. Hotten.) Sensation Novels Condensed.

(J. C. Hotten.) By Bret Harte.

Killed at Saarbruck: An Englishman's Adventures during the War. Narrated by Edward Legge, Special Corespondent. (J. C. Hotten.) Mr. John Camden Hotten is certainly the most iginal publisher of the day. Whatever be the original publisher of the day. question that most engages public attention, he is sure to produce a volume, or a pamphlet, or a porm apropos to the occasion. To take the lastnamed book first, we have in Mr. Legge's narrative of the Franco-Prussian war, from the battle of Saarbruck to the siege of Paris, written with that ease, perspicuousness, and regard for details or which special correspondents are so honourably temarkable. The explanation of the title is that, Mr. Legge's return to England, he found in a newspaper an account of his own death-"shot through the head at Saarbrucken."

Bret Harte's "Sensation Novels Condensed" is a most capital book; for, in an hour's reading, we get Miss Braddon, Mrs. Henry Wood, Charles Lever, Lord Lytton, Captain Marryat, Charles Dickens, George Augustus Sala, Wilkie Collins, Victor Hugo, and other popular novelists, in the essence,—their stories boiled down, all in the essence,—their their verbiage skimmed off, and only their peculiarities of style and plot remaining. The humour of these novelettes is seasoned, here and there, by a slight dash of satire, which renders the literary dish very enjoyable.

The "Ballads of Policeman Y" are really funny, and form a fitting pendant to the opinions expressed by Thackeray's Policeman X, and doubtless that officer would agree with his brother constable in his conclusions about war-in his conclusions about wai—

"Just to sum up what I've say'd here,
Settle all disputes by law.
Though the lawyers makes you pay dear,
It's as cheap again as war.
Therefore my adwice o' course is,
Make all war and fightin' cease;
Put down all the standin' forces.
Only keep up the Perlecce!" Only keep up the Perleece!

The author discourses upon his special topic in just the manner we should imagine would be adopted by a self-sufficient, half-educated, bumpto stop a street row, kiss a nursery-maid, get supper with a cook, or take a bribe from a "swell." As Y says:—

"Bar some losses we get no booty
When we catch gents up to freaks,
They don't fear excess of dooty
Bringin' em afore the beaks.
Sojers' brav'ry ain't all story,
'Tisn't we as contradicks;
Rut them soiers gets the glory,

But them sojers gets the glory,
Whilst the P'leece gets all the kicks!" The ballads are so provokingly well illustrated by Mr. Soden-a name new to us-that we should be glad to find the illustrator on some one of our comic periodicals, which, with a single exception, are, to put it mildly, somewhat dreary.

My Beautiful Home. By Charles Bruce. The Story of a Moss Rose. By Charles Bruce. Alfred and his Mother. By Katherine E. May.

(Edinburgh: W. P. Nimmo.)—Tales about the sea and ships, storms, and enchanted islands, the mystery of the unknown north, and the glories of the tropics, must always possess great attractions for the young. Well, here we have just such a tale, with Old Growler—seventy years old, weather-beaten, stiff in the joints, long hair white as snow, face marked and motiled like a mineral state of these bright which a pair of these bright. winter apple, and lit with a pair of keen bright eyes; Old Growler, every inch a sailor, and with a capacity unbounded for the spinning of yarns; Old Growler, whom everybody loves, especially the boys and girls—not only telling his experiences, but acting the brave old hero. What can be more enticing? And what treasure the sea brought to old Growler, and how the treasure grew and prospered, and became the delight of his life, let young readers discover for themselves in "My Beautiful Home."

The next is a dainty little story for girls and boys, showing the beauty of truth and honesty, as exhibited in the experiences of two poor children in the crowded streets of a great city. It is needless to tell how a moss rose, given by a school-girl to a little ragged orphan, became the instrument of lasting good, years and years after the flower itself had faded and crumbled into dust; the manner in which the several incidents are made to hang upon the simple gift is really natural and very interesting.

Alfred is a little fellow who, in the midst of poverty and evil surroundings, is faithful, honest, and cheerful, though his father is a worthless drunkard, his companions are idle, dissipated, and vile, and the boy himself is exposed to all the mean temptations of the wretched neighbourhood in which he lives. As a tale of common, everyday life, with a purpose, "Alfred and his Mother" is well worth reading. Added is an allegory called "The Crown of Thorns," written in a very simple and pleasing style. These three books belong to a series of two-shilling volumes especially prepared for juvenile readers, well printed on toned paper, capitally illustrated with full-page engravings, and attractively bound. Historical Narratives, from the Russian. By H.

C. Romanoff, (Rivingtons.)—Six historical sketches, three by Shoubrinsky, and three by Andreeff, are contained in this volume; and from them we get a very lively and entertaining account of Russian manners and customs during the reigns of Peter the Great and the Emperor Paul. The notice of the Court Jesters is especially amusing. In ancient times the jester had, we are told, no great wit or readiness; it was sufficient if he were ugly, stupid, or had an impediment in his speech; but in the time of Peter, drollery, wit, sarcasm, and a certain knowledge of the world were indispensable in the Court Fool. Hence many clever knaves found profitable employment at Court, especially when Peter instituted the Extravagant Council, which consisted mainly of interpreters, dwarfs, and solemn satirists, with the Czar himself as protodeacon. Very rude and noisy were their meetings; sham weddings, and their accompanying extravagances being common Sometimes Peter would appear in amusement. masquerade, beating a drum and drinking with all who pledged him, till the feast became an orgie, and princes, princesses, cardinals, nobles, courtiers, merchants, and peasants, reeled, and rolled, and danced, and sang, in all the abandon of royal drunkenness! In all the stories we have similar revelations of coarse behaviour and very free manners: as how should it well be otherwise when stable-boys became dukes, and tavern waitresses were made kings' mistresses! In preparing these narratives for English readers, Mr. Romanoff, already known as the author of "Sketches of the Rites and Customs of the Russian Church," has preserved all the characteristic touches of the original authors without their ramblings and other inconsequent repetitions.

Never Forgotten: or, The Home of the Lost Child. By Cecilia Mary Cadell. (Burns and Oates.)—What are we to do with girls of good character, placed in circumstances of danger and temptation? This question, often asked by philanthropists and others familiar with the lives of the poor and the lower-middle classes, has been practically answered by the Catholic Institution of the Good Pastor, which possesses houses of refuge in England and on the Continent, managed by ladies warmly devoted to the work. This story is intended to show how the charity is conducted, and how by its means girls may be saved from sin and misery. As a story, it is interesting and well-written; and as an introduction of the Institution to the notice of Protestant English readers, it will certainly not be without influence and value; the more especially as the profits derived from its sale are intended as a free gift to the order of the Bon Pasteur.

An Egyptian Princess. By George Ebers.
From the German, by Eleanor Grove. 2 vols.
(Leipzig: Tauchnitz; London: Low.) This is a tale of unusual character. The personages who

treatment, all differ from novels to which we are ordinarily accustomed. In plot—for we have love and ambition and other human passions common to all time—there is nothing very striking, nor are the incidents very startling; but the work has compensatory merits. It is a story of ancient Egyptian life, in which the author has clothed the results of profound scholarship in imaginative form. It at once interests the reader of tales, and instructs and suggests thought to students of history. Dr. Ebers has prefixed a notice to this, the second, edition, in which he explains all that is necessary to be known as to the era in which the story is laid; and at the end of each volume there are notes verifying the text in particulars relating to the right representation of manners, habits, dress, decoration, food, &c. Miss Grove's translation is smooth and literal.

The Gray House on the Hill. By the Hon.
Mrs. Greene. (Nelson.)—"The Gray House on the Hill" was a workhouse. It was very large, and, "even in the brightest part of the day, when the sun was shining on the trees and the green corn-fields beyond, its walls looked gray and wintry, and its slates as glassy as if the rain had just fallen." In this house the hero of the tale, Maurice Browne, spent the first week after his mother's death, and the relation which others have to it gives name to the work, which is well written, and exhibits in the author true delicacy of feeling and the ability to turn it to literary account.

Napoleon's Christening Cake! By Barney
